Jean Antoine Houdon (1740–1828) French sculptor. b. March 20, 1740 in Versailles. He studied art under Michel Ange Slodtz, and later under Pigale. While in the Ecole des Beaux Arts, at the age of 19, he took the first prize for sculpture, which involved a residence in Italy. He spent ten years in Rome at a period when the excavations of Herculaneum and Pompeii gave a new impulse to art. Here he finished the colossal statue of St. Bruno, of which Pope Clement XIV said, "He would speak, if the rule of his order did not prescribe silence." Returning to Paris, he executed many masterpieces in the next 15 years which placed him in the front rank of French sculptors, and earned his admission into the academy. In 1785 he accompanied Benjamin Franklin to the U.S. to prepare a model for the statue of George Washington, which had been ordered by the state of Virginia. He spent two weeks at Mount Vernon. The statue bears Houdon's legend "Fait par Houdon, citoyen Francais, 1788." It is now in the capitol at Richmond, Va., and there is a replica in the American Hall of Fame. Many personal friends of Washington stated that it was the best representation of him ever made. Among Houdon's later works were busts of Napoleon and Josephine, and the noted statue of Cicero in the palace of Luxembourg. After the execution of the latter work he lost his memory and was compelled to give up his profession. His bust, Voltaire Assis, is in the foyer of the Theatre Francais, Paris, and is considered one of the finest works of its kind in modern art. Among his other portrait busts are Catherine II, Turgot, Moliere, Rousseau, Buffon, d'Alembert, Franklin, Lafayette, Louis XVI, and Mirabeau. A member of the famous Lodge of the Nine Sisters at Paris, his name appears in its list of members in 1779, 1783, 1784, and 1806. Sam Houston (1793–1863) American patriot and political leader who was governor of Tennessee (1827–29) ; president of the Republic of Texas (1836), and governor of Texas (1861). b. in Rockbridge Co., Va., March 2, 1793. At the death of his father, his family moved to Tenn. near the Cherokee territory and he spent his early years with the Indians, being adopted by one of them. After serving in the 39th Infantry from July, 1813 to May, 1818, he resigned and studied law at Nashville, being admitted to the bar in a few months, and practiced at Lebanon. He was elected to congress in 1823 and 1825, and in his last year fought a duel with Gen. White, whom he wounded. He was elected governor of Tenn. in 1827. He fell into disfavor in 1829, partially due to a mysterious marriage that lasted only a few weeks. Leaving the state, he made his way up the Arkansas to the mouth of the Illinois, where he lived for three years with his former Cherokee father-by-adoption. In 1832 he went to Texas where he was a member of the first convention, April 1, 1833, and was elected general of the militia. On March 2, 1836 he was a member of the convention that declared absolute independence and named him commander-in-chief of the armed forces. Following the slaughters at the Alamo and Goliad, Houston defeated the Mexicans at San Jacinto and took Santa Anna prisoner. He was elected first president of the Republic of Texas, Oct. 22, 1836, and even though his candidacy was announced only twelve days previously, he received 4,374 of the total 5,104 votes. His term expired Dec. 12, 1838. He served again as president from Dec. 12, 1841 to Dec. 9, 1844. He labored for the admission of Texas to the Union, which was accomplished Dec. 29, 1845; and in March, 1846 he was elected to the U.S. senate, serving until 1859. He was governor of Texas from 1859 to 1861, but took no part in public affairs after that date. He received his degrees in Cumberland Lodge No. 8, Nashville, Tenn., April 19, June 20, and July 22, 1817. He dimitted from Cumberland Lodge, Nov. 20, 1817, and reaffiliated June 21, 1821. It is thought that during this period he was a charter member of Nashville Lodge No. 37. He served as junior warden, and in 1824 attended grand lodge as a past master. In one place he is recorded as having dimitted from Cumberland Lodge, Jan. 20, 1831; however, he is listed in the proceedings of 1828 (p. 236) as suspended for unmasonic conduct! He affiliated with Holland Lodge No. 36 of La. in 1837, and this became Holland Lodge No. 1 of Texas. Ori Dec. 20, 1837 he presided over the meeting which established the Grand Lodge of Texas. He dimitted from Holland Lodge July 14, 1842, and was next reported as a member of Forest Lodge No. 19, Huntsville, Texas, in 1851. He was undoubtedly a Royal Arch Mason, for he was knighted in Washington Commandery No. 1, Washington D.C., Feb. 23, 1853. He is recorded as a visitor to the Grand Lodge of Kentucky in 1825 and the Grand Lodge of Alabama, Dec. 6, 1849. He was present at the dedication of Washington-Centennial Lodge No. 14, Washington, D.C. on Jan. 13, 1853. d. July 1, 1863.

He joined the Continental Army early in the Revolution, and served under Gen. Hugh Mercer, q.v., at the Battle of White Plains (Oct. 28, 1776), as a captain. He was then a major in the 4th Maryland regiment, and was at Germantown and Monmouth. In 1780 as a lieutenant-colonel of the 5th Maryland Regiment, he fought at Camden under Gen. Horatio Gates, q.v., and later in the year, joined the army under Gen. Nathanael Greene, q.v. He saw hand-to-hand fighting in the Battle of Cowpens, Guilford Courthouse, and Eutaw Springs, being severely wounded in the latter, leading the final charge after his command was reduced to 30 men. In 1796 he declined a seat in Washington's cabinet. In anticipation of a war with France in 1798, Washington made him one of his major generals. He was a candidate for vice president in 1816. He married Margaret Chew, daughter of Chief Justice Chew. His six sons were Masons. Although no records remain, it is thought that

John E. Howard was a member of. Army Lodge No. 27 of the Maryland Line, which asked for a charter, April 27, 1780, naming Gen. Mordecai Gist, q.v., as charter master. Schultz, in his History of Freemasonry in Maryland (1884) states that he had talked with older Masons who remembered Howard as a Freemason, and that his portrait at one time hung in a lodge room of the Baltimore Temple. d. In Aug., 1775 he was appointed colonel of the 2nd N.C. regiment by the colonial congress. With his troops, he drove the loyal governor, Lord Dunmore, from Virginia and was promoted to brigadier general. He joined Henry Lee in Virginia with his regiment in March, 1776. He defended the city of Charleston with his troops, and soon succeeded Gen. James Moore as chief in command of the southern department. In Oct., 1777 he was commissioned major general, and led an expedition against Fla., which ended in disaster, and he was forced to return to Savannah, Ga., but lost that city to the British. For this loss, he was court-martialed, but acquitted. When General Christopher Gadsden publicly criticized him, he challenged the latter to a duel. Gadsden fired into the air and Howe's ball grazed Gadsden's ear (Aug. 13, 1778) at Cannonsburg. They were then reconciled. Major John Andre, the famous British spy, who was hanged by the colonial forces, commemorated the affair with a humorous poem of 18 stanzas. Howe was relieved of the southern department and ordered to join Washington on the Hudson. The lodges in Tokyo and vicinity, with brethren from varying racial backgrounds are a splendid example of the way in which our Order can develop and exemplify its magnificent principles in an atmosphere of freedom and mutual understanding." Member of Oxford Lodge No. 67, Oxford, Ohio, receiving degrees on Nov. 9, 1916, April 16, 1928 and June 4, 1928.

William Hull (1753–1825) Brigadier General of War of 1812, and officer of American Revolution. b. June 24, 1753 in Derby, Conn. Was graduated from Yale, studied law, and practiced at Litchfield after admission to the bar in 1775. After the news of the Battle of Lexington reached his town, a company was formed under his charge and he joined Washington at Cambridge as part of Webb's Conn. regiment. He was lieutenant colonel in 1779, and army inspector under Baron Von Steuben, q.v. He fought in the battles of White Plains, Trenton, Princeton, Stillwater, Saratoga, Fort Stanwix, Monmouth, and

Stony Point, receiving the thanks of both Washington and congress. Following the war, he became a major general of the 3rd Mass. militia, and a state senator. In 1805 he was appointed by Jefferson as governor of the Michigan Territory, holding that office until 1812, when he was named to command the northwestern army. In attempting to defend Detroit, he failed to receive support or supplies, and when he was forced to surrender that place, the country needed a scape-goat—which turned out to be Hull. Strangely enough, the two officers who effected his downfall were brother Masons, Col. Lewis Cass, q.v., and Gen. Henry Dearborn, q.v. Cass wrote a letter, made public, that criticized the actions of Hull (although his own actions indicated that he supported Hull's decisions). Hull was brought to trial, with Gen. Dearborn as president of the courtmartial. Dearborn, instead of cooperating with Hull in the invasion of Canada, had signed the armistice without Hull's knowledge, which allowed the British troops to be sent against Detroit. Hull was found guilty of cowardice, sentenced to be shot, and then told to go home to Newton, Mass. and wait for the execution of the sentence—which never came! Dearborn, incidentally, was relieved of his Northwest command "for political reasons" shortly thereafter. Hull was a member of Washington Lodge No. 10; its charter was granted Oct. 6, 1779, and it was a traveling lodge located at West Point. He must have held previous membership, for he is mentioned as being present at St. John's Day celebration of American Union Lodge at West Point, June 24, 1779, almost four months before Washington Lodge was chartered. He was junior warden of Washington Lodge in 1779. He became first master of Meridian Lodge, Natick, Mass., in 1797. d. Nov. 29, 1825.

William E. Hull (1866–1942) U.S. Congressman, 68th through 72nd Congresses (1922–33) from Ill. b. Jan. 13, 1866 at Lewiston, Ill. Member of Palestine Lodge No. 79, Duluth, Baron Karl Gotthelf von Hund Minn., withdrawing on Jan. 18, 1926 with no further record in d. May 8, 1927.

Baron Karl Gotthelf von Hund (1722–1776) A German nobleman, and hereditary landed proprietor in the Lausitz, who devoted his life to the establishment of the Rite of Strict Observance. b. Sept. 11, 1722 in Oberlausitz, Germany. The strict observance system pledged unquestioned obedience to an unknown superior, and was based on the fiction that the Templar secrets had survived the suppression of the order in 1312, when after the execution of Jacques de Molay, eight high-ranking knights escaped to Scotland and reestablished the order. In the latter half of the 18th century the order swept Europe. Himself a man of integrity, Von Hund's faith in the existence of an unknown grand master (he was convinced that it was Charles Edward, the Young Pretender), made him the prey of such imposters as Johnson. In an effort to reconcile the differences between Von Hund's rite and another strict observance rite under Von Starck (who contended only Roman Catholics could be members), a congress was held in 1774, and Von Hund appears to have been divested of much of his authority, as the grand-mastership was conferred on Frederick, duke of Brunswick, q.v. When the clerical branch withdrew and formed an independent order, the strict observance lodges thence forward called themselves the United German Lodges. Authorities disagree on the initiation dates and places of Von Hund. Mackey says he received the first and second degrees, March 20, 1742, in the Lodge of the Three Thistles at Frankfort on the Main. Other sources say it was in 1741, at Ghent, Belgium. Hund was made a Knight Templar in 1743, probably in Paris. In 1749, he erected at his own expense, a lodge on his estates at Kittlitz, near Lobau, to which he gave the name of The Three Pillars. At the same time he built a Protestant church, the cornerstone of which was laid by the brethren with Masonic ceremonies. d. Nov. 8, 1776.

Charles C. Hunt (1866–1948) Masonic writer. b. Nov. 9, 1866 in Cleveland, Ohio. Graduate of Grinnell Coll. (Ia.). Between 1895 and 1917, he held many public offices. He was raised in Lafayette Lodge No. 52, Montezuma, Ia., July 24, 1900. He was grand secretary and grand librarian of the Grand Lodge of Iowa from 1924–45, and was an honorary past grand master of that jurisdiction. He wrote numerous Masonic articles including Masonic Symbolism; Landmarks of Freemasonry, and co-author of the 2-volume History of the Cryptic Rite. d. July 24, 1948.

George W. P. Hunt (1859–1934) First Governor of Arizona, 1911–19, and again 1923–28, and 1931–33. b. Nov. 1, 1859 at Huntsville, Mo. He received only eight years of formal schooling. He was a rancher on the Salt River of Arizona from 1890–1900. He became connected with the Old Dominion Commercial Co. in 1890, served as its secretary, and was president from 1900. Hunt served two terms in the lower house, and five in the upper of the state legislature, and was president of the constitutional convention of 1910. He was an exponent of prison reform and president of the Anti-Capital Punishment League. In 1920–21 he was U.S. envoy and minister to Siam. He was made a Mason, Nov. 18, 1897, in White Mountain Lodge No. 3, Globe, Ariz.; was a Knight Templar, and member of El Zaribah Shrine Temple of Phoenix. d. Dec. 24, 1934.

Lester C. Hunt (1892–1954) U.S. Senator and Governor of Wyoming. b. July 8, 1892 in Isabel, Ill. Received dental degree from St. Louis U. in 1917, and was a dentist in Lander, Wyo. from that date until 1934. He was secretary of state of Wyo. from 1935–43, and governor from 1943–49. He served his state as U.S. senator from 1949 until his death. In 1948–49 he was chairman of the governors' conference. In WWI he was an officer in the Dental Corps of the Army. From 1924–28 he was president of the Wyo. State Board of Dental Examiners. Hunt designed Wyoming's distinctive "bucking horse" license plate for automobiles in 1936. Augustin de Iturbide (1783–1824) Soldier and Emperor of Mexico. Said to have been raised in a Mexico City lodge. He commanded the Spanish Army against Vincente Guerrero in 1820, and later joined Guerrero, q.v., in setting up the Plan of Iguala in 1821. Together, they forced the Spanish government to capitulate in the Treaty of Cordoba, which assured Mexican independence. The victory went to Iturbide's head, and he set himself up as Emperor Augustin I from 1822–23. However, his harsh measures of repression led to revolution by Santa Anna, q.v., and Guerrero, q.v., and he abdicated, March 19, 1823, and exiled himself in Europe. He returned and was captured and shot, July 19, 1824.

Alfred Iverson (1798–1873) U.S. Senator from Georgia, 1855–1861. b. Dec. 3, 1798 in Burke Co., Ga. He was graduated from Princeton in 1820, studied law, and practiced in Columbus, Ga. J

Daniel C. Jackling (1869–1956) Founder of the Utah Copper Co., the largest single producer of copper in the world. b. Aug. 14, 1869 at Appleton City, Mo. He was orphaned at the age of two, when his parents were killed in an accident. He was graduated from the Missouri School of Mines at Rolla, Mo. in 1892, and with a borrowed $200, went to Cripple Creek, Colo. and secured a job as a metallurgist. He founded the Utah Copper Co. in 1903, with four others. It later became part of Kennecott Copper Co. Jackling at one time refused the presidency of this firm. Considered a mining genius, he developed a process for extracting copper from low grade ore, and this process now accounts for more than 60% of the world's production. A heroic statue of Tackling was unveiled Aug. 14, 1954, in the Utah State Capitol. He was master of Rocky Mountain Lodge No. 11, Tooele, Utah, in 1899; was a life member of Utah Chapter No. 1, R.A.M. of Salt Lake City, and was knighted in Utah Commandery No. 1, K.T., July 1, 1954, and made a life member. He gave the Grand Chapter of Utah a set of 14 jewels which cost $1400. d. March 13, 1956.

Allan Jackson Vice President of Standard Oil Co. of Indiana. b. July, 1876 in Marseilles, Ill. He began with Standard Oil as a secretary in the Chicago office in 1896, and was with the company 45 years before retirement in 1941. He was a member of the board and vice president in charge of sales in 14 states. Member of Marseilles Lodge No. 417, Marseilles, Ill., Knight Templar; 32° AASR (NJ) in Chicago in April 1900; and 33°, 1955; Shriner.

Andrew Jackson (1767–1845) Seventh President of the United States. b. March 15, 1767 in Washaw settlement between North and South Car. He was admitted to the bar in Salisbury, N.C. in 1787, and, the following year, migrated westward to Nashville, Tenn. Here he became a U.S. congressman (1796–97); U.S. senator (1797–98); judge of the Tenn. supreme court (1798–1804) ; and major general of Tenn. militia (1802). He defeated the Creek Indians at the Battle of Horseshoe Bend in 1814, and was made major general of U.S. Army and assigned to defend New Orleans in the War of 1812. His defense of that city made him a national hero. He added to his fame by operations against the Seminole Indians in 1818, and involved the federal government by pursuing Indians into Spanish territory, and hanging two English troublemakers. He was governor of Florida Territory in 1821, and again U.S. senator in 1823–25. His first presidential race in 1824 was unsuccessful, but he was elected in 1828, and reelected in 1832. Under his administration the spoils system was introduced, the national debt paid off, the United States Bank overthrown, and the Peggy O'Neale scandal broke up his cabinet. There is doubt as to when and where he received his degrees. An article in The Builder in 1925 states: "The claim of Greeneville Lodge No. 3 of Tenn. (formerly No. 43 of N.C.) seems to be the most weighty. An original transcript of the lodge record for Sept. 5, 1801 shows that he (Jackson) was a member at that time." W. L. Boydon wrote in the New Age in Aug. 1920: "The generally accepted belief is that he was made a Mason in Philanthropic Lodge No. 12 at Clover Bottom, Davidson Co., Tenn." Bell, in his Famous Masons states: "Jackson was a member of Harmony Lodge No. 1 (formerly St. Tammany Lodge No. 29 of N.C.) Nashville, as early as 1800, but the date of receiving the degrees has not been learned. He was present at the first meeting of Tennessee Lodge No. 2, Knoxville, March 24, 1800. Charles Comstock, PGM of Tenn. and historian, believes that he was a member of Harmony Lodge, and records a visit by him to the initial meeting of Polk Lodge, U.D., Knoxville (dispensation granted Jan. 15, 1800) by "Andrew Jackson of Harmony Lodge of Nashville." In 1808 Harmony Lodge No. 1 lost its charter, and here all record of Jackson's Masonic affiliation ceases until 1822. He evidently kept in good standing by paying his dues to the grand lodge, as was then permitted. The proceedings of 1822 credit him with being a past master, but no record has been found of his mastership. He was elected grand master of the Grand Lodge of Tennessee, Oct. 7, 1822, and again in 1823, serving until Oct., 1824. He was elected an honorary member of Federal Lodge No. 1, Washington, D.C., Jan. 4, 1830, and of Jackson Lodge No. 1, Tallahassee, Fla. as well as the Grand Lodge of Florida (Jan. 15, 1833). He was a Royal Arch Mason, as he served the Grand Chapter of Tennessee as deputy grand high priest at its institution, April 3, 1826, but no record exists of his affiliation with any chapter. As was the custom at the time, the Royal Arch degree was probably conferred by a blue lodge. He contributed $35.00 in 1818 to the erection of a Masonic temple in Nashville; requested two lodges to perform funeral services; introduced Lafayette to the Grand Lodge of Tennessee in 1825; while president, assisted Washington's mother lodge to lay a cornerstone of a monument to Washington's mother in Fredericksburg, Va. (May 6, 1833); assisted in the Masonic laying of the cornerstone of Jackson City (across the river from Washington, D.C.) on Jan. 11, 1836; attended the Grand Lodge of Tennessee in 1839; and the same year visited Cumberland Chapter No. 1 of Nashville to assist in the installation of officers. d. June 8, 1845.

Thomas J. “Stonewall” Jackson (1824–1863) Confederate Major General of Civil War who gained the sobriquet “Stonewall” by his stand at Bull Run. b. Jan. 21, 1824 at Clarksburg, W.Va. Was graduated from U.S. Military Academy in 1846. He served in the Mexican War but resigned from the army in 1852. He joined the Confederate service at the outbreak of the Civil War, and was made brigadier general in 1861, and major general later in the same year. He led the Confederates in the brilliant Shenandoah Valley campaign in 1862, and was mortally wounded by accidental fire from his own troops after routing the Federal right wing at Chancellors-vile, on May 2. d. May 10, 1863. There is no proof as to his Masonic membership, but many details of his life strongly suggest his membership. His father and other near relatives were active members and officers of the Clarksburg, W.Va. lodge, and his father is thought to have been a past master. At the elder Jackson's death (Jonathan), his family was left in poor circumstances and the lodge contributed to their relief, and provided them with a 3-room house at Clarksburg. Stonewall thus had Masonic antecedents, and became a beneficiary of the Craft at the age of two. When he was a faculty member at the Virginia Military Institute at Lexington, Va. he wrote his sister, Laura Jackson Arnold in 1853, and 1854, concerning a Masonic dependent for whom he hoped to secure aid from the lodge at Staunton. When the local lodge could not help, he wrote his sister that he would be in Richmond "this winter and bring her case before the grand lodge of the state." In Simon Wolf's Presidents I Have Known the author tells of seeing Jackson secure food for General Pope's prisoners. Upon their meeting, he gave Jackson the sign of distress, which the general answered, and saw that he was safely across the Union lines. If a Mason, he was probably a member of a traveling military lodge while in the Mexican War.

William H. Jackson (1843–1942) Pioneer photographer, artist and explorer. b. April 4, 1843 at Keeseville, N.Y. He was educated in the public schools of N.Y. and Pa. He began as a photographer in Troy, N.Y. (1858), and later Rutland and

In WWII he was commanding general of Camp Stewart, Ga.; Anti-aircraft of Eastern defense command; and Saipan. Mason.

Abraham Jarvis (1739–1813) Protestant Episcopal Bishop of Connecticut, 1797–1813. b. May 5, 1739 in Norwalk, Conn. He was graduated from Yale in 1761, and became a lay-reader in Middletown, Conn., while studying theology. He was ordained priest in England, Feb. 19, 1764, by the Bishop of Carlisle. This was made possible by the aid of his parishioners, in 1763, who levied a tax on themselves to send him to England to take the "orders." He became rector in 1762, and second bishop of Conn. in 1797. At the beginning of the Revolution he was torn between his allegiance to the English church and the Colonial cause, as he held that the Declaration of Independence did not dissolve the ecclesiastical obligations of his church to the parent church in England. He presided over a church convention, July 23, 1776, in Conn., which resolved to suspend all public worship because it would be unsafe to continue the reading of the entire liturgy. He was raised in St. John's Lodge No. 2 of Middletown, Conn., Dec. 17, 1783, and received his mark master degree in the mark lodge of St. John's Lodge (first in the U.S.), July 3, 1789. His "mark" was a pulpit. He served as grand chaplain of the Grand Lodge of Connecticut. d. May 3, 1813.

John Jay (1745–1829) First Chief Justice of U.S. Supreme Court, 1789–95. b. Dec. 12, 1745 in New York City. Considered one of the prime builders of the Revolutionary period, he was a member of the Continental Congress in 1774–79, and was its president in the latter two years. In 1779 he was American minister to Spain, and in 1782 was called to Paris by Franklin to negotiate peace with England. He was U.S. secretary of foreign affairs, 1784–89, and joined with Hamilton and Madison in writing the Federalist, explaining the new constitution. In 1794–95 he negotiated “Jay’s Treaty” with England, settling outstanding disputes. In 1795–1801 he was governor of New York. There is no proof that he was a Freemason, although many Masonic journals and orators of past years have referred to him as such. On April 21, 1779 he wrote the following letter to Washington that has Masonic significance: “The dissolution of our governments threw us into a political chaos. Time, Wisdom and Perseverance will reduce it into Form, and give it Strength, Order and Harmony. In this work you are (in the style of your professions) a Master Builder, and God grant that you may long continue a Free and Accepted one.”

Member of Hella Shrine Temple and Hi-Noon Club of Dallas.

Joseph Jefferson (1829–1905) American actor, considered to be best comedian of his time. b. Feb. 20, 1829, the fourth generation of actors, and the third to bear the name “Joseph.” (His son, an actor of the same name, q.v., was also a Mason.) His first stage appearance was as a child in Pizarro at the age of three. After his father’s death, he joined a party of strolling players who played through Texas, and followed the U.S. Army into Mexico. Always known as a good stock actor, his laurels were first earned as Asa Trenchard in Our American Cousin in 1858, at Laura Keane’s Theatre, N.Y. Other notable parts in which he appeared were: Newman Noggs in Nicholas Nickleby; Caleb Plummer in Cricket on the Hearth; Dr. Pangloss in The Heir at Law; Bob Acres in The Rivals; and Dr. 011apod in Poor Gentleman. His greatest success was in Rip Van Winkle, playing the leading role in every important city in the U.S., England, and Australia. As a painter he met with fair success, and as an author he wrote his autobiography, and A Reply to Ignatius Donnelly on the Shakespeare–Bacon Argument. He received his degrees in Concordia Lodge No. 13, Baltimore, Md. in April 1857 (references disagree as to dates), and became an honorary life member of the same. He is also famous for making "The Little Church Around the Corner" in N.Y. the actor's church. d. March 23, 1905.

Joseph Jefferson (1869–1919) American actor. b. July 6, 1869 in New York City, the fifth generation of actors and the fourth generation to bear the name "Joseph." His father, q.v., of the same name, was also a Thomas Jefferson Mason. His mother was Sarah A. Warren, second wife of his father. He was educated in the Columbia Grammar School; Challie Institute, N.Y.; English Grammar School, London; and Upson Seminary, Conn. His first appearance on the stage was at Denver in 1885, with his father in Rip Van Winkle as a supernumerary. He played Lucius O'Trigger in The Rivals; Jim Farren in Shadows of a Great City; Chambers in Pudd'n Head Wilson; Beverly Clay in Playing the Game. In vaudeville he appeared in two vehicles by William C. de Mille, In 1999, and Poor Old Jim. Mason. d. May 1, 1919.

Thomas Jefferson (1743–1826) Third President of the United States. b. April 13, 1743 in Goochland, now Albemarle Co., Va. Graduate of William and Mary in 1762, and admitted to the bar in 1767. As a member of the Continental Congress, he was chairman of the committee that wrote and presented the Declaration of Independence to that body. He was governor of Virginia from 1779–81, and again member of Continental Congress from 1783–85. From 1785–89 he was U.S. minister to France, and secretary of state, 1790–93. He was vice president of the U.S. from 1798–1801, and president, 1801–09, being elected by the house of representatives after a tie vote with Aaron Burr, q.v. Masonic speakers and periodicals, both Masonic and Anti-Masonic, of the middle 1800's claimed Jefferson was a Freemason. It is doubtful if he was ever a member of the Craft. All claims to membership are based on association, or insinuation, such as "records of this period destroyed"; "closest associates were Freemasons"; "his writings and actions contain Masonic philosophy." It is claimed that the French Dr. Guillotin, q.v., recorded in his diary that he "attended Lodge in company with Mr. Jefferson and Mr. Paine from the American States." There has been an attempt to link his membership with Door to Virtue Lodge No. 44, Albemarle Co., Va., for his son-in-law, Gov. Thomas M. Randolph, q.v., and favorite grandson, Thomas Jefferson Randolph, q.v., were members of that lodge, as well as Peter and Samuel Carr, nephews. He was identified as marching in procession with Widow's Son Lodge No. 60, and Charlottesville Lodge No. 90, Oct. 6, 1817, at the laying of the cornerstone of Central College (now U. of Va.). On August 21, 1801 a dispensation was ordered for a lodge at Surry Court House, Va. to be named Jefferson Lodge No. 65. Some have claimed that he was a member of the Lodge of Nine Muses, Paris. In July, 1826, both the grand lodges of Louisiana and Georgia held funeral orations for Jefferson and, on Aug. 2, 1826, the Grand Lodge of S.C. held a funeral procession for him. A letter from Moses Holbrook, q.v., grand commander of the supreme council, (SJ) to Dr. J. M. Allen, Skaneateles, N.Y. dated Aug. 2, at Charleston, S.C. said: "I have nothing new to write, except tomorrow we have a funeral procession for Thos. Jefferson, and all the societies are invited. I never knew that he was a Freemason.”

Olin M. Jeffords Chief Justice, Supreme Court of Vermont since 1955. b. June 8, 1890 at Enosburg Falls, Vt. Graduate of Boston U. in 1918, and admitted to the bar in that year. John Jeffries (1745–1819) Physician and pioneer balloonist. b. Feb. 5, 1745 in Boston, Mass. He was graduated from Harvard in 1763, and later studied medicine in London and Aberdeen, receiving his medical degree from the latter place in 1769. He then returned to Boston to practice. From 1771–74 he was surgeon of a British ship of the line at Boston, and at the evacuation of that city by the British, he accompanied the troops to Nova Scotia as a Loyalist. In March, 1779, he went to England and was made surgeon major to the forces in America. He served with the British at Charleston, S.C. from March to December of 1780, resigning to return to London where he entered practice. He gained recognition as a scientist and meteorologist. With Francois Blanchard, the French aeronaut, he made the first crossing of the English Channel from Dover to the forest of Guines, France in a balloon on Jan. 7, 1785. He paid the entire expense of the channel voyage ($3,500). In the summer of 1789 he returned to Boston where he delivered the first public lecture on anatomy that was given in New England. At this time public feeling was against dissections and he was forced by mob violence to discontinue his lectures. He received his degrees in St. Andrew's Lodge, Boston, Mass., and in 1770 was charter member, and first junior warden (Dec. 3, 1770) of Massachusetts Lodge, Boston. He became senior warden Dec. 2, 1771; reelected Dec. 7, 1772; elected master Dec. 6, 1773 and reelected master Dec. 5, 1774. d. Sept. 16, 1819.

Johnson (?–1773) A Masonic charlatan of this name appeared on the European scene at Jenna in 1763. His real name was Leucht. He claimed that he was deputed by the heads of Templar Freemasonry in Scotland to introduce reforms into the German lodges. He established a chapter of Strict Observance, and named himself grand prior. Von Hund, q.v., was at first deceived by him, but later found that he had been a servant of a Freemason, whose papers he had stolen, and then assumed his employer's name. He had been secretary to the Prince of Bernberg, whose confidence he had betrayed. Von Hund denounced him as an imposter and Johnson fled, but was arrested at Magdeburg, and imprisoned at Wartzberg, where he died in 1773.

From 1853–57 he was governor of Tennessee, and U.S. senator from that state 1857–62. He was loyal to the Union during the Civil War, and as military governor of Tenn., held the rank of brigadier general. He was vice president under Lincoln from March 4 to April 15, 1865, and succeeded to the presidency on the death of Lincoln, serving until 1869. He again was elected U.S. senator in 1875, but served only a few months until his death. He was a member of Greeneville Lodge No.119, Greeneville, Tenn., receiving his degrees in 1851 (initiated May 5th), and remained a member of that lodge until his death. At the request of his lodge, G. C. Connor, deputy grand master of the Grand Lodge of Tenn. conducted the Masonic burial service and Coeur de Lion Commandery No. 9, K.T. of Knoxville gave the Templar burial service. His chapter and commandery membership is not known, but he was definitely a Knight Templar as there is a picture of him in Commandery regalia owned by Nashville Commandery No. 1, K.T. Some have Charles H. Johnson claimed his membership was in this commandery, but the record is often confused with another Andrew Johnson who was knighted on July 26, 1859. On June 20, 1867, he received the 4th through 32nd degrees of the Scottish Rite at the executive mansion at the hands of Benjamin B. French, q.v., and A.T.C. Pierson. He thus became the first president to receive the Scottish Rite degrees. He participated in many Masonic functions and cornerstone layings, including a monument to Stephen A. Douglas, q.v., at Chicago, Sept. 6, 1866; Masonic Temple, Baltimore, Nov. 20, 1866; Masonic Temple, Boston, June 24, 1867; Antietam National Cemetery (Md.) Oct. 17, 1867; Masonic Temple, 9th and F Sts., N.W., Washington, May 20, 1868. His close association with Freemasonry was one of the factors that led to his impeachment trial. Thaddeus Stevens, q.v., the anti-Mason, was a ringleader in the impeachment proceedings against Johnson in 1868. d. July 31, 1875.

Guy Johnson (1740–1788) Colonel in British Army during Revolution, and nephew of Sir William Johnson, q.v. b. in County Meath, Ireland in 1740. On the refusal of Sir John Johnson, q.v. (son of Sir William), to accept his father's office of superintendent of Indian affairs, Guy assumed the office from the time of his uncle's death in 1744, until the end of the Revolution. Previous to this he had served as his uncle's deputy. He married his cousin, Mary, daughter of Sir William. Guy served against the French in 1757, and again in 1759, when he commanded a company of rangers under Sir Jeffrey Amherst. At the start of the Revolution, he fled to Montreal by way of Oswego, with his family and a few faithful Indians. From there he went to England, but returned the following year, remaining several months in N.Y.C., and in 1778, accompanied his old friend Chief Joseph Brant, q.v., on raids in the Mohawk Valley. In Oct. 1779 his estates were confiscated by the New York assembly, and he resettled in Canada. When St. Patricks Lodge No. 8 (now 4) of Johnstown, N.Y. was chartered, May 23, 1766, Guy Johnson was the first senior warden. His uncle, Sir William, was first master, and William's son-in-law, Daniel Claus, was junior warden. Guy had been initiated early in 1766, in Union Lodge No. 1, of Albany, N.Y. On Feb. 7, 1771 he succeeded his uncle as the second master of St. Patrick's Lodge. When he became Indian agent, he made Joseph Brant his secretary, and when he fled to England, he took Brant with him, and was undoubtedly the one who paved the way for Brant to become a member of the Hiram's Cliftonian Lodge No. 417 in London on that trip. It was while he was with Henry Johnson Brant's forces in the Mohawk Valley that Lieutenant Boyd lost his life after appealing to Col. John Butler (first secretary of St. Patrick's Lodge) for mercy. d. March 5, 1788.

Louisiana. b. Sept. 14, 1783 in Tenn. He studied law in La., and started practice at Bringiers. In 1809 he was clerk of the territorial court. He was elected to the U.S. senate in place of William C. C. Claiborne, q.v., serving from 1818–24, when he resigned to become governor of La.; he held that office four years. He was elected to the U.S. congress in 1834–39, and again served in the U.S. senate from 1844–49. His original lodge is not known, but he was made an honorary member of Polar Star Lodge No. 1, New Orleans. d. Sept. 4, 1864.

Herschel V. Johnson U.S. Ambassador and foreign service officer. b. May 3, 1894 in Atlanta, Ga. Graduate of U. of North Carolina in 1916, and later attended Harvard Law School. Appointed to the diplomatic service in 1920, first serving in Switzerland. He was then secretary of the legation at Sofia, Bulgaria, and Tegucigalpa, Honduras. He was first secretary of embassy in Mexico City in 1929–30, and then chief of division of Mexican affairs in State Dept., 1930–34. From 1934–37 he was first secretary of embassy in London, and counselor of same from 1937–41 with rank of minister. From 1941–46 he was minister to Sweden. He was U.S. representative on U.N. Security Council from 1946–48, with rank of ambassador. From 1948–53 he was ambassador to Brazil. Now retired. Served as Infantry captain overseas in WWI. A member of Crawfish Spring Lodge No. 300 of Chickamauga, Ga., he received his degrees on April 20, 25 and 27, 1918.

Hiram W. Johnson (1866–1945) U.S. Senator and Governor of Cali-fornia. b. Sept. 2, 1866 in Sacramento, Calif. Began as a shorthand reporter, and studied law in his father's office, being admitted to the bar in 1888. He practiced first in Sacramento, and moved to San Francisco in 1902. He was on the staff of prosecuting attorneys in the boodling cases that involved leading city officials and almost all public utilities in San Francisco. When Francis J. Heney was shot down in court, while prosecuting Abe Ruef for bribery in 1908, Johnson took his place and secured conviction of Ruef. He was governor of Calif. from 1911–15, and reelected for term of 1915–19, but resigned in 1917. He was then U.S. senator from Calif. until his death. A founder of the Progressive Party in 1912, he was vice presidential candidate on that ticket in 1912, and presidential candidate in 1924. Member of Washington Lodge No. 20, Sacramento; he was also a member of Sacramento Chapter No. 3, R.A.M., and Commandery No. 2, K.T. of that city. Member of Islam Shrine Temple, San Francisco. d. Aug. 6, 1945.

Howard A. Johnson Chief Justice, Supreme Court of Montana, 1938–46. b. Dec. 18, 1893 at Beloit, Wis. A.B. and LL.B. from U. of Montana in 1916–17. He served in state legislature, as county attorney, and assistant U.S. attorney. Practiced law at Butte, and resigned from supreme court bench to resume practice. Sir John Johnson (1742–1830) British Colonel in Revolutionary War, and last Provincial Grand Master of New York. b. Nov. 5, 1742 at “Mount Johnson” on Mohawk River, N.Y., the son of Sir William Johnson, q.v., the British Indian agent. Educated by clergymen of the Dutch church, and Church of England, chiefly at Albany and N.Y. City, he spent some time in England, during which time he was knighted by George III as a compliment to his father. Hence both bore titles at the same time. It was also while in England that he was initiated in the Royal Lodge of St. James of London. As a youth, he saw considerable militia service under his father, and at the latter’s death, he succeeded him as major general of militia (1774), as well as provincial grand master. Between Dec. 5, 1767 and May 3, 1773, he was a frequent visitor to St. Patrick’s Lodge No. 4 at Johnstown. This lodge was founded by his father, who was first master. His cousin, Guy Johnson, q.v., was first senior warden, and his brother-in-law, Daniel Claus, junior warden. He fled to Montreal with about 300 of his Scotch-Tory tenants in the spring of 1776 when he learned that Gen. Schuyler was about to capture him. Here he was made colonel, and raised two battalions known as the “Queen’s Royal Greens.” With them he fought at Fort Stanwix, Oriskany (where Gen. Herkimer, q.v., was killed), and finally were forced to flee back to Canada when the Indians deserted them in fear of Benedict Arnold, q.v. In May, 1780, he desolated Cherry Valley, and in the same year, with Chief Joseph

Brant, q.v., and Cornplanter, he raided the Mohawk Valley. At the close of the war his properties were confiscated, and he went to Canada, where the crown appointed him superintendent general of Indian affairs in North America. He spent the year 1784 in England, but returned, and was a member of the provincial council of Canada. In 1789 he became grand master of the Provincial Grand Lodge of Quebec. d. Jan. 4, 1830.

John A. "Jack" Johnson (1878–1946) Negro heavyweight boxing champion of the world. He won the championship by defeating Tommy Burns in 1908. He was defeated by James J. Jeffries in 1910, and lost the title to Jess Willard at Havana, Cuba, in 1915. He was raised in Lodge Forfar & Kincadine No. 225, Dundee, Scotland at 10:00 a.m. October 13, 1911. This meeting was not publicised and Johnson was proposed for membership by a new member of the lodge. Little was known of either the new member or Johnson. Since the members of the lodge had not been notified, and the charter called for no meetings in the morning hours, the charter was suspended from Dec. 21, 1911 to Nov. 1, 1913. When his initiation in a regular lodge became known to American Freemasons, it caused quite a furor.

John L. Johnson (1869–1932) President of Mississippi Woman's College from 1912. b. Aug. 10, 1869 in Spottsylvania Co., Va. Graduate of U. of Miss. and Miss. Coll. Graduate of Tufts and Boston U. Law School. He practiced law from 1895–1939, and gained an international reputation in the defense of the LeBlane–Glover murder case. In 1918 he became associated with the Boston U. Law School as a professor, and was dean emeritus from 1943. He was much in demand as a public speaker. He was raised in Monitor Lodge, Waltham, Mass. in 1892, served as master in 1902, and grand master of the Grand Lodge of Massachusetts from 1914–16. He was a member of all York Rite bodies and many other Masonic organizations. He received distinguished service medals from the grand lodges of Rhode Island, Maine, Connecticut, Massachusetts, New Jersey, North Carolina, Nova Scotia, Czechoslovakia, and Norway, as well as the Gourgas medal from the Northern Jurisdiction, AASR. An author of many Masonic articles, his best known book is The Beginnings of Freemasonry in America. Under his leadership the membership of the northern jurisdiction rose from a low of 208,000 to 425,000 in 1954, at the time of his retirement from office. It is through his efforts that the northern jurisdiction set up a foundation for research in schizophrenia, the chief mentalcrippler. Since 1934 this foundation has sponsored more than 50 separate projects at research centers across the U.S. and Canada. Johnson was a member of the executive committee of the George Washington National Memorial Association. d. Dec. 18, 1957.

Melvin M. Johnson, Jr. Inventor of the Johnson automatic rifles and machine guns. b. Aug. 27, 1909 in Boston, Mass., the son of Melvin M. Johnson, q.v., former sovereign grand commander of the AASR (NJ). Richard M. Johnson (1780–1850) Ninth Vice President of the United States, 1837–41. b. Oct. 17, 1780 in Bryant's Station, Ky. Admitted to the bar in 1802, he was a member of the U.S. Congress in 1807–19, and 1829–37. From 1819–29 he was U.S. senator from Ky. In the electoral vote for vice president in 1837, no candidate gained a majority in the electoral college, and the election was thereby thrown into the senate. He was the only vice president to be thus elected. He was a member of Hiram Lodge No. 4, Frankfort, Ky., but the dates of his degrees are not known. He is listed as a past master in the returns of this lodge of Oct. 1, 1806, and dimitted June 20, 1808. His name appears as a member, and past master, in Mount Vernon Lodge No. 14 in August, 1807. He was evidently a charter member of this lodge. He is also listed as a member of Mount Vernon Chapter (later Georgetown Chapter No. 13, R.A.M.) of Georgetown, Ky., in the proceedings of 1823 to 1827 inclusive. In the resolutions adopted by the anti-Masonic members of the Massachusetts legislature at Boston in 1836 he is referred to as "an adhering Mason." d. Nov. 19, 1850.

Robert L. Johnson President of Temple University since 1941. b. March 25, 1894 in New York City. Graduate of Yale in 1918. From 1922–37 he was vice president of Time, Inc. Rushmore National Memorial committee. He served in WWI as an enlisted man and officer, and was wounded in France and discharged in 1918. Member of Ree Valley Lodge No. 70, Highmore, S.D. d. Aug. 2, 1939.

Samuel Johnson (1709–1784) The great English lexicographer, critic, and conversationalist whose life was immortalized by his biographer James Boswell, q.v., in Life of Samuel Johnson. Johnson's greatest accomplishment was the compilation of the world's first dictionary of the language (1755). This brought him doctorates from Oxford and Dublin universities. b. in Lichfield, he was the son of a bookdealer. He opened a school in Lichfield in which David Garrick, q.v., was a student. He contributed heavily to literary magazines of the day and wrote many volumes including Lives of the Poets (in 10 volumes); Journey to the Western Isles of Scotland; and Rasselas, Prince of Abyssinia. He first met Boswell in May, 1763. There is no definite proof that Johnson was a Mason, but as Mackey says, "the probabilities in favor of his having been one are much weightier than the probability against.” There was a “Samuel Johnson” who was a member of Old Dundee Lodge No. 18 (formerly No. 9) of Wapping, London. He was proposed May 14, 1767, accepted May 28, 1767, and made a Master Mason July 9, 1767. His name appears thereafter in the records 21 times.

Sir William Johnson (1715–1774) English Baronet who was a most colorful and powerful figure in prerevolutionary America. b. in Smittstown, County Meath, Ireland. He came to America in 1783 to manage the property of his uncle, Admiral Sir Peter Warren, which was located about 24 miles west of Schenectady. Johnson soon began trade with the Indians, whom he always treated with honesty and justice. His manner was dignified and affable, and he cultivated their friendship by learning their language, assuming many of their manners, and even their dress. His influence, which was greater than any other white man had possessed, earned him the Indian title Wariaghejaghe, or “he who has charge of affairs,” and was made a sachem of the Mohawk Tribe. He was a major general of British militia, and distinguished himself in the border warfare with the French, and in Feb., 1748 was placed in command of all New York colonial forces. On April 14, 1755, he was appointed “sole superintendent of the affairs of the Six United Nations, their allies and dependents,” holding this position until his death on July 11, 1774. His nephew, Guy Johnson, q.v., replaced him in this office. He became interested in Joseph Brant, q.v., the Mohawk chief, when the latter was about 17 years old. Brant served under Johnson at the Battle of Fort Niagara on July 25, 1759. He later sent him to school, and took Brant's sister Molly as a common-law wife. He was knighted for his service in the French War, and given 100,000 acres of land in the Mohawk Valley. He was raised in Union Lodge No. 1 (now Mt. Vernon No. 3) of Albany, N.Y., April 10, 1766. On May 23, 1766 a charter was issued to St. Patrick's Lodge No. 8 (now No. 4) to constitute a regular lodge to be held at Johnson Hall in the county of Albany and the province of New York in America. Its first meeting took place Aug. 23, 1776, and Johnson was charter master with his nephew, Guy Johnson, as senior warden, and his son-in-law, Daniel Claus, as junior warden. John Butler, q.v., of Revolutionary fame, was secretary. He established a lodge room on the second floor of his home, Johnson Hall, and it is today a museum with some of the original lodge furniture intact. He later became provincial grand master of New York. On his death, this title was inherited by his son, Sir John Johnson, q.v. On May 4, 1769, the secretary of the lodge recorded that "The Master (Sir William) observed that he had received a commission as Master of a Lodge of superior degrees, which would require his attendance occasionally at Albany." This reference would tend to prove the assertion that he was one of the early founders of the Scottish Rite in America, as he is said to have been master of the "Ineffable Lodge" (of Perfection) at Albany from 1769 to 1773. He was succeeded by his nephew as master of St. Patrick's Lodge on Feb. 7, 1771. d. July 11, 1774.

William E. Johnson (1862–1945) Prohibition lecturer known as "Pussyfoot" Johnson, because of his catlike policies in pursuing lawbreakers in the Indian Territory. b. March 25, 1862 in Coventry, N.Y. He was educated in the U. of Nebraska. He made three trips around the world in the interest of temperance, delivering more than 4,000 lectures. He lost an eye at a prohibition meeting at Essex Hall, London in 1919, by a missile thrown by a member of a mob. As a special officer of the Dept. of Interior to enforce laws in the Indian Territory (1906–11), he secured more than 4,400 convictions. A newspaperman and editor, he was on the staff of the Lincoln News (Nebr.) and later manager of the Nebraska News Bureau. He entered the Texas army as a private, and rose in its command as brigadier general. In the Mexican War he joined the regular army under Gen. Zachary Taylor. In 1857 he was ordered to Utah with his Texas regiment to restore order among the Mormons who were revolting against the Federal government. He was breveted brigadier general in the regulars and remained in command of Utah until 1860, when he was sent to Calif. to command the Department of the Pacific. At the start of the Civil War, he resigned his commission and returned to Richmond, Va. where he was given command of the Confederate forces west of the Atlantic states and North of the Gulf states. In the Battle of Shiloh Church, he surprised and defeated the Federal troops under Grant, but was killed in action on April 6, 1862. Masonic Review (Cincinnati) p. 157, Sept. 1868 says he was a Mason, but grand secretary of Grand Lodge of Texas says "definitely not."

Anson Jones (1798–1858) Last President of the Republic of Texas, and first Grand Master of Grand Lodge of Texas. b. Jan. 20, 1798 in Great Barrington, Mass. Dr. Jones received his M.D. degree in Philadelphia in 1827, moving to New Orleans in 1832, where he practiced a year before moving to Texas; here, he settled in Brazoria Co. As chairman of a mass-meeting held there in Dec. 1835, he drew up resolutions in favor of a declaration of independence, and for a convention of the people of Texas to form a constitution. He afterward raised a military company with which he fought in the Battle of San Jacinto, and was judge advocate general. In 1837 he was a member of the Texas congress, and minister to the U.S. from Texas in 1837–39. In 1840 he was president of the state senate, and ex-officio vice president of the Republic, and secretary of state from 1841–44. He was president of the republic from 1845 until annexation to the U.S. His personal opposition to the annexation affected his popularity, destroyed his influence, and eventually his reason became unsettled, and he committed suicide. Jones was initiated in Harmony Lodge No. 52, Philadelphia, March 7, passed April 7, and raised in May, 1827. He served the lodge as junior warden in 1830, senior warden in 1831, and master in 1832. He withdrew Nov. 7, 1832, on his removal from the state. While in Philadelphia he became grand master of the Odd Fellows. In March, 1835, Dr. Jones, together with John H. Wharton, Asa Brigham, James A. E. Phelps, Alexander Russell, and J. P. Caldwell met in a grove back of the town of Brazoria at 10 a.m. for the purpose of applying for a charter from the Grand Lodge of Louisiana. At this time every move in Texas was watched with jealousy and distrust by the Mexican government, and Freemasonry was particularly odious to the Catholic priesthood, whose influence in Texas at that time was all powerful. As a result, a dispensation was granted for Holland Lodge No. 36 (UD)—now Holland No. 1 of Houston. The charter for the lodge was delivered to Bro. John M. Allen, q.v., who was in New Orleans to recruit soldiers for the Texas forces. An orderly had been sent by Gen. Houston, q.v., to meet Allen and advise him of the coming clash with the Mexicans. Allen then set out to join Houston's forces with the charter and other communications from the grand secretary of La. in his possession. He met Dr. Jones on the prairie between Croce's and San Jacinto, and delivered the charter to him. Jones then carried it in his saddlebags through the Battle of San Jacinto. Jones became first master of Holland Lodge, and in 1838 was instrumental in the organization of the Grand Lodge of the Republic of Texas; he served as its first grand master. d. Houston, Texas, Jan. 12, 1858, and was buried with Masonic honors.

Mayor of Savannah, 1812–14. Circuit judge in 1804–07. Member of Solomon’s Lodge No. 1, Savannah. d. Nov. 13, 1838. Son of Noble Jones, q.v.

George W. Jones (1804–1896) U.S. Senator from Iowa,

1848–59, and Major General of militia. b. April 12, 1804 in Vincennes, Ind. He was graduated from Transylvania U. (Ky.) in 1825. Admitted to the bar, but never practiced. Moving to Missouri, he was clerk of the U.S. district court in 1826, and served as aide-de-camp to General Henry Dodge, q.v., in the Black Hawk War. He moved to Wis., where he was judge of the county court, colonel, and subsequently general of militia. He was elected to Congress in 1834–37. In July, 1836 he secured a division of Michigan Territory, and the establishment of the Territory of Wisconsin. In 1839 he was appointed by Van Buren as surveyor-general of the Northwest Territory; removed by Harrison, and reappointed by Polk. In 1859 he was named as U.S. minister to New Granada, and on his return in 1861, was charged with disloyalty, and imprisoned for a time. Member of Dubuque Lodge No. 3, Dubuque, Iowa. d. July 22, 1896.

Girault M. Jones Episcopal Bishop of Louisiana since 1949. b. June 30, 1904 in Centerville, Miss. Graduate of U. of Mississippi, and U. of the South. Ordained in the Protestant Episcopal Church in 1928, he served first as a rural missionary in Miss. (1928–31), and then pastorates in Pass Christian, Miss., and New Orleans, La. In 1954 he was grand chaplain of the Grand Lodge of Louisiana. Received his degrees in Lumberton Lodge No. 417, Lumberton, Miss. and presently member of Louisiana Lodge No. 102, New Orleans.

Hamilton C. Jones U.S. Congressman to 80th and 81st Congresses (1947–51) from N.C. b. in Charlotte, N.C. Graduate of U. of North Carolina in 1906, and Columbia U. in 1907.

Howard W. Jones President of Youngstown College, Youngstown, Ohio. b. Sept. 27, 1895 in Palmyra, Ohio. Graduate of Hiram Coll. and Western Reserve U. Mason.

Inigo Jones (1573–1652) English architect. b. July 15, 1573 in London, England. He designed stage sets for court masques written by Ben Johnson, Heywood, Davenant and others. He served as architect to the king under James I, Charles I, and Charles II. He designed the queen's house at Greenwich, Lincoln's Inn Chapel, the banqueting hall at Whitehall, reconstruction of St. Paul's Cathedral, Covent Garden piazza and Ashburnham House in Westminster. His connection with Freemasonry is based on the statements made by Anderson in his Constitutions of 1723 where he speaks of him as "our great Master Mason Inigo Jones." In his Constitutions of 1738 he goes even further and asserts that Jones was present as grand master at the leveling of the footstone of King James I's banqueting Hall in 1607, and that the Masons then drank to "the King and the Craft." One of the Old Charges is called the Inigo Jones MS, as its frontispiece depicts masons at work and bears the inscription "Inigo Jones Delin, MDCVII," but experts are convinced that this could not possibly have been drawn by him as the manuscript itself can be proved to date not earlier than 1722. Due to Anderson, therefore, he has been claimed as grand master from 1607–18 and 1636–51. Jones did design the building that later became the famous Freemasons' Tavern in London. d. July 5, 1652.

Jacob Jones (1768–1850) Commodore, U.S. Navy. b. in March, 1768, near Smyrna, Del. He studied medicine and started a practice, but became clerk of the Del. supreme court, and in 1799 entered the Navy as a midshipman. He was an officer on the frigate Philadelphia when it was captured in 1803 in the harbor of Tripoli. He remained a prisoner 18 months. Made commander in 1810, he was assigned to the Wasp in 1811. On Oct. 18, 1812 he encountered the British brig Frolic and after an engagement of 43 minutes captured her. However, the prize was no sooner secured than the British ship Poitiers of 74 guns hove into sight and the 18-gun Wasp was no match. They were captured and carried to Bermuda. This was the first naval engagement of the War of 1812, and the fact that an American ship could best an English ship of approximately the same power was hailed as the destruction of British invincibility on the seas. For this Congress struck a medal in his honor and awarded the commander and crew of the Wasp a compensation of $25,000. He was buried Masonically by the Grand Lodge of Delaware, the grand master officiating. There is no record of his membership in a Delaware lodge, but it is thought that he was a member of Holland Lodge No. 8, New York City in 1808. The returns of the lodge in that year record his payment of the initiation fee, but no further record is given. d. Aug. 3, 1850.

James K. Jones (1839–1908) U.S. Senator from Arkansas, 1885–1903. b. Sept. 29, 1839 in Marshall Co., Miss. He served as a private in the Confederate forces through the Civil War, and then lived on his plantation until 1873, when he entered law practice. He was a member of the state senate in 1873–79, and president of same the last three years. From 1881–87 he was U.S. congressman, and in 1896 was chairman of the Democratic National Committee. Member of Arkadelphia Lodge No. 19, Arkadelphia, Ark. d. June 1, 1908.

Jesse H. Jones (1874–1956) Secretary of Commerce, 1940–45; Director of Reconstruction Finance Corp., 1932–39. b. April 5, 1874 in Robertson Co., Tenn. In lumber business in Texas, from 1895, and banking business from 1909. Owner and publisher of Houston Chronicle, and large scale real estate investor. From 1936–43 he was chairman of executive committee of Export–Import Bank, and administrator of Federal Loan Agency, 1939–45. Member of National Emergency Council 1933–39, and Economic Defense Board, 1941–45. In recognition of his services to the state and nation, the Texas legislature authorized the painting of his portrait, which was unveiled in the state capitol building at Austin in 1935. He was made a Mason at sight, in an occasional lodge, called by Grand Master Ara M. Daniels of the Grand Lodge of the District of Columbia, Dec. 16, 1941, and was raised by Charles E. Baldwin, past grand master. d. June 1, 1956.

during the gold rush, serving in the Calif. state senate from 1863–67, going to Nevada in the latter year, where he engaged in the development of mines. Mason. d. Nov. 27, 1912.

John Paul Jones (1747–1792) Father of the American Navy. Original name was John Paul. b. July 6, 1747 in Kirkbean, Scotland. He went to sea at the age of 12, and at 19 was first mate of a slaver, and captain of a merchantman three years later. Ill fortune struck, however, when a man, flogged on his ship, died and another was killed in a mutiny. Hostile witnesses at the inquiry made it rough for him and he next appeared at his brother's home in Fredericksburg, Va., having added the alias of "Jones" to his name. He had been made a member of St. Bernards Lodge No. 122 (now St. Cuthbert No. 41) of Kirkcudbright, Scotland, Nov. 27, 1770. At the outbreak of the American Revolution he obtained a commission in the Continental Navy as a lieutenant. It is said that fraternal connections obtained it for him. He soon became a captain, and acted as commodore of a fleet of privateers through which he established a reputation. Taking the war into European waters, he went to France, and, through Franklin's influence, obtained a vessel named the Bonhomme Richard which first flew the new American ensign in foreign waters. Two days after the fight with the British Serapis (where he is supposed to have uttered the words "I've just begun to fight!"), his ship sank and he made his way back to Paris. While here, he became associated with the famous Lodge of the Nine Sisters, and there are several references to his membership in the lodge records. He was also a visitor to St. Thomas Lodge in Paris. The Lodge of Nine Sisters had a bust of Jones made by Houdon, q.v., the measurements of which were used to identify Jones's body when the remains were removed more than 100 years later. Returning to Philadelphia in 1781, he was named to command the America, a man-of-war then building. Through "defects of taste and character," however, he was not allowed to take the vessel to sea. He again returned to Paris, and finally, in 1787, Congress voted him a medal—the only one awarded a naval hero in the Revolution. After declining service with Denmark, he accepted an appointment as rear admiral in the navy of Empress Catherine of Russia, then at war against the Turks. He was victor in the engagements on the Black Sea, but lost those in the palace corridors. He returned to Paris in 1790, and died of dropsy, July 18, 1792. He was buried in the Protestant cemetery of Paris and his gravesite was forgotten until 1905, when it was rediscovered and the remains were borne in solemn procession through the streets of Paris prior to shipment to America. They were later interred at Annapolis, Md.

John Rice Jones (1759–1824) First lawyer of Illinois and of Louisiana Territory. b. Feb. 10, 1759 in Merionthshire, Wales. He was educated in England and Wales, and was an excellent linguist, mathematician, and lawyer. He emigrated to the U.S. in 1780, settling in Philadelphia where he became acquainted with Benj. Franklin and other prominent men of that city. In 1787 he moved to Vincennes when the Northwest Territory was organized. Here he was instrumental in writing the territorial law. In 1790 he moved to Kaskaskia and practiced law, thus becoming the first practicing lawyer in Illinois. Being a French scholar, he was able to do business with the French of the territory. In 1802 he returned to Vincennes and was appointed U.S. judge of the Indiana Territory, revising the laws of the same in 1807. In 1810 he moved to St. Louis, Mo., residing there only shortly before settling at Potosi in Washington Co., Mo. Here he formed a partnership with Moses Austin, q.v., in the lead business, and erected the first cupola furnace made in the U.S. He was elected from Washington Co. to form the first constitution of Mo. (1819). His son, Rice Jones, fought a bloodless duel with Shadrach Bond, q.v., then the first governor-elect of Illinois, on an island between Kaskaskia and St. Genevieve. A quarrel with Bond's assistant, Dunlap, led to Rice's murder by Dunlap on the streets of Kaskaskia in 1809. It is not known where John Rice received his degrees, but he is recorded as a member of St. Louis Lodge No. 111, and later of Missouri Lodge No. 12, both of St. Louis. Two of his sons were Freemasons, and one (Augustus) served as grand junior warden of the Grand Lodge of Missouri in 1832. Jones was named supreme court judge of Missouri and held that office at the time of his death in 1824.

Joseph II (1741–1790) Holy Roman Emperor (1765–90) and King of Germany (1764–90). Son of Francis I and Maria Theresa, q.v. He was co-regent with his mother in Austria from 1765–80, and acquired territory at first partition of Poland in 1772. On his mother's death in 1780, he came into full control of Austria. He prohibited the publication of any new papal bulls, suppressed convents, and reduced the number of clergy. In 1781 he published the Edict of Toleration. As emperor he had many schemes for territorial expansion, but most of them failed. He is one of the best examples of Europe's "benevolent despots." At one time he encouraged Freemasonry, notwithstanding the efforts of the priests to prevent it. It is said that in 1785 he wrote the following decree in his own hand which permitted meetings of lodges. "In return for their compliance with this ordinance, this government accords to the Freemasons, welcome, protection and liberty; leaving entirely to their own direction the control of their members and their constitutions. The government will not attempt to penetrate into their mysteries. Following these directions, the Order of Freemasons, in which body are comprised a great number of worthy men who are well known to me, may become useful to the State." But Joseph did not keep this edict in effect long. At length he yielded to the priesthood, and, in 1789 the above ordinance was rescinded and the lodges were forbidden to meet, under very severe penalties.

John J. Joseph Vice President of Bell Telephone Co. b. July

27, 1899 in Marathon, Ohio. Graduate of Ohio Wesleyan U. and Western Reserve U. Was with Redpath Chautauqua from 1917–28, and political science instructor at Western Reserve U., 1925–28. Admitted to the bar in 1928, he practiced in Cleveland. With Bell Telephone (Ohio) since 1929, and vice president in charge of public relations since 1948. Member of Eastern Star Lodge No. 55, Franklin, Ohio.

Josephine Empress of France. b. June 23, 1763 in Martinique. Married vicomte de Beauharnais who was executed in the revolution. Married Napoleon Bonaparte, q.v., March 9, 1796. She was active in French adoptive Freemasonry, a woman's organization given quasi-Masonic recognition by the Grand Orient of France. Napoleon promoted adoptive Masonry as a means to consolidate his power, and it rose to favor on his reestablishment of the Empire. In 1805, Empress Josephine was installed as grand mistress of the Loge Imperiale d'Adoption des Francs Chevaliers at Strasbourg, at which time she initiated one of her ladies of honor, Madame F. de Canisy, at a brilliant gathering. In 1805 the androgynous Lodge of Free Knights and Ladies of Paris held a festival at Strasburg in which Josephine assisted Lady Dietrick, the grand mistress. The lodges Saint Josephine of Paris and Josephine of Milan, were named after her. d. May 24, 1814.

John H. Jouett Aviation executive. b. May 14, 1892 at San Francisco, Calif. Graduate of U.S. Military Academy in 1914, advanced to lieutenant colonel, and resigned in 1930. From 1930–32 he was aviation adviser to Republic of China;

president of Fairchild Aircraft 1936–38, and executive vice president of Higgins Aircraft, Inc. since Nov. 1, 1942. He is also president of Blue Star Airlines and Caribbean Corp. since 1945. Raised in Republic Lodge No. 690, New York City in 1914; 32° AASR (SJ) at Galveston, Texas in 1929. Member of El Mina Shrine Temple, Galveston.

Arnold E. Joyal President of Fresno State College (Calif.) since 1948. b. Oct. 13, 1902 in Cowansville, Quebec, Canada. Brought to U.S. in 1903 and naturalized in 1927. Received A.B., A.M., and Ph.D. from U. of California. He taught, and was principal, at Wheatland, Calif., and then went with the Federal government in the U.S. Office of Education. He was a professor at U. of Denver and U. of Maryland, 1933–45, and dean of the college of education at U. of Oklahoma, 1945–48. Mason.

Benito Pablo Juarez (1806–1872) Mexican patriot and president. b. March 21, 1806 in San Pablo Guelatao, Oaxaca, Mexico. His parents were pure Indian and died when he was four years old. He was reared by an uncle and received a good education. Admitted to the bar in 1834, he practiced law in Oaxaca until 1846, and was elected governor of that state in 1847. He was expelled by Santa Anna, q.v., in 1853, but returned in 1855 to join Alvarez in a revolution against Santa Anna. As minister of justice under Alvarez, he wrote the “Ley Juarez” in 1855, which abolished special courts and reduced the power of the army and the church, as both had been practically immune under the special courts. When Comonfort became president, he feared the power of Juarez so he named him as governor of Oaxaca. Juarez again made many reforms in finance and education of that state and was regularly elected governor in 1857. He also was elected president of the supreme court at that time, which under the new constitution made him virtually vice president. Comonfort was forced by the liberal press to make him secretary of the interior. He was provisional president of Mexico after Miramon from 1857–61. Three years of civil war followed, but he was elected president for term 1861–65, and by self-proclamation president from 1865–67, as elections were impossible because of the French invasion. He fought against Emperor Maximilian, and the French, and finally captured him and had Maximilian shot, June 19, 1867. He was elected president for two more terms—1867–72, and his later administrations were marked by many reforms and revolutions. For his honesty he is often called the “Washington of Mexico” and for his reforms, the “Lincoln of Mexico.” He was prominent in Masonry, serving as master and rising to sovereign inspector general in the Mexican AASR, 33°. His authority seemed to keep the rites together because after his death dissension arose and they broke up. Maximilian is said to have been made a Mason in Austria. He was patron of Masonry in Mexico, but it is not known whether he attended any Masonic meetings there. It is claimed that Maximilian appealed to Juarez as a Mason to save his life but Juarez proved the Emperor was not a Freemason. d. July 18, 1872.

Henry M. Judah (1821–1866) Union Brigadier General in Civil War. b. June 12, 1821 in Snow Hill, Md. He was graduated from U.S. Military Academy in 1843, and served in the Mexican War with the 8th Infantry. He was commended for bravery in storming of Monterrey, Molino del Rey, and Mexico City. He served with the 4th Infantry against the Indians of California, and Washington and Oregon territories, until the Civil War. He was made brigadier general of volunteers in March, 1862, and acting inspector general of the Army of Tennessee. He resigned his staff appointment to command the 1st Division. He was active in the pursuit of Morgan, q.v., while the latter was making his famous raid into Kentucky, Indiana, and Ohio. He later was inspector general of the Army of Ohio and was mustered out of service in 1865, but reverted to regular status and was commandant of the post at Plattsburg, N.Y. at the time of his death, Jan. 14, 1866. Feb. 28, 1861 in Kuppenheim, Grand Duchy of Baden. He went to Calif. in 1866. After leaving school, he entered the theatrical profession playing with Edwin Booth, q.v., Joseph Jefferson, q.v., and other notables of the day. He returned to San Francisco in 1890, studied law, and was admitted to the bar in 1894. He served a term in the state legislature. In congress he was a leader in securing passage of the selective draft act in extra session. Made member in St. Cecile Lodge No. 568 in 1888 while in the theatrical profession. d. Dec. 18, 1924.

King David Kalakaua (1836–1891) King of Hawaii,

1874–91. b. Nov. 16, 1836, a descendant of one of the chief families of the Sandwich Islands. He received a good education and spoke English. When King Kamehameha V, q.v., died in 1872, he was a candidate for the throne, but his opponent, William Lunalilo, was elected and confirmed by the legislature. Lunalilo died within a year and in Feb., 1874, Kalakaua was elected to the throne by a legislature convened for that purpose. Ex–Queen Emma, the rival candidate, received six votes to his 36. The partisans of Queen Emma provoked disorders, which were quelled by the intervention of English and American marines. In the fall of 1874 Kalakaua set out on a tour of the U.S. and Europe. He was taken to San Francisco on a steam frigate, placed at his disposal by the American government, arriving Nov. 28. On this tour, he visited lodges in Washington, New York, Boston, and Chicago. In New York City he witnessed the third degree conferred in New York Lodge No. 330 with the grand officers in attendance, Dec. 30, 1874. In Chicago he accepted the invitation of Oriental Lodge No. 33 on Jan. 15, 1875 to witness another third. On this occasion his brother-in-law John O. Dominis, q.v., governor of the island of Oahu, was with him. John Wentworth, ex-mayor of Chicago and U.S. congressman, also spoke at this meeting. After lodge, the king entertained the officers of the lodge at the Grand Pacific Hotel. Kalakaua was a member of Lodge Le Progress de l’Océanie No. 124 (under AASR jurisdiction, later No. 371 under Calif.). He received the degrees March 25, May 4, and July 28, 1859. On Dec. 27, 1875 he was installed as master of the lodge, serving for a year. He was exalted in Honolulu Chapter No. 1, RAM., Feb. 5, 1874, and was high priest in 1883. He was knighted in Honolulu Commandery No. 1, K.T., Feb. 25, 1874, and was commander of same in 1877–78. He received the 4th to 32nd degrees of the AASR (SJ) in July and August, 1874; KCCH May 31, 1876; and 33° honorary at Iolani Palace, Honolulu, July 14, 1878 at the hands of his brother-in-law Prince John O. Dominis, q.v. He was a charter member of Kamehameha Lodge of Perfection No. 1; Nuuanu Chapter Rose Croix No. 1 and Alexander Liholiho Council of Kadosh No. 1. He served as orator of the lodge 1885–87; master of the chapter, 1874–78, and first sub-preceptor of the council from 1888 until his death. He ran into trouble with Albert Pike when he visited Europe in 1881. The deputy for Hawaii had requested letters to several foreign supreme councils which were given. The king seemingly snubbed that rite in Belgium, Portugal, and England, where “he permitted himself to receive the courtesies and hospitalities of the Knights of the Order of the Red Cross of Constantine in Scotland only, finding no time to receive those of the supreme councils of our rite.” Pike then directed a bulletin of apology (July 15, 1882) to all AASR members “over the surface of the Globe.” King Kalakaua died Jan. 20, 1891 in the Palace Hotel of San Francisco, while on a visit to this country. He had attended a reception in his honor by the Shrine on the 14th against the advice of his doctor.

Was auditor and office manager of National Biscuit Co., 1933–41, and assistant general manager TWA Airlines, 1941–43. With Montgomery Ward since 1943 as assistant comptroller, treasurer, and vice president since 1955. Mason.

King Kamehameha IV (1834–1863) King of Hawaii, 1854–63. Name was Alexander Liholiho, nephew of Kamehameha III. He introduced the use of the English language in Hawaiian schools. He assumed the throne at the age of 20. On Jan. 14, 1857 he was initiated and passed in the Lodge Le Progress de l'Océanie No. 124 (under AASR jurisdiction, later No. 371 under Calif.). His raising was deferred until Feb. 8 of that year, at which time he passed his examination in open lodge in full on the two degrees he had taken, to the surprise and admiration of the brethren present. R. G. Davis, master of the lodge at the time, wrote: "Seldom have I witnessed the impressive ceremonies of this degree conducted with such solemnity. The candidate, divested of all regal honors, standing before a large assembly of brethren, many of them decorated with rich jewels, and all in Masonic clothing, gave the lodge a striking appearance and left an impression on our minds not soon to be effaced. It was a lesson in humility." The lodge was closed at 11 p.m. and the brethren repaired to the king's palace where they were entertained in a truly royal manner. At five minutes after midnight, they toasted the king's 22nd birthday. Kamehameha took immediate interest in Masonic activities. He was installed as junior warden, Sept. 9, 1857, and as master the following January. He served as master for three years. A crowning act of his reign, and a monument to him, was the founding of the Queen's Hospital, the cornerstone of which he laid, July 17, 1860, with Masonic ceremonies. He died Nov. 30, 1863 when but 29, and was given a Masonic burial. Alexander Liholiho Council of Kadosh No. 1, AASR (SJ) of Honolulu is named in his honor.

King Kamehameha V (1830–1872) King of Hawaii, 1863–72, and first Hawaiian to be made a Freemason. Older brother of King Kamehameha IV, q.v. He was the last of a direct line of Sandwich Island kings. He promulgated his own constitution in 1864 to supersede the one of 1852. During his reign the Molokai Leper Settlement was established (1864). His petition was read in Hawaiian Lodge No. 21 (under Calif.), June 10, 1853. He was elected June 13, initiated June 15, passed Dec. 8, 1853, and raised on Feb. 27, 1854. At this time –he was Prince Lot Kamehameha. On Jan. 14, 1857 he was present with many other dignitaries in Lodge Le Progress de l’Océanie No. 124 (under AASR constitution) when his brother King Kamehameha IV was initiated. Unfortunately for Freemasonry, this evening marked the Masonic turning point for the future king. The two lodges not being in fraternal relations, charges were preferred against Lot Kamehameha, and two other brethren of Hawaiian Lodge, for visiting Le Progress in violation of an interdict imposed by Calif. He was tried, Feb. 25, 1857, and although found guilty, was upon due consideration excused from punishment. This no doubt rankled the royal personage, because, March 2, 1857, a dimit was received from him by Hawaiian Lodge, and on motion, was accepted. Lot Kamehameha, from that time on, never affiliated with a lodge. He was always treated as a Mason and upon his death, the funeral service of the Craft was read over his remains. The minutes of Jan. 18, 1873, show that the master of Hawaiian Lodge No. 21 invited the brethren and officers of the Lodge Le Progress to assist in the funeral of Kamehameha V.

M. F. Kanan Captain, Union Army in Civil War, who was the first commander of the first G.A.R. post. It was established April 6, 1866 at Decatur, Ill. He was a member of Macon Lodge No. 8, Decatur, Ill.

Elisha Kent Kane (1820–1857) Physician and early Arctic explorer. b. Feb. 20, 1820 in Philadelphia, Pa. Was graduated from U. of Pennsylvania in 1842 with medical degree, and entered U.S. Navy June 21, 1843, as assistant surgeon.

He served in China, Africa, and the Mediterranean, and was wounded while on special service in Mexico. In 1850 he urgently requested to be relieved of duty so that he might accompany the De-Haven expedition to the Arctic (better known as the Henry Grinnell expedition). He prepared for sailing in two days and was surgeon on the ship Advance. The expedition was to search for the English explorer, Franklin, and was financed by Henry Grinnell and commanded by Lt. Edwin J. DeHaven. The two vessels (Advance and Rescue) were accepted by congress on May 5, 1850. The expedition accomplished very little, having been caught in the ice pack in Wellington's channel; the ships drifted from Sept., 1850 to June, 1851 before they escaped into Baffin Bay. Kane's medical skill did much to fight scurvy and bring back the party alive. His reputation as an Arctic explorer, however, rests on the second Grinnell expedition, which he commanded. Grinnell, at the solicitation of Lady Franklin, placed the ship Advance under his command. Various scientific societies backed the undertaking, and Kane, himself, spent much of his private means. Congress denied aid, but the U.S. Navy gave its support. He sailed May 30, 1853 with Dr. Isaac I. Hayes, q.v., as surgeon of the expedition. They reached 78° 43' N., the highest latitude ever attained with a sailing vessel. Late in 1854, half the party under a Dane named Peterson, abandoned Kane and the ship in an attempt to reach Upernavic, but after three months of extreme hardship, were forced to return to Kane, who received them kindly. In 1855 Kane was forced to abandon the Advance, which was still frozen in, and finally got out in his small boats, with the aid of the Etah Esquimaux, who had been very friendly. On April 13, 1853 (a little over a month previous to the sailing of his second expedition) Kane received all three degrees in Franklin Lodge No. 134, Philadelphia, a lodge of which his father, John K. Kane, had been master in 1825. On June 17, 1853 after starting the expedition, he was entertained at a reception by Saint John's Lodge, Newfoundland, and was presented with a Masonic – flag. Kane Lodge No. 454 of New York City, famous “explorers’ lodge,” is named for him. He died in Havana, Cuba, Feb. 16, 1857. A memorial tablet, erected by the grand lodges of New York and New Jersey at the house where he died, was dedicated in Feb., 1922.

Frederick R. Kappel President of American Telephone and Telegraph Co. since 1956. b. Jan. 14, 1902 in Albert Lea, Minn. Graduate of U. of Minnesota in 1924. In 1949 he became assistant vice president of A.T. & T.; vice president 1949–53. From 1954–56 he was director and president of Western Electric Co. Member of George W. Liniger Lodge No. 268, Omaha, Nebr., receiving degrees on March 22, April 26 and May 24, 1946. 32° AASR (SJ) and KCCH at Omaha, Nebr.

Karl, Prince of Hesse–Cassel (1744–1836) Son of Landgrave Frederick II and Mary, daughter of King George II of England. He became a Mason in 1775, and in 1786 assumed the title of provincial grand master for Denmark. In 1792 he was grand master general of Denmark. His position was recognized by the Grand Lodge of England in 1793, when he was appointed provincial grand master of Denmark and Norway. He participated fully in the maelstrom of rites, orders, and degrees flourishing at that time and was connected with the continental Rosicrucians. During the decline of the strict observance rite, he founded several lodges which were considered as clandestine. He maintained his interest in Masonry and allied subjects until his death in 1836, at the age of 92. He received his appointment as grand master general from Christian VII, q.v., King of Denmark. He was followed in this office – by the crown prince who later became Christian VIII, q.v.

Karl August (1757–1828) Duke of Saxe–Weimar, 1758–1815, and grand duke, 1815–28. Educated by his mother, Amalia. He made the acquaintance of Goethe, q.v., in 1774, and remained his lifelong friend. His court was the center of German literary leaders including Goethe, Schiller, Herder, Wieland and others. He joined the Prussian army in 1786, and remained until Jena in 1806. He joined the coalition against the French in 1813–15, and was influential at the Congress of Vienna in 1815. He was an advanced liberal in politics. He was initiated in the Lodge “Amalia” in 1782.

Karl Ludwig Friedrich (1741–1816) Duke of Mecklenburg–Strelitz, 1794–1815. Entered the English army and became a lieutenant general and governor of Hanover. He was initiated in 1766, and entered the rite of strict observance in 1767, becoming Superior et Protector Ordinis of Hanover in 1772. In 1780, after the decline of the strict observance, he entered regular Freemasonry anew and was elected patron of the United Grand Lodges of Brunswick in the duchy of Mecklemburg. In 1806 he was appointed English provincial grand master in the province of Hanover, and he there formed one of the rare Royal Arch chapters that existed in Germany.

Karl Wilhelm Friedrich (1736–1806) Margrave of Brandenburg-Anspach. He was initiated in 1754, and in 1766 signed the act of strict observance in favor of unknown superiors. After 1769 he transferred the lodge Zur Sonne from Bayreuth to Anspach.

Benjamin Kavanaugh (1805–1888) Missionary to the Indians and first grand master of Grand Lodge of Wisconsin. Born in Kentucky, he was a versatile man who was by turn a bookbinder, a tanner, a flatboat-man, a preacher, an editor, an author of books on astronomy and geology, and finally a physician. He entered the fraternity at the insistence of his mother. He was raised by the grand master of Kentucky in Winchester in 1840, and affiliated with Naphtali Lodge No. 25, St. Louis Mo.—in 1841. While there he established a mission to the Sioux and Chippewa Indians under the Illinois Conference of the Methodist church, and settled in Platteville, Wis. with his family. On Jan. 10, 1843 a charter for Melody lodge of that city (No. 2) from the Grand Lodge of Missouri, named him master. In 1844–45 he became the first grand master of the Grand Lodge of Wisconsin, but moved to Kentucky in the second year of his term. During the Civil War he served as a chaplain and surgeon with the Confederate Army, being a resident of Texas at that time. d. July 3, 1888 in Boonsboro, Ky. He was buried at Mt. Sterling, Ky. and in 1936 the Grand Lodge of Wisconsin erected a monument to him there.

James Keith (?-?) Lieutenant General in Russian Army under Peter II. A Scotsman, he was provincial grand master of Russia under the Grand Lodge of England. He is sometimes confused with his cousin, James Keith, whose brother, John Keith, Earl of Kintore, was grand master in 1740. James was the son of William, 9th Earl of Marischal and brother of George, 10th Earl of Marischal. A great affection existed between the brothers as they were both forced to flee Britain due to their participation in the rebellion on the Pretender's side. Their estates were seized and given to his cousin, John, Earl of Kintore. James entered the services of the king of Spain, but being a staunch Protestant, found that he could not continue in the service of the Roman Catholic king, although the latter appreciated him and recommended him to Peter II of Russia. The Spanish king presented him with a thousand crowns when he left and begged him to return if he found it possible to throw his lot with the Roman Catholic Church. In Feb., 1740, James revisited London, and was presented to George II, whom he acknowledged as his lawful sovereign. He also was present at the communication of the Grand Lodge of England held March 28, 1740 which his cousin, John, the Earl of Kintore, who had received his estates, presided over as grand master. His name is recorded on the minutes as "James Keith, Esq; Lieutenant General in the Service of Russia." His appointment as provincial grand master of Russia, therefore, would have been at the hands of his cousin, the grand master for 1740-41. He distinguished himself in the Russian wars against the Turks and Sweden. Russian Masons sang a song composed in his honor, praising him for "building the Temple to Wisdom," for "lighting the sacred fire," and for "establishing brotherhood.” He was frequently mentioned by Carlyle in his voluminous Life of Frederick the Great.

He began writing verse and tales while in India, and continued after his return to England in 1889. Among his best known works are Plain Tales from the Hills; In Black and White; The Story of the Gadsbys; Under the Deodars; Phantom 'Rickshaw; Wee Willie Winkie; Life's Handicap; The Light That Failed; Barrack–Room Ballads; The Jungle Book; Second Jungle Book; The Seven Seas; Captains Courageous; Just So Stories for Little Children; and many others. His writings contained frequent Masonic references, particularly The Man Who Would Be King from Wee Willie Winkie (1889); In the Interests of the Brethren from Debits and Credits (1926); The Widow At Windsor from Barrack Room Ballads (1892). The most famous is his Mother Lodge from The Seven Seas (1896). He was initiated in Hope and Perseverance Lodge No. 782, Lahore, Punjab, India in 1886, by a special dispensation, because he was only 20 years and six months old. Strange to say, he recorded his own raising in the minutes as he was immediately elected secretary of the lodge. He wrote the following about his initiation which appeared in The Freemason (London) on March 28, 1925: "I was secretary for some years of Hope and Perseverance No. 782, E.C., Lahore, which included Brethren of at least four creeds. I was entered by a member of Brahma Somaj, a Hindu; passed by a Mohammedan, and raised by an Englishman. Our Tyler was an Indian Jew. We met, of course, on the level, and the only difference anyone would notice was that at our banquets, some of the Brethren, who were debarred by caste rules from eating food not ceremonially prepared, sat over empty plates.” He received his Mark Master degree in the Mark Lodge, “Fidelity” on April 12, 1887 and Royal Ark Mariners degree in the Lodge “Mt. Ararat” at Lahore, April 17, 1888. He affiliated with the Independence and Philanthropy Lodge No. 391, Allahabad, Bengal in 1888. He later fought at Brandywine, Monmouth, Elk River, and Germantown. At Elk River he received seven saber cuts in the head and was left on the field as dead. In all he was in 17 battles and many skirmishes; he received 13 wounds. He was discharged as an ensign, August 23, 1782. He later became a colonel in the 17th regiment of the Connecticut militia. He presented his sword to St. Paul's Lodge, Litchfield, Conn., where it is now proudly displayed. He studied law, and the issuance of the "Kirby Reports" in 1789, on cases of the superior court of Conn., gave him the distinction of publishing the first volume of law reports issued in America. He was an early member of the Society of Cincinnati, and secretary of the Conn. branch. He was appointed federal revenue collector for Conn. in 1802, and was named land commissioner of the Miss. Territory and district judge of same. He arrived in January, 1804, coming by boat from Conn. via New Orleans and Fort Stoddert, Ala. Here he died, Oct. 4, 1804, and was buried in a grave now forgotten. He became a member of St. Paul's Lodge No. 11, Litchfield, Conn., in 1781, but it is not known if this is his original lodge. It is said that he had a part in organizing a lodge at Woodbury, Conn. in 1782. On Dec. 27, 1871, he was elected secretary of St. Paul's Lodge. Representing that lodge at the convention of July 8, 1789 to form the Grand Lodge of Conn., he was elected its secretary. He was grand senior warden of that grand lodge from 1795-97. He served three terms as master of his own lodge. Little is known of his chapter record except that he was a member of the Mark Lodge located at New Town, Conn., and was a signer of the by-laws of Hiram Chapter No. 1 of the same city, March 31, 1792. When the Grand Chapter of Connecticut was organized at Hartford, May 17, 1798, Kirby was elected first grand high priest. He was also elected first general grand high priest in 1798, serving until his death in 1804. He was thus grand high priest and general grand high priest at the same time. Samuel Kirkland (1741–1808) Revolutionary patriot, clergyman, and missionary to Indians of the Six Nations. b. Dec. 1, 1741 in Norwich, Conn. He was the son of the Rev. Daniel Kirtland, but Samuel restored the old spelling of the family name. Graduate of Princeton in 1765, leaving that year as an Indian missionary to the Six Nations. He remained with the tribes a year and a half, and returned to Conn. where he was commissioned Indian missionary. He then went to Oneida and continued to labor among the tribes, with occasional interruptions, for more than 40 years. He spoke the Mohawk and Seneca languages, and had the profound respect of the Indians. During the Revolution he was active in attempting to preserve the neutrality of the Indians, holding many councils with them. After the Battle of Lexington, however, he succeeded in attaching the Oneidas to the patriot cause, although the other tribes, through the influence of Sir William Johnson, q.v., and Chief Joseph Brant, q.v., joined the British. Washington wrote to Congress in 1775: "I cannot but intimate my sense of the importance of Mr. Kirkland's station, and of the great advantages which have and may result to the united colonies from his situation being made respectable. All accounts agree that much of the favorable disposition shown by the Indians may be ascribed to his labor and influence." Kirkland was initiated in St. Patrick's Lodge No. 8, Johnstown, N.Y., Feb. 7, 1767. It was this lodge that furnished many famous brethren to both sides of the Revolution, including the Johnson's, Herkimer's, and Butler's, q.v. Kirkland became a brigade chaplain to General John Sullivan, q.v., in 1779, and accompanied him on the Susquehanna expedition. The remainder of the war he was chaplain to the Continental forces at Fort Schuyler and at Stockbridge, Mass. He resumed his work among the Indians after peace was declared, and in 1785 received a liberal grant of land from congress in consideration of his services. In 1788 the Indians and the state of New York added to this gift a large and valuable tract, on which he settled and founded the present town of Kirkland. In 1791 he made a trip with 40 warriors to Philadelphia and appeared before congress in order to consult as to the best method of introducing western civilization among the tribes. In 1793 he established the Hamilton Oneida College (now Hamilton College), an institution for the education of American and Indian youth. d. Feb. 28, 1808.

Robert Kirkwood (1730–1791) American Revolutionary War hero. b. in 1730 near Newark, Del. Christopher Ward, in his book, The Delaware Continentals, referred to him as the “American Diomedes.” Light Horse Harry Lee, q.v., said “No regiment in the army surpassed it in soldiership. It was commanded by Capt. Kirkwood, who passed through the war with high reputation.” He entered the Army as a lieutenant and participated in the battles of Long Island, Trenton, and Princeton. Early in 1777 he was commissioned captain, and engaged in all the important battles of the three following campaigns. In 1780 he accompanied General Horatio Gates, q.v., to the south, where his outfit suffered severely at the Battle of Camden. The remnant that survived was attached under Kirkwood to General Henry Lee’s light infantry, and Kirkwood commanded it at Cowpens, Guilford, Eutaw, and the other battles of this campaign, and was breveted major. In all he took part in 33 battles. He migrated to Ohio after the war, settling nearly opposite Wheeling. He was killed in the Battle of Miami, Nov. 4, 1791. Kirkwood was raised in Lodge No. 18 of Dover, Del. (under Penn. constitution) on June 11, 1782.

Adolph Franz Freiderich Ludwig, Baron Von Knigge (1752–1796) German author. b. Oct. 16, 1752 at Brendenbeck, near Hanover. He wrote novels and stories, and a translation of Mozart's Figaro (1791). His most popular non-Masonic work was On Conversation With Men. Although he was one of the most prominent Freemasons of his time, his association with the fraternity would wax from hot to cold, and he finally became an anti-Mason. He was initiated Jan. 20, 1772, in a lodge of the Strict Observance rite at Cassel, but was not impressed with the institution, writing Prince Charles of Hesse, q.v., that its ceremonies were “absurd, juggling tricks.” In 1780 he entered the Order of the Illuminati, which had been set up by Weishaupt, q.v., as a grandiose new society of his own, with vague but vast aims. Among the Illuminati, Knigge was known as Philo. When he appealed to Weishaupt for more light, the latter confessed that the higher degrees did not exist except in his own brain, and influenced Knigge to extend the system to the highest degrees, promising him full authority. Knigge secured the aid of Bode, q.v., and was quite successful in propagating the rite. When Weishaupt interfered, Knigge became disgusted and withdrew from the order, and soon afterwards entirely from Freemasonry. His Masonic books included: On the Jesuits, Freemasons and Rosicrucians; Essay on Freemasonry, and Contribution Towards the Latest History of the Order of Freemasons. His last Masonic book was entitled Philo's Final Declaration (1788). d. May 6, 1796.

Henry Knox (1750–1806) Major General in American Revolution and 1st Secretary of War under Washington. b. July 25, 1750 in Boston, Mass. Orphaned at age of 12, he was apprenticed to a bookseller, and in 1771 opened the “London Book Store” in Boston when he was 21. He attempted to prevent the Boston Massacre of 1770. His military knowledge was gained from the textbooks which he supplied to British officers. He joined the American forces at the outbreak of the war and fought at Bunker Hill. He planned the defenses of the camps before Boston, and brought much needed artillery from Lake George and the border. At Trenton he crossed the river before the main body and rendered such service that he was made brigadier general and chief of artillery in the Continental Army. He was present at Princeton, Monmouth, and Yorktown; and after the surrender of Cornwallis was made major general (1781). He took the initial steps in creating the U.S. Military Academy in 1779; was a member of the court-martial which tried Major Andre in 1780; and commanded West Point in 1782. He was one of Washington's most trusted advisors and a close personal friend. In April, 1783 he drafted the plan of a society to be formed by American and French officers of the Revolution, to be called the Cincinnati. He was first secretary-general of the society from 1783-99, and vice president in 1805. He was secretary of War in 1785-94, being the first to hold that office under the Federal government. His plan to organize a national militia system was thwarted by the Republicans. His Masonic membership is hazy, but he is thought to have been a member of St. John's Regimental Lodge at Morristown, N.J., which was warranted in 1775. He is credited with helping to constitute Washington Lodge at West Point in 1779, and is recorded as a visitor to Williamsburg Lodge No. 6, Williamsburg, Va.; St. John's Lodge, Boston; Amity Lodge No. 6, Camden, Maine; and Orient No. 15, Thomaston, Maine. Carl Christian F. Krause (1781–1832) German Philosopher and Masonic author. b. May 6, 1781 in Eisenberg, Germany. Received Doctor of Philosophy degree in 1801, and taught at U. of Jena until 1805, when he moved to Dresden, where he remained until 1813. He sought to purify the German language, and advocated a union of mankind to work toward a goal of universal development. He also created the “all-in-God” philosophical system of pantheism—the doctrine that God includes the world as a part, though not the whole, of His being. He was initiated in the Lodge Archimedes in 1805. The German craft at this time was only for the elect, the noble, the rich, and the great, hence Masonic literature was scarce, poor, and usually incorrect. Krause, an intelligent man, began to write the Masonic literature he could not find. As orator of the Lodge of the Three Swords, he placed his ideas before the lodge and they were well received. But when he proposed to put his ideas into print, to make Freemasonry the germinating ground of a world order for peace and prosperity, his Masonic superiors became frightened. When he did publish his Three Oldest Documents of the Brotherhood of Freemasons, he ran into Masonic grief. The three German grand lodges tried to buy his work to destroy it, but failing in that he was expelled from Freemasonry and persecuted by Freemasons for the rest of his life. Today, Krause stands as perhaps the greatest gift of German Freemasonry to the Masonic world. His progressive mind was ahead of his time. d. Sept. 27, 1832.

Marquis de Lafayette (1757–1834) French statesman and officer; hero of the American Revolution. His name in full was Marie Joseph Paul Yves Roch Gilbert de Motier. b. Sept. 6, 1757 in the family castle "Chavaniac" at Auvergne, France. His father, a soldier, had died at the Battle of Minden a few weeks before his birth, and his mother died in 1770, leaving him a vast estate. He refused a prominent position in the French court to become a soldier in 1771. He withdrew from the service in 1776, outfitted his own ship, Victoire, and sailed with 15 other young adventurers, including Baron de Kalb, q.v., to fight with the American colonists against England. At first their services were refused by congress, but noting Lafayette's full pocketbook, connections at the French court, and his offer to serve without pay, he was commissioned a major general in the Continental Army on July 31, 1777. He became an intimate associate of Washington. At Brandywine he was severely wounded while rallying the American forces from a retreat. He was appointed to lead an expedition to invade Canada, but the plan was never carried out, for lack of funds. He was with Washington at Valley Forge; served on the court martial that tried Major Andre; stationed at Tappan, N.Y.; served in Virginia; and was at the Battle of Yorktown and the surrender of Cornwallis. In 1778–80 he was on furlough in France to assist Franklin in obtaining financial aid from France for the colonists. Lafayette returned to France in Dec. 1781, almost as soon as the war had been won. He was now the hero of two nations, both America and France. He became a member of the French national assembly in 1789, where he showed his liberal sympathies. He was instrumental in bringing about the adoption of the present French tri-colored flag, and a founder of the Club of the Feuillants, the conservative liberals who sought to establish a constitutional monarchy in 1790. He commanded an army in the war with Austria, but when he opposed further advance of the Jacobites, he was declared a traitor by the national assembly. He fled to Flanders and was imprisoned by the Austrians from 1792–97. His flight probably saved his life as his compatriots were executed during his imprisonment. He returned to France in 1799, but took no part in politics, being opposed to Napoleon's policies. He was a member of the chamber of deputies in 1815, 1818–24, and a leader of the opposition from 1825–30. He commanded the national guard in the revolution of 1830. He returned to America for his first visit of five months in 1784. It was on this visit that he presented Washington the Masonic apron made by Madame Lafayette. It is now in the possession of the Grand Lodge of Pa. He returned again in 1824–25, at the invitation of a grateful congress, which had voted him $200,000. This time he toured all the 25 states and received more Masonic honors than any Freemason before or since. From Maine to Georgia, and Missouri to Louisiana, lodges, chapters, councils, commanderies, scottish rite and grand lodges vied with each other in conferring honorary degrees, citations, gifts and memberships. Strangely enough, it is not known where or when he received his degrees. Some say it was in an army lodge in Morristown, N.J. Others feel it was in the winter of 1777 at Valley Forge. In addressing the Grand Lodge of Tennessee on May 4, 1825, Lafayette, himself, stated that he was initiated before he ever came to America. He would have been under 21, but at that time “Lewis” Masons (under age) were being raised in France. A Spanish Masonic history states that he was a member of Loge La Candeur of Paris, founded in 1775. A French Masonic history says his name is among the lists of members of Loge Contrat Social of Paris between the years 1773 and 1791. He received the chapter degrees in Jerusalem Chapter No. 8, R.A.M., New York City, Sept. 12, 1824. His son, George Washington Lafayette, received them in the same chapter four days earlier. He was knighted in Morton Commandery No. 4, K.T. in joint conclave with Columbian Commandery No. 1 of N.Y.C. He received the Scottish Rite degrees in the Cerneau Supreme Council of N.Y., and was made 33° and honorary grand commander of that body. The Supreme Council of France AASR elected him a member, Nov. 21, 1830. More than 75 Masonic bodies in the U.S. have been named after him, including 39 lodges, 18 chapters, 4 councils, 4 commanderies, and 7 Scottish rite bodies. d. May 20, 1834.

Ruby Laffoon (1869–1941) Governor of Kentucky, 1931–35. b. Jan. 15, 1869 at Madisonville, Ky. Began practice of law at Madisonville in 1892. He served terms as county attorney and circuit judge. Member and past master of Madisonville Lodge No. 143, Madisonville, Ky. d. May 1, 1941.

Robert M. La Follette (1855–1925) Governor of Wisconsin, 1901–1905, and U.S. Senator, 1905–1929. b. June 14, 1855 in Primrose, Wis. Graduate of U. of Wisconsin in 1879, he was admitted to the bar in 1880. He was U.S. congressman from the 3rd Wis. dist. to the 49th through 51st congresses (1885–91). He resigned his governorship in 1905 to become U.S. senator, although he had been elected as governor for term of 1905–07. In 1904 he led the movement to nominate all candidates by direct vote. He is represented in Statuary Hall of the U.S. Capital. He became a member of Madison Lodge No. 5, in 1894; Madison Chapter No. 4, R.A.M. in 1895 and Robert McCoy Commandery No. 3, K.T., in 1897, all of Madison, Wis. Received 32° AASR in Wisconsin Consistory on April 10, 1902. Member of Tripoli Shrine Temple of Milwaukee. d. June 18, 1925.

Henri Lafontaine (1854–1943) Belgian Senator and recipient of Nobel Peace Prize in 1913. A lawyer and politician, he was senator in 1895. He began law practice in 1910 in New York City. A member of the 65th and 66th U.S.

congresses (1917–19) and 68–72nd congresses (1923–33). La Guardia served three terms as mayor of New York City, from 1934–45. In 1946 he was special U.S. ambassador to Brazil, and director general of the UNRRA the same year. In WWI he was in the U.S. Air Service, achieving the rank of major. He commanded the 8th Centre Aviation School and was attached to night and day bombing squadrons on the Italian front. He was raised in Garibaldi Lodge No. 542, N.Y.C. in 1913, and received a life membership in that lodge on Oct. 17, 1933. d. Sept. 20, 1947.

Guido Laj (?–1948) Grand Master of the Grand Orient of Italy immediately following WWII. Dr. Laj was selected by the Allied governments to be vice mayor of Rome when they occupied it. It was largely through his efforts that the Italian Freemasons were once again able to start work after years of persecution under Mussolini. The officers of the old grand lodge, which had been dissolved in 1925, had suffered heavily. Only 16 of the 22 were alive. Some had undergone imprisonment, banishment, and even death. Dr. Laj was elected grand master on Nov. 18, 1945. d. Nov. 1948.

From 1783 he was repeatedly a member of the legislature and a delegate to Continental Congress. In March, 1788, he became governor of N.H. and was elected U.S. senator in 1789, holding that office until 1801. He declined the office of secretary of the Navy, and also the nomination for vice president on the Republican ticket. He was governor of N.H. again from 1805–12, with the exception of two years. He is referred to as a Mason, but his Masonic record has not been definitely traced. It probably would have been in St. John's Lodge No. 1 of Portsmouth where his brother Woodbury held membership. d. Sept. 18, 1819. Definitely not a member.

Woodbury Langdon (1739–1805) Delegate to Continental Congress, and judge of supreme court of New Hampshire. b. in 1739 in Portsmouth, N.H. He was the brother of John Langdon, the constitution signer. He received a public school education and engaged in mercantile pursuits. Active in pre-Revolutionary movements. He was a delegate from N.H. to the congress of 1779–80, and member of the executive council in 1781–84. He was judge of the supreme court of N.H. in 1782, and again from 1786–90. A member of St. John's Lodge No. 1, Portsmouth, he was initiated Feb. 10, 1761. d. Jan. 13, 1805.

Baroness Chanowsky de Langendorf A member of a woman's auxiliary lodge. According to the records of the Lodge Sincerite, held at Klattau, Bohemia, the charter of which was recalled in Sept., 1789, a woman's lodge was formed as an auxiliary, the membership of which was confined to the wives of the members of the parent lodge. An exception to this rule was made in favor of the baroness, who was described as "the most honest, virtuous and fairest lady." This female lodge worked under the name of the "Three Crowned Hearts," but with the exception of its by-laws, no records of any kind remain. A Master Mason managed the lodge as its master, the office of treasurer also being filled by a man. The by-laws stipulated that the members should be "God-fearing, humble, discreet, modest, honest, of righteous heart, obliging as well as charitably inclined towards the poor." It led to the downfall of the parent lodge whose members were mainly army officers of the Prince Coburg Regiment of the Dragoons.

Nathaniel P. Langford (1832–1911) First Superintendent of Yellowstone National Park and organizer of the vigilante movement in the West. b. Aug. 9, 1832 in Westmoreland, N.Y. Lived at St. Paul, Minn., but left there in June, 1862 for the Oregon gold fields with the James L. Fisk expedition. En route, he and two other Masons went through the ceremony of opening and closing a Masonic lodge on the summit of the Rocky Mountains at a point some 20 miles west of the present capital of Montana. The occasion is commemorated by a painting in the Masonic library building in Helena. Arriving at Gold Creek, the point of the first discovery of gold in what became Montana, Langford went to Bannack, and thence to Virginia City. In the turbulent mining camps of Bannack, he lived a perilous life, being an advocate of public peace and security. He was the leader in the vigilante movement which established respect for law and order and in his Vigilante Days and Ways (1890) he relates how the Craft had a hand in this movement. He conducted the first Masonic funeral in Bannack, Nov. 13, 1862. Observing that there were 76 Freemasons present on the occasion he secured a dispensation for a lodge there, but by the time it had arrived, most of the inhabitants had gone to the great strike at Virginia City. He was one of the Washburn party of 1870 that discovered the geysers of Yellowstone Park, and he led in the work which resulted in the dedication of the park, serving as its first superintendent from 1872–77. Washburn, q.v., was a Mason and at the time of the expedition, Langford was grand master of Montana. Also with them was Cornelius Hedges, the deputy grand master, who later became grand master, and grand secretary for 36 years. Hedges, q.v., became known as the “father” of the national parks. Langford was appointed U.S. revenue collector on the creation of the Territory of Montana in 1864. President Johnson named him as governor of the territory in Jan. 1869, but as the senate was feuding with Johnson, it refused to confirm any of his appointments. Langford later became national bank examiner for the Pacific Coast (1872–84). He returned to St. Paul before his death. He was a member of Pacific Lodge No. 10, St. Paul, Minn., and later affiliated with Helena Lodge No. 3, Helena, Montana, serving as its second master in 1867. He participated in forming the Grand Lodge of Montana in Jan., 1866, and was its first grand historian. Elected senior warden in 1868, he was grand master in 1869–70. It appears that he received the chapter degrees, including Most Excellent Master, in Minn., but was exalted in Virginia City Royal Arch Chapter, U.D. d. 1911.

Peter Lassen (1800–1859) California pioneer. b. Oct. 31, 1800 in Copenhagen, Denmark. Learned the blacksmith's trade under his uncle and opened a shop of his own at Copenhagen in 1827. Left for America in Oct., 1830, working his trade at Boston, St. Louis, and later to Keytesville, Mo. While in Missouri he was a member of Warren Lodge No. 74 of Keytesville. In 1839 he joined an immigrant party bound for Oregon City, and in July, 1840 he sailed from Oregon to Calif. aboard the Lausanne. He wandered about Calif. from Sutter's to San Francisco to San Jose. In 1843 he was living by himself on the Cosumnes River. In 1844 he became a Mexican citizen. During the spring of 1846 General Fremont stayed at Lassen's house, and it is significant that Lassen named the little settlement he established on Deer Creek, "Benton City," after Fremont's father-in-law, Thomas Hart Benton, q.v. June, 1847 saw Lassen returning to St. Joseph, Mo. with Commodore Stockton's party. Spending the winter in Mo., he set out again for California, leading an immigrant train of 12 wagons. With them was Rev. Saschel Woods, q.v., member of Wakanda Lodge No. 52 of Carrollton, Mo. who was carrying the Mo. charter for Western Star Lodge No. 98 (now 1) to be opened at Lassen's "Benton City." It is often erroneously stated that Lassen brought the first charter to Calif. The route of the expedition was an impracticable one and has since been dubbed the "Lassen Route." During the gold excitement of 1849-50 the population of Benton City dwindled to almost nothing. Woods was first master of Western Star Lodge and Lassen first junior warden. Lassen lost his ranch in a bad financial deal, and then moved to the Honey Lake region of what is now Lassen Co. While prospecting for a silver mine, he was shot and killed by an Indian in April, 1859. In May, 1862 Lassen Lodge No. 149 was chartered at Honey Lake.

Milton S. Latham (1827-1882) Governor of California, 1860

and U.S. Senator from California, 1860–63. b. in Columbus, Ohio. He was graduated from Jefferson Coll. (Pa.) in 1845. After a brief sojourn in Alabama, where he studied law, and became a court clerk, he came to Calif. sometime during the winter of 1840–50. He was elected to U.S. congress as a representative in 1852, and again in 1854. From 1857–60 he was collector of the Port of San Francisco. His term as governor only lasted five days after his inauguration on Jan. 9, 1860. (He was succeeded by the lieutenant governor, John G. Downey, q.v.), as he resigned to accept appointment as U.S. senator. In 1867 he became president of the California Pacific Railroad Co., which planned a line from Benicia to Sacramento and Marysville, in opposition to the Central Pacific. In 1871, however, Latham and the stockholders sold out to their competition. He became a member of Washington Lodge No. 20 of Sacramento, Calif. in 1859, and withdrew in 1863. He was an early Scottish Rite member in California, being an active 33° of the southern jurisdiction and at one time grand treasurer of the California bodies. d. in New York City March 4, 1882.

Benjamin H. Latrobe (1764–1820) Sometimes called “father of architecture in America.” b. May 1, 1764 in Yorkshire, England. Educated in U. of Leipsic and entered Prussian army; was twice wounded. He returned to England, and, in 1789, was made surveyor of the public offices and engineer of London. He arrived at Norfolk, Va. on May 20, 1796, and soon became an engineer of the James River and Appomattox Canal, building the penitentiary in Richmond, and many private mansions. He moved to Philadelphia in 1798, where he designed the Bank of Pa., Bank of the U.S., and planned and installed the first water system in the U.S. In Baltimore he was the architect of the Roman Catholic cathedral, and customs house. Jefferson appointed him surveyor of public buildings in 1802. He designed the south wing of the U.S. Capitol, made alterations in the White House, remodeled the patent office, and drew plans for the Marine Hospital. He also worked on the plans for the Chesapeake and Delaware Canal, residing alternately in New Castle and Wilmington until 1808, when he moved to Washington. In 1812 he went into partnership with Robert Fulton, q.v., and Robert R. Livingston, q.v., to build steamboats for the navigation of the upper Ohio River, but lost his fortune on the failure of the enterprise. After the destruction of the Capitol by the British in 1814, Latrobe was engaged to rebuild it (1815–17). At the time of his death on Sept. 3, 1820 he was engaged in the construction of a water system for New Orleans, La. He was initiated in the Lodge of Antiquity No. 2, London, in 1788. He served as junior warden of the same in 1789–90. In America he affiliated with Jerusalem Lodge No. 54, Richmond, Va. His son was John H. B. Latrobe, q.v.

John H. B. Latrobe (1803–1891) Lawyer, inventor, and humanitarian. b. May 4, 1803 in Philadelphia, Pa. the son of Benjamin H. Latrobe, q.v., the famous American architect. He was the inventor of the "Latrobe Stove," sometimes called the "Baltimore heater" of which thousands were sold in Baltimore alone. He was the founder of the Maryland Institute, and was closely identified with the American Colonization Society from 1824. The aim of the society was to return Negro slaves to their native land. As its president, he prepared the first map of Liberia, and, with General Harper, gave many place-names to that country. He was president of the board of visitors of West Point, and president of the Maryland Historical Society. He became a member of Winder Lodge No. 77, Baltimore, Jan. 26, 1825, and was grand master of the Grand Lodge of Maryland from 1870–78. A member of Phoenix Chapter No. 7, R.A.M., Baltimore, he was high priest in 1829–30, and 1836–39. He received the 33° AASR (SJ) in 1872. d. Sept. 11, 1891.

Leopold (see Duke of Albany).

Leopold I (1790–1865) First King of independent Belgium (1831–65). Fourth son of Francis Frederick, Duke of Saxe-Coburg-Saalfeld, his original name was Georges Chretien Frederic. He was an uncle of Queen Victoria of England. He served under Alexander I, q.v., in the Russian Army from 1805–14, and fought at Lutzen, Bautzen, and Leipzig. In 1830 he refused the throne of Greece, but accepted the Belgian throne the following year on its separation from Holland. Although himself a Protestant, he was an upholder of the Catholic church in Belgium, because he thought it best that the people should maintain the religion in which they were born. He was initiated in the Lodge of Esperance at Berne, Switzerland in 1813, when 23. About the time of his marriage to Princess Charlotte of England in 1816, or shortly thereafter, he joined an English lodge and “took an active part in all its proceedings.” He lived in England from 1817–30. When he became King of Belgium, he took the Craft under his official protection. When a widower, on all his visits to Germany, he took part in Masonry. As king, however, he was unable to attend the lodges, but frequently inquired into their workings and always expressed his pleasure at their prosperity. At his death the Grand Orient of Belgium adopted this resolution: "Masonry has just suffered a cruel loss in the death of one of the most illustrious members, who, called to the throne by the free and enlightened suffrages of the Belgian people, never abnegated his title of Mason, but on the contrary, extended to us his powerful protection. We have lost an eminent brother, who, faithful to his oath has during a reign of five and 30 years, practiced with love and sincerity those grand principles of humanity which constitute the basis of our Order, thus acquiring the esteem and friendship of his brethren, the veneration of the Belgian people, and the respect and admiration of his contemporaries. Leopold, King of the Belgians, who had acquired the grade of Chev. K.D., 30°, died with the calm and serenity of a just man, and with the stoicism of a true Mason. . . . Our noble brother has left us a noble example to follow."

Leopold II (1747–1792) Holy Roman Emperor, 1790–92, who prohibited Masonic meetings when he ascended the throne. His father, Francis I, q.v., was a Freemason. His mother was Maria Theresa. He was a brother of Joseph II, q.v., whom he succeeded on the throne. From 1765–90 he was grand duke of Tuscany as Leopold I. His successor, Francis II, q.v., the last Holy Roman Emperor, went even farther in suppressing Freemasonry.

Meriwether Lewis (1774–1809) American explorer and governor of Louisiana Territory, 1807–09. b. Aug. 18, 1774 near Charlottesville, Va. He served with the troops in the “Whiskey Insurrection” in 1794, and entered the regular service the following year, becoming a captain in 1800. In 1800–03 he was private secretary to President Jefferson, who, in the latter year, named him to command the expedition to explore the newly acquired Louisiana purchase. He set out in the summer of 1803 from St. Louis, accompanied by his associate, Capt. Wil– Liam Clark, q.v. They reached the mouth of the

Columbia on Nov. 15, 1805, going by way of the Missouri to its source, crossing the Great Divide, and then descending the Kooskoosky and Columbia. The distance was more than 4,000 miles. They wintered on the Columbia, and then retraced their steps and reached St. Louis in Sept., 1806. Congress made grants of land to all the men on the expedition. Lewis was made governor of the Louisiana Territory, which at that time included all the land of the purchase except the present state of Louisiana. Lewis petitioned Door to Virtue Lodge No. 44, Albemarle Co., Va. on Dec. 31, 1796, was initiated, Jan. 28, 1797, and the following evening received the other two degrees. On April 2, 1792 he received the degree of Past Master in this lodge. He received the Royal Arch Degree in Staunton Lodge No. 13, and although the exact date is not known, there is a diploma in the Library of Congress dated Oct. 31, 1799. The Door to Virtue Lodge went out of existence in 1801, and most members transferred to Widow's Son Lodge No. 60, which first met at Milton, and later in Charlottesville. It is thought that Lewis was one of those who transferred. It is certain, however, that he was a member of Staunton Lodge No. 13, Staunton, Va., as it was here that he received the Royal Arch Degree, and the original proceedings of the Grand Lodge of Virginia show that he withdrew from this lodge about 1800. The next Masonic reference is the application for a dispensation dated Aug. 2, 1808 and addressed to the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania, from a number of brethren residing in St. Louis. The signature of Meriwether Lewis heads the application and he is recommended as a "past master to be the first master." St. Louis Lodge No. 111 was constituted by Judge Otho Shrader, q.v., of St. Genevieve, Mo. on Nov 8, 1808, with Governor Lewis being installed as master of this first St. Louis lodge. Shortly after Lewis had concluded his year as master, he left for Washington, D.C. While staying at a hostel on the Natchez trace, near the present city of Hoenwald, Tenn., he died of gunshot wounds. It is not known whether he had been robbed and killed or had committed suicide. He had long been subject to attacks of depression and hypochondria. d. Oct. 8, 1809.

Abraham Lincoln (1809–1865) Sixteenth President of the United States. Not a Mason, but there are several interesting Masonic references to him. On April 17, 1865, Tyrian Lodge No. 333 of Springfield, Ill. adopted the following resolution: "T h e first thought of a Mason should be, as his duty is, to trust in God.. . . Resolved, that the decision of President Lincoln to postpone his application for the honors of Masonry, lest his motives should be misconstrued, is in the highest degree honorable to his memory." In 1842 he was invited by a lodge to deliver the funeral oration of his good friend, Bowling Greene, but broke down in the middle of it and could not continue. In Oct. of 1860 Robert Morris, q.v., of Kentucky, called on Lincoln in Springfield, Ill., and in the course of conversation Morris referred to the fact that all Lincoln's opponents for president were Freemasons. Lincoln replied, "I am not a Freemason, Dr. Morris, though I have a great respect for the institution." At the time of his death many lodges and individual Masons were of the opinion that he was a member of the Craft. Friendship Lodge No. 84 of Hagerstown, Md. even held a lodge of sorrow on April 19, 1865, believing he was a Mason. Watertown Lodge No. 49, Watertown, N.Y. passed this resolution on April 19, 1865; "Resolved that Watertown Lodge No. 49 join in the funeral procession in honor of our late Brother, Abraham, President of the U.S." In 1865 a French Masonic magazine (Monde Maconnique) referred to him as a "member of the Grand Lodge of New York." Washington Commandery No. 1, K.T., Washington, D.C. did act as an escort at his funeral.

Benjamin Lincoln (1733–1810) Major General in American Revolution, and Secretary of War, 1781–84. b. Jan. 24, 1733 in

Hingham, Mass. He was a farmer until 1773. He was a member of the provincial congresses of Mass., serving as secretary. Active in organizing and training the Continental troops, he was appointed major general of militia in 1776. In June of that year he commanded the expedition that cleared Boston harbor of British vessels. He fought at the battles of Long Island, White Plains, and Fort Independence. He was commissioned major general in the regulars in 1777, on the recommendation of Washington. With generals Schuyler and Arnold, q.v., he operated against Burgoyne. He was with Gates, q.v., at Stillwater and commanded the right wing. He was severely wounded at the Battle of Bemis's Heights. In Sept., 1778 he was given command of the southern department and was eventually captured with his army at Charleston. Exchanged, he immediately joined Washington on the Hudson River, participated in the siege of Yorktown and was appointed by Washington to receive Cornwallis' sword of surrender. After the establishment of the Federal government, Washington named him collector of the port of Boston, a position which he held until about two years before his death. He was a member of the Mass. convention that ratified the U.S. Constitution, and was president of the Mass. Society of the Cincinnati from its organization until his death. He was much esteemed by General Washington. He received his degrees without fees ("complimented with the degrees this evening") in St. Andrew's Lodge of Boston on Dec. 25, 1780, and two days later was present at the St. John the Evangelist day meeting of the Grand Lodge of Mass. On June 24, 1785 there was a "Benjamin Lincoln" recorded as being present at the Grand Lodge of Mass. as a member of Rising Sun Lodge. d. May 9, 1810.

He made first flight as an air mail pilot from Chicago to St. Louis on April 15, 1926. In Feb. 1927 he went to San Diego to order and supervise construction of his famous plane, The Spirit of St. Louis. He took off from San Diego on May 10, 1927, and landed at Curtiss Field, L.I., N.Y. May 12th (with stopover at St. Louis) with flight time of 21 hours and 20 minutes, a record coast to coast flight. He took off alone on May 20, 1927, on a non-stop trans-Atlantic flight from Roosevelt Field, N.Y., via

Newfoundland, Ireland, and England, and landed at Paris, France the next day, covering an estimated distance of 3,600 miles in 33½ hours. He was given official reception by the French government, and later at Brussels and London. He was officially welcomed by President Coolidge on return and made air tour of 75 American cities to promote aeronautics under auspices of Guggenheim Foundation. On invitation from president of Mexico, he made a non-stop flight from Washington, D.C. to Mexico City, a distance of 2,100 miles in 27 hours and 10 minutes. He later visited Central America and the West Indies. At this time he was probably the best known person in the world. He made a survey of the U.S. plane production for the Army in 1939. In 1941 he toured the U.S. making radio speeches, urging the U.S. to keep out of war. He was bitterly attacked for this by American internationalists, and even branded as a traitor. Once at war, he gave valuable service to our Air Force as a technical adviser, and even flew combat missions in the Pacific as a civilian. He was awarded the Congressional Medal of Honor, the Pulitzer Prize, and many other honors. Lindbergh received his degrees in Keystone Lodge No. 243, St. Louis, Mo., June 9, Oct. 20, and Dec. 15, 1926, and is a life member of that lodge. He is also a member of St. Louis Chapter No. 33, National Sojourners, and of the Sciots at San Diego, Calif. On his history-making flight from New York to Paris, he wore the square and compasses on his jacket as a luck charm. The plane also bore a Masonic tag from his lodge. He was a delegate to the Continental Congress from Feb., 1780–June, 1782, and again in 1785. He was chief justice of the state supreme court from 1782–89, and, in 1788, was a member of the convention that adopted the Federal constitution. He was a U.S. representative in the 1st and 2nd congresses, serving from 1789–93. Raised in St. John's Lodge, Portsmouth, N.H. on April 12, 1758, he served as secretary of the lodge in 1759–62. d. May 18, 1803.

Edward Livingston (1764–1836) U.S. Congressman from New York; Mayor of New York City; U.S. Congressman from Louisiana; U.S. Senator from Louisiana; U.S. Secretary of State; U.S. Minister to France and fourth General Grand High Priest of the General Grand Chapter. b. May 26, 1764 in Clermont, N.Y., the younger brother of Robert R. Livingston, q.v., who negotiated the Louisiana purchase. Graduate of Princeton U. in 1781. Studied law with his brother, Robert, and was admitted to practice in 1785. His competitors were Aaron Burr, q.v., and Alexander Hamilton, q.v. He served three terms in Congress from New York (1794–1800) and was mayor of New York City from 1801–03. A yellow fever epidemic nearly ruined his health and while ill, two subordinates stole large amounts of government funds with which he had been entrusted. He then left for New Orleans (1804) in the newly established territory purchased by his brother. By 1826 he had repaid the government for the entire loss. He arrived in Louisiana with $100 in gold and a letter of credit for $1,000. It was Livingston who wrote the Civil and Criminal codes for Louisiana, drawn from French and Spanish channels, from Roman law as opposed to the English antecedents which are used by the other 47 states. He was elected to Congress from La. in 1882 and after three terms was elected U.S. senator, serving from 1828–31. He resigned from the Senate to becomesecretary of state in the cabinet of President Jackson, q.v. (1831–33). He later resigned this position to become U.S. minister to France, the position once occupied by his brother, Robert R. His original lodge is not known, but he came to Holland Lodge No. 8 of New York City by affiliation and was third junior warden of that lodge. He is listed in the returns of this lodge as a member as early as 1788. He was deputy grand master of the Grand Lodge of New York in 1801–03, relinquishing this position when he moved to New Orleans. He was charter member and first master of Louisiana Lodge No. 101, New Orleans. This lodge was chartered by the Grand Lodge of New York on Sept. 2, 1807, and after several reorganizations ultimately emerged as Perfect Union Lodge No. 1 of the Grand Lodge of Louisiana. Little is known of his Royal Arch affiliations—his chapter, or whether he ever served as high priest. He was elected general grand high priest while living in Louisiana and served from 1829 until his death in 1836, presiding over the convocations held in New York City, Baltimore, and Washington. d. May 23, 1836 in Rhinebeck, N.Y. where he had retired from public life.

Henry Beekman Livingston (1750–1831) Brigadier General, American Revolution. b. Nov. 9, 1750 at Rhinebeck, N.Y., a brother of Robert R., q.v., and Edward, q.v. In August, 1775 he raised a company of soldiers and accompanied his brother-in-law, General Richard Montgomery, q.v., on his expedition to Canada. For his services in the capture of Chambly in 1775, he was voted a sword of honor by congress in Dec. of that year. In Feb., 1776 he became aide-de-camp to General Philip Schuyler, q.v., and in Nov. was made colonel of the 4th battalion of New York volunteers. He resigned that command in 1779. He served with Lafayette in Rhode Island and was with him at Valley Forge. At the close of the war he was made brigadier general. He was one of the original members of the New York Society of the Cincinnati. A member of Masters Lodge No. 2 of Albany, he was admitted in 1777. d. Nov. 5, 1831.

James Livingston (1747–1832) Revolutionary soldier. b. March 27, 1747 in Canada. A cousin of Robert R., Edward and Henry B., qq.v. He was given command of a regiment of Canadian auxiliaries at the start of the war and was with General Richard Montgomery, q.v., at the capture of Fort Chambly. He later accompanied Montgomery on his invasion of Canada. He continued with the American Army as a colonel until the close of the war and was present at the Battle of Stillwater in 1777, and the surrender of Burgoyne the same year. He had command of Stony Point at the time of Benedict Arnold's, q.v., treason in 1780. Member of Solomon's Lodge No. 1, Poughkeepsie, N.Y. and master of same in 1777.

James E. Livingston Justice, Supreme Court of Alabama. b. March 17, 1892 in Notasulga, Ala. Graduate of U. of Alabama in 1918. Began law practice at Tuscaloosa. Associate justice of supreme court since 1940. Mason.

provincial assembly from that city. He was one of the committee of correspondence contacting Edmund Burke, q.v. He was a member of the first Continental Congress at Philadelphia in 1774, and continued a member of that body until his death. He was chosen state senator in 1777, and attended the first meeting of the first state legislature of N.Y. He was elected one of the first delegates to the first congress under the new federation. No proof of his Masonic membership exists, but there was a Philip J. Livingston present with Robert R. Livingston, q.v., at the first meeting of Solomon's Lodge No. 1 at Poughkeepsie, N.Y. on May 22, 1771. d. June 12, 1778.

Robert R. Livingston (1746–1813) U.S. Minister to France who negotiated the Louisiana Purchase for the United States. b. Nov. 27, 1746 in New York City. Graduate of Kings (now Columbia) Coll. in 1765. Admitted to the bar in 1773 and for a short time was in partnership with John Jay, q.v. He was elected to the provincial assembly of N.Y. from Dutchess Co. in 1775 and sent by that body as a delegate to the Continental Congress, where he was one of the committee of five (Jefferson, Adams, Franklin and Sherman) that drew up the Declaration of Independence. He was prevented from signing as he was called away to the meeting of the N.Y. provincial convention. He was then appointed first chancellor of N.Y. under the constitution and served in that capacity from 1777 to 1801. He was again a delegate to the Continental Congress in 1777, 1779–81. As chancellor, he administered the oath of office to George Washington upon his inauguration as the first president of the United States on April 30, 1789 in New York City, using the altar Bible of St. John's Lodge

No. 1 (then No. 2) for the ceremony. He held the office of secretary of foreign affairs for the U.S. in 1781–83, and, in 1788 was chairman of the N.Y. convention to consider the U.S. Constitution, whose adoption he was largely instrumental in procuring. He refused the post of minister to France in 1794, and later the secretaryship of the Navy under Jefferson, but in 1801 accepted appointment as U.S. minister to France. He was a close friend of Napoleon, q.v., and popular at court. The U.S. acquisition of the Louisiana Territory was due in the main part to Livingston. While in France he met Robert Fulton, q.v., and became interested in steam navigation. Returning to this country, the two secured the exclusive right to navigate the waterways of N.Y. provided they could build a boat that would make four miles an hour. The first boat of 30 tons could only do three, but in 1807 the Clermont made five. He was the first to introduce merino sheep into communities west of the Hudson River and brought gypsum into use as a fertilizer. Benjamin Franklin called him the “Cicero of America” and he was honored by his state as one of the two members of the National Hall of Fame in the U.S. Capitol. He was a member of Union Lodge, N.Y.C. and served as master of same. He was elected as first grand master of the Grand Lodge of New York in 1784, and served until 1801. As grand master, he constituted Solomon’s Lodge No. 1, Poughkeepsie, N.Y. on May 22, 1771. He relinquished his grandmastership on becoming minister to France. When the grand lodge presented him with a jewel on his retirement, he responded: “I shall wear, with pride and pleasure, the jewel with which the Fraternity has honored me, and consider it as a memorial of the pleasing connection which binds us to each other when the duties I owe the public shall have separated them from me. . . . My ardent prayers are for the present and future happiness of its members, and believe that I shall, in every situation in life, feel myself deeply interested in their prosperity, and that of the respectable and useful society over which they so worthily preside.” He was a brother of Edward and Henry B. Livingston, qq.v. d. Feb. 26, 1813.

Narciso Lopez (1799–1851) Spanish Major General; Governor of Valencia; Cuban martyr, and designer of the Cuban flag. b. in Caracas, Venezuela. He belonged to a rich family of merchants. Was made colonel in the Spanish army when only 21 years old, while fighting the Venezuelan uprising for independence. When the Spanish Army evacuated Venezuela, he went first to Cuba, and then to Spain, where he served in the first Carlist War and became known as “the first lancer in the army.” In 1836 he was made brigadier general, and in 1839, major general, and appointed governor of Valencia. He went to Cuba in 1841 with General Valdes who had been appointed governor general. When the governors changed he retired to private life, but joined the revolutionary party in 1848. He fled to New York in 1849 when a conspiracy in which he had part was discovered. While preparing for a military expedition in New York against the Cuban government, he designed a flag that included a five-pointed star within a triangle, drawing it from Masonic symbolism. The flag first flew atop the New York Sun building on May 11, 1850 and eight days later it waved over Cuba when Lopez landed at Cardenas (May 19th). He was forced to evacuate after a few hours and returned with his 600 men to New Orleans to prepare a new invasion. He landed with it on Aug. 12, 1851 near Bahia Honda, on the northern coast, west of Havana. He was captured, tried for treason and executed by garroting on Sept. 1, 1851. His flag, however, spurred independence-minded Cubans to fight on despite repeated reversals and the forces of Maximo Gomez, Jose Marti, and Antonio Maceo (all Masons) carried the flag in the final struggle for independence. Wor. Master Narciso Valdes, keeper of the lighthouse at Morro Castle, Havana, hoisted the flag over the fort on May 20, 1902 when the tyrannical rule of Spain was at an end. Proceedings of the Grand Lodge of Georgia for 1850 say he was made a Mason in Solomon's Lodge No. 1, Savannah. Called to the bar in 1836, he was appointed Queen's counsel in 1846. He achieved distinction as a lawyer by his defense of Von Schultz who raided Canada in 1836 with a band of marauders. Represented Kingston in house of assembly from 1844–67. Elected to house of commons at the union in 1867, serving until 1878, and again for several terms starting in 1882. He served also as receiver-general, attorney-general several times (in his first term as such he secularized the clergy reserves and abolished seignorial tenure in Lower Canada), postmaster-general, minister of militia, and minister of justice. After 1856 he was the acknowledged leader of the Conservative party, leading the loyal opposition when his party was out of power. He succeeded in uniting Upper and Lower Canada and the Maritime Provinces into the Dominion of Canada. The first meeting took place in 1864 at Charlottetown, P.E. Island, and again in Quebec two months later. He was chairman of the London colonial conference when the British North America act was passed by the Imperial parliament. The Queen made him knight commander of the Order of the Bath, and in 1884 he received the grand cross of the same order. Among the many improvements in the Canadian government credited to him were: the improvement of the criminal laws; the consolidation of the statutes; the extension of municipal system; military organization; establishment of direct steam mail service with Europe; inspection of reformatories, prisons, asylums; reorganization of civil service on permanent basis; construction of Canadian Pacific Railroad; enlargement of canals; a stringent election law; extension of the franchise; ratification of the Washington treaty, and the extension and consolidation of the Dominion. He was initiated in St. John's Lodge No. 758 (English constitution) or No. 5 (Provincial constitution), on March 14, 1844 at Kingston. Initiated with him on that night were Sir Henry Smith, later speaker of the house of commons, and Thomas A. Corbett, sheriff of the Midland district. The lodge at this time met at the Olcott Inn. Macdonald remained a member of this lodge until his death 47 years later. He was made a Royal Arch Mason under the Grand Chapter of Canada, and in 1871 was elected an honorary life member of Lafayette Royal Arch Chapter No. 5, Washington, D.C. In 1886 he was appointed to represent the Grand Lodge of England near the Grand Lodge of Canada. He was also a Knight Templar. d. June 6, 1891.

Thomas Macdonough (1783–1825) Commodore, U.S. Navy and hero of the Battle of Lake Champlain in War of 1812. b. Dec. 23, 1783 in Delaware. Son of a Revolutionary War officer, he went to sea at the age of 17 as a midshipman, taking part in the war with Tripoli. He distinguished himself in action as one of the 70 volunteers accompanying Stephen Decatur, q.v., when they destroyed the captured frigate Philadelphia. For this, he was promoted to lieutenant. He was next assigned to Middletown, Conn. where several boats were under construction for the Navy. For a time he was with commercial vessels, but when the War of 1812 broke out, he returned to active duty and commanded the naval base at Portland, Maine. Ordered to assume command of the fleet on Lake Champlain on Sept. 12, 1812, he was required to build a fleet in the forest to contain the British who were about to invade from Canada. Here he was associated with General Dearborn, q.v. Greatly outgunned and outmanned by the British, he fought an underdog battle that destroyed or captured every vessel of the British fleet and compelled the enemy land troops (14,000 against our 1500) to withdraw. This was the turning point of the war. He was voted the thanks of Congress and given land grants in New York and Vermont. He then commanded the naval base at Portsmouth, N.H. and was sent to the Mediterranean as commodore of the fleet. He died Nov. 18, 1825 at sea while returning to America. His lodge is not known. It is generally accepted that he was made a Mason in an English lodge on the Island of Malta during his Mediterranean tour. One source states he was a member of a New York Lodge; another, a Delaware Mason. However, he was buried with Masonic honors by St. John's Lodge No. 2, Middletown, Conn. Sixty members turned out for the final tribute. d. Nov. 18, 1825.

He preached a sermon to the same lodge on Dec. 27, 1778, being listed at this time as chaplain of the lodge. d. March 5, 1812.

James Madison (1751–1836) Fourth President of the United States. b. March 16, 1751 in Port Conway, Va. Graduate of Princeton U. in 1772, remaining at the school another year to study Hebrew. He was a member of the Continental Congress from 1780–83, and of the Constitutional Convention of 1787. In 1787–88 he co-operated with Hamilton and Jay in writing a series of papers, published under the title of The Federalist, which explained the new constitution and advocated its adoption. He was a member of the U.S. house of representatives from 1787–97, and a leader of the Democratic–Republican party in opposition to Hamilton's financial measures. With Jefferson, he drafted the Virginia Resolutions of 1798 which were inspired by resentment at the Federalist alien and sedition laws. He was U.S. secretary of state from 1801–09, and President of the U.S. 1809–17. From 1826–36 he was rector of the U. of Virginia. d. June 28, 1836. His Masonic membership has never been proved and has been a matter of debate for many years. Many researchers, including James M. Clift, former grand secretary of the Grand Lodge of Virginia, think Madison was a member of Hiram Lodge No. 59, Westmoreland Court House, Virginia. This lodge was granted a temporary dispensation Sept. 20, 1799, and a permanent charter Dec. 11, 1799, becoming dormant about 1814. All records were lost or destroyed. In recent years there has come to light a letter dated Feb. 11, 1795, written to Madison by John Francis Mercer, q.v., governor of Maryland. It is in the library of Congress. Mercer stated, “. . . I have had no opportunity of congratulating you before on your becoming a Free Mason—a very ancient and honorable fraternity. I am sure you are now much wiser and I do not doubt you are much happier, although you were very wise and happy before, at least in my opinion. I hold a lodge on your road, pray let me take you some time by the hand in it, and let Mrs. Mercer welcome the fair prophetess who has converted you to the true faith . . .” R. Baker Harris, librarian of the Supreme Council, S.J. thinks the “fair prophetess” refers to his new wife, Dolly, and that she had encouraged him to become a Mason. If this is true, however, then he could not have been initiated in Hiram Lodge No. 59, as its first dispensation was dated five years later than the above letter. John Dove, early-day grand secretary of the Grand Lodge of Virginia stated that Madison was one of the original founders of Hiram Lodge No. 59. It is possible, therefore, that he was initiated in some unknown lodge and affiliated with the Hiram lodge as a charter member. On Sept 20, 1817, Madison marched in procession with Widow’s Son Lodge No. 60 and Charlottesville Lodge No. 90 to lay the cornerstone of Central College at Charlottesville, Va. On June 24, 1820 Madison and Andrew Jackson partook of a public dinner “with the fraternity of Free Masons” at Louisville, Ky. Dolly Madison treasured a notice of a meeting of Alexandria Lodge No. 39 for many years. It had been sent to George Washington. The notice is now in the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania library. On March 28, 1801 a dispensation was issued for Madison Lodge No. 64, Madison Court House, Va. The best evidence of his membership, however, is in the attacks made on him during the anti-Masonic period when he was taunted for being a Freemason.

Thomas Manningham (?—1794) English physician often credited as the author of the famous prayer at initiation and also opening of a lodge which begins “Most Holy and Glorious Lord God, thou Architect of Heaven and Earth, who are the Giver of all good –Gifts and Graces.” He was deputy grand master of the Grand Lodge of England under Lord Carysfort (1752–54), and under the Marquess of Carnarvon (1754–57). It was during his term of office that the rival “Antient” Masonry first came to the fore. He opposed the schismatic efforts of the Antients. Two interesting letters from his pen are preserved in the archives of the Grand Lodge of the Netherlands. Both allude to the additional degrees then recently imported into Holland (1757). In one he says: “My father has been a Mason these 50 years. . . . He knows none of these ceremonies. Grand Master Payne, who succeeded Sir Christopher Wren, is a stranger to them.” His father was Sir Richard Manningham, the “man-midwife” and a noted physician, who was a member of Old Horn Lodge, now Royal Somerset and Inverness Lodge No. 4. d. James J. Mapes (1806–1866) Inventor, chemist and civil engineer. b. May 29, 1806 in New York City. Received a common school education; developed a liking for chemistry and entered business for himself. In 1832 he invented a new system of sugar refining, and later devised a machine for manufacturing sugar from the cane, which was extensively employed in the Southern states and West Indies. His process for manufacturing sugar from molasses was used in almost every state in the Union. He was appointed professor of chemistry and natural philosophy in the National Academy of Design, N.Y., and later at the American Institute. His analyses of beer and wine for temperance societies and legislative bodies were long regarded as standard. He made numerous improvements in distilling, dyeing, tempering steel, and color-making. He was one of the first civil engineers to open an office for consulting purposes, and was held as an expert in court cases. In the agricultural field he invented the lifting subsoil plow and originated the use of super-phosphates in the U.S., receiving a patent for his process in 1859. Gabriel Mathieu Marconis More frequently known as Marconis de Negre from his dark complexion. He was the alleged founder of the Rite of Memphis and its first grand master. This system of “Masonic” degrees is said to have been brought from Egypt in 1814 by Samuel Honis. The first lodge was founded at Montauban, France on April 30, 1815, and was closed March 7, 1816. His son, Jacques Etienne Marconis, q.v., succeeded him and probably did more to spread the rite than the father. They claimed that it was the only true Freemasonry, older than all others, and that it was introduced into Europe by Ormus, a seraphic priest of Alexandria and Egyptian sage, who had been converted by St. Mark, and who had reformed the doctrines of the Egyptians in accordance with the principles of Christianity. Actually, it was based on the Rite of Mizraim which originated in Milan, Italy, about 1805, which in turn was probably taken from the Primitive Rite of Philadelphes of Narbornne, the latter being established in 1779 and united with the Grand Orient of France in 1786. Others prominent in the Rite of Mizraim were Clavel, Lechangeur, and the three Bedarride brothers—Joseph, Michel and Marc. The Bedarrides published the history of the rite in Paris in 1845. It is entitled De L'Order de Mizraim. It had 87 degrees which soon expanded to 90. Many were “lifts” from the AASR.

Jacques Etienne Marconis (1795–1868) Leader of the Rite of Memphis. b. Jan. 3, 1795 at Montauban, France, the son of Gabriel M. Marconis, q.v., founder and first grand master of the Rite of Memphis. Jacques did more to spread and popularize the order than his father. He is the author of The Sanctuary of Memphis. Jacques visited America in 1856, and on Nov. 9th established a lodge of his system in New York, authorizing work up to and including the 90th degree—a few of the more prominent members being invested with some of the higher grades. The following year a Sovereign Grand Council General, 94°, was founded there with Major David McLellan as its head. Marconis returned to France in 1857, and on April 27, 1861, McLellan resigned his office to accompany his regiment to the front, appointing Harry J. Seymour as his successor. Gradually the rite fell into disrepute due to the bickerings of its officers. Many jurisdictions prohibited it. d. Nov. 21, 1868.

Harry H. Margolin Active member, Supreme Council, 33° AASR, Southern Jurisdiction and Sovereign Grand Inspector General in South Dakota. Received 32° in 1936; KCCH in 1937; and 33° in 1947, becoming an active member in 1955. He is a retail merchant in Yankton, S. Dak.

Maria Theresa (1717–1780) Archduchess of Austria and Queen of Hungary and Bohemia. She was the daughter of Emperor Charles VI. She opposed France, Prussia, and Spain in the War of Austrian Succession, 1740–48. and lost Silesia to Frederick II, q.v., of Prussia, and Austrian lands to Naples. She made an alliance with France which brought on the Seven Years' War in 1756–63, in which Austria was humiliated. In 1736 she married Francis I, Holy Roman Emperor, q.v., and with him, was co-regent of Austria from 1740–45. Her husband, who was grand master of Austria, did not concern himself with her wars. She, in turn, showed great hostility to Freemasonry, presumably from religious advisors, and at one time issued an edict against Freemasonry. Their daughter was the ill-fated Marie Antoinette. After the death of Francis I, she and her son Joseph II, q.v., became co-rulers. Joseph

II first gave his protection and blessing to Freemasonry, and later rescinded it.

John Sappington Marmaduke (1833–1887) Governor of Missouri, 1884–87, dying in office; Confederate Major General of Civil War. b. March 14, 1833 near Arrow Rock, Mo. Attended Yale and Harvard and was graduated from U.S. Military Academy in 1857. His mother was Lavinia Sappington, daughter of the early pioneer physician, John Sappington, and his father was M. M. Marmaduke, q.v., also a governor of Mo. He served two years in Utah (1858–59) with an expedition sent to quell the Mormon revolt. While there, he joined Rocky Mountain Lodge No. 205, Camp Floyd, Utah Territory, chartered by the Grand Lodge of Missouri as a traveling lodge. At the outbreak of the Civil War, he resigned his commission and joined the Confederate forces, much against the wishes of his father who was a staunch Unionist. He was commissioned lieutenant colonel and given command of the 3rd Infantry. He fought at Shiloh where he was wounded on the second day. He was promoted to brigadier general and transferred to the trans-Mississippi department and commanded in Ark. and Mo., making frequent raids, once with 4,000 men. For his services he was made major general. On a raid with General Price, his forces were surrounded and he was compelled to surrender near Fort Scott on Oct. 24, 1864. He was held prisoner at Fort Warren until Aug., 1865. After a trip abroad to regain his health, he returned to St. Louis, Mo., where he established the Evening Journal and the Illustrated Journal of Agriculture. He later became secretary of the state board of agriculture, and in 1875 was appointed railroad commissioner. He affiliated with Anchor Lodge U.D. of St. Louis (now 443) on May 8, 1872, and withdrew on Aug. 25, 1875. d. Dec. 28, 1887.

Meredith Miles Marmaduke (1791–1864) Governor of Missouri, 1844. b. Aug. 28, 1791 in Westmoreland Co., Va. Served as colonel in War of 1812, and at close of war was appointed U.S. marshal for Eastern Va. He moved to Mo. in 1824 for his health, and was engaged in the Santa Fe trade for six years at Franklin, Howard Co., then settled near Arrow Rock where he became a successful farmer. He was the originator and president of the first state fair, and as county surveyor of Saline Co., he surveyed the present city of Marshall, Mo. He was elected lieutenant governor in 1840, and became acting governor on the death of Gov. Thomas Reynolds in 1844. He was a staunch Unionist in the Civil War, although his sons joined the Confederate forces. He married

Lavinia, second child of Dr. John Sappington, Mo. pioneer physician who made quinine pills famous in that day. His son, John S., q.v., became a major general in the Confederate Army. There is no question that he was a Mason, but his lodge has never been located. At this time the Grand Lodge of Missouri required all non-affiliated members in its jurisdiction to pay dues of $3.00. In this respect, Arrow Rock Lodge No. 55, Arrow Rock, Mo. has several records of him as a Mason. On March 3, 1849 the minutes stated: "Lodge proceeded to ascertain the number of Master Masons under the jurisdiction of this lodge and not members of any. They were found worthy as follows: Wm. Price, Joseph Huston, Bird Lawless, Warren Davis, Thos. McMahan, M. M. Marmaduke. . . . Whereupon all found worthy are ordered to be cited to appear at the next meeting." On April 20, 1850, Anthony O'Sullivan, q.v., offered a resolution: "On motion Brother O'Sullivan the following brethren were elected worthy non-affiliated Master Masons: E. Scott, J. Fisher, M. M. Marmaduke, etc. . . ." On May 5, 1850 is recorded the payment of the following: "Non-affiliated Mason pd—M. M. Marmaduke, $1.00." Similar records are found in the lodge minutes on March 15, 1851, April 10, 1852, and April 23, 1853. It is presumed that the grand lodge discontinued its attempts to collect from non-affiliates after that time for no more entries appear in the record. The Saline County history states that Marmaduke was buried "according to the rites of Freemasonry, he having been a Mason for a number of years." d. March 26, 1864 and buried in Sappington Cemetery near Arrow Rock.

He was on the Black Hawk expedition; resigned his commission in 1833 to study law, and entered practice at Frankfort and Louisville. Becoming active in the state militia, he raised a company of volunteers and marched to defend the Texas frontier against the Indians. As a colonel of volunteer cavalry, he served in the War with Mexico and won distinction in the Battle of Buena Vista. He then retired to his farm in Henry Co., Ky. He served in the U.S. congress, 1849–52 and 1855–59. He was U.S. minister to China from 1852–54. He recruited a large force of volunteers for the Confederate army and was made brigadier general. He was in command of the Army of Eastern Kentucky, and in 1862 fought the Battle of Middle Creek with General Garfield. He defeated General Cox at Princeton, Va. and won control of the Lynchburg and Knoxville Railroad. He resigned his commission before the war ended, and served in the Confederate congress. After the war he practiced law at Louisville, Ky. Mason, and buried Masonically. d. March 28, 1872.

James W. Marshall (1812–1885) Discoverer of gold in California. b. in Hope, N.J. in 1812. He learned the trade of wagon builder. In 1833 he bought a farm near Fort Leavenworth, Kansas, and in 1844 migrated to Calif. and entered the service of John A. Sutter, q.v. After serving in the Bear Flag War, he abandoned the stock farm he had established and entered the lumber business with Sutter in Coloma. On Jan. 18, 1848, while examining a mill-race being constructed, he found a nugget of gold. His discovery brought a great influx of adventurers to Calif. The newcomers seized his property and stock, dividing the land into town lots, and reducing Marshall to poverty. A bronze statue of Marshall was erected on the spot where he made his discovery. Some historians contend that Charles R. Bennett, q.v., first picked up the gold. Marshall was a member of Sonora Chapter No. 2, R.A.M., Sonora, Calif. d. Aug. 8, 1885.

John Marshall (1755–1835) Chief Justice of U.S. Supreme Court, 1801–35 and known as the “Father of the Judiciary”; U.S. Secretary of State, 1800–01. b. Sept. 24, 1755 at Germantown, Fauquier Co., Va. He was the son of Thomas

Marshall, both father and son serving in the Revolution. He served at Brandywine, Germantown, Monmouth, Stony Point and Yorktown. His father was a major in the same regiment in which he was a lieutenant. He wintered with Washington at Valley Forge and it might have been here that, by his testimony, he had “become a Freemason while in the Revolutionary Army.” He had a brief course in law and began practice in Fauquier Co., and after two years moved to Richmond. From 1782–95 he was a member of the Virginia executive council, and from 1782–88 of the House of Burgesses, becoming the recognized Federalist leader in Virginia. In 1797–98 he was one of the two American commissioners –to France to obtain redress for hostile French actions. He was a member of the U.S. House of Representatives from 1799–1800; U.S. secretary of state, 1800–01, and chief justice, supreme court from 1801 until death. His most dramatic task on the supreme court bench was to preside at the trial of Aaron Burr, q.v., for treason. His greatest service to the nation was to make the supreme court the place of last resort in determining the constitutionality of both federal and state laws, thus making it truly “supreme.” It is not known where he received his degrees, but he was a member of Richmond Lodge No. 13 (now 10) of Richmond, Va., and of Richmond Chapter No. 3, R.A.M., Richmond. He later became a member of Richmond–Randolph Lodge No. 19 of the same city. It appears that he was never master of a lodge, but nevertheless he was deputy grand master, and then from 1793–95 was grand master of the Grand Lodge of Virginia. In 1785 he helped promote a lottery for the Masonic Hall in Richmond, and in the previous year he was a member of a committee of Rich_mond-Randolph Lodge No. 19 (Jan. 2, 1784). On June 24, 1795 as grand master, he was present at a sermon in honor of St. John the Baptist, preached in the state capitol building. In 1822 he was one of a committee appointed to further the object of "general grand lodge." Between 1786 and 1796 he was recorded as being present at 15 sessions of the grand lodge. d. July 6, 1835. On July 9, John Dove, q.v., then master of Richmond Randolph Lodge No. 19 convened the lodge "for the purpose of paying the last sad tribute of respect to our late Worthy Brother, John Marshall, Chief Justice and late Master of the Grand Lodge of Virginia." The procession was formed and moved to the county court house where they met the body, and thence proceeded to the house of the deceased on the corner of Marshall and Ninth street, where a suitable discourse was delivered by the Right Rev. R. C. Moore, thence to Hollywood burial ground, where the body was interred with the usual Masonic honors. Tradition states that the Liberty Bell in Philadelphia cracked while tolling his death.

Jose Julian Marti (1853–1895) Cuban liberator known as “Apostle of the Independence.” b. Jan. 28, 1853 in Havana. A lawyer by profession, he was consul in New York for Argentina, Uruguay, and Paraguay. Early in life he became interested in Cuban independence, which resulted in his deportation by Spanish authorities. He returned to his homeland, but was again sent into exile. After some traveling, he settled in New York, where he headed the junta set up to arouse interest in the cause of Cuban freedom. When the revolution broke out in 1895, he returned to Cuba with a small group of companions to command the rebel troops. His small force was ambushed by a Spanish force and the entire contingent met death on May 19, 1895. His sacrifice became a rallying influence, and today he ranks as one of the Republic’s greatest heroes. His birthday is commemorated every year by Cuban Freemasonry. A statue has been erected to his memory in Central Park in the center of Havana, and in 1950 the Masons of Cuba organized a parade of 6,000 in tribute to him as a Mason and national hero. On Oct. 24, 1953 Mahi Shrine Temple of Miami, Fla. held its ceremonial in Havana, naming it the “Jose Marti International Ceremonial.”

Maximilian I (1832–1867) Name in full was Ferdinand Maximilian Joseph. Emperor of Mexico, 1864–67, and archduke of Austria. b. July 6, 1832 in Schonbrunn, Austria. He was a brother of Francis Joseph, emperor of Austria. He received naval training and in 1854 was in command of the Austrian navy. He was viceroy of Lombardo-Venetian kingdom from 1857–59. After the French had partially conquered Mexico, an assembly of Mexican notables in exile met under French auspices, adopted the imperial form of government for Mexico, and offered the throne to Maximilian. He accepted on April 10, 1864, reaching Mexico City on June 12 of that year. With the aid of French troops, he drove Juarez, q.v., over the northern frontier. The U.S. government refused to recognize the empire and in 1866 demanded that Napoleon III withdraw his troops. This he did, breaking his pledge of military support to Maximilian. Juarez and Escobedo, qq.v., returned to attack in 1867, besieged Maximilian at Queretaro, and forced his surrender on May 15, 1867. He was court martialed and shot on June 19, 1867. The story of Maximilian and his empress, Carlotta, is a sad one for they both had the interests of Mexico at heart and tried hard to give that country a stable, conservative rule. He allied himself with the interests of the Catholic church and thereby inherited the disfavor of the liberal leaders who had worked to disenfranchise the church and confiscate its property. His Masonic membership is a matter of contention. The York Rite Trestle Board of Mexico City (March, 1934) tells the story of an official who called to see Maximilian in prison. He did not directly mention Masonry to him, but said he gave certain signs, used certain phrases, and the emperor gave no indication that he understood them as such. From this he concluded he was not a Mason. On the other hand the Keystone, Raleigh, N. Car., in Oct. 1866 (while he was emperor), credited him with being a 33° AASR. From the Official Bulletin, Supreme Council AASR (SJ), (Vol. 1, p. 106) is a story concerning an inspector general of the Scottish Rite who had a visit with him while he was emperor, seeking permission to extend activities of the rite in Mexico. He stated he found Maximilian to be a Knight Rose Croix: that the emperor gave permission; that additional bodies of the rite were thereupon organized; and that both the emperor and the empress made a contribution to the charitable work of the rite. If this is true, the emperor would have been a member in France or Austria. Maximilian and Carlotta, being childless, had adopted the grandson of the former Emperor Iturbide, q.v.

Maximilian I (1756–1825) Name in full was Maximilian I Joseph, King of Bavaria. As elector of Bavaria, he sided with France against the allied powers in 1805, gaining the territory by the Treaty of Pressburg, and by its terms assumed the title of king in 1806. He remained loyal to Napoleon until just before the Battle of Leipzig in 1813, when he negotiated with the allies to save his kingdom. He was initiated in the rite of Strict Observance in Strassburg in 1777, while a colonel in the French Army. However, when he became elector of Bavaria, he issued edicts suppressing Freemasonry in 1779, and again in 1804. When Bavaria was made a kingdom in 1806, several small principalities were annexed to it and the old lodges which they possessed were tolerated through a decree in 1807, but under very severe conditions. No government official, clergyman, teacher, or professor was allowed to belong, thus reducing the membership.

Joseph Leopold Maximilian (see under Prince of Brunswick).

Maximilian, Prince of Wurtemberg (see under Wurtemberg).

Ernest M. Maxwell President of National Aniline and Chemical Co. from 1950. b. Oct. 9, 1901 in Brooklyn, N.Y. Raised in Ely Parker Lodge No. 1002, Buffalo, N.Y. on June 18, 1925, dimitting Sept. 16, 1952; 32° AASR (NJ) in Brooklyn and Kismet Shrine Temple, Brooklyn, dimitting from latter in 1951.

Ferdinand Maxwell Pioneer merchant of New Mexico. He was an as-sociate of Kit Carson, the Bents, and Ceran St. Vrain, qq.v., and many times their names appear as present at the same lodge meeting. He was originally a member of Kaskaskia (Ill.) Lodge No. 86. When Bent Lodge No. 204 (Mo. charter) was organized at Taos in 1860, he was the first senior warden. Carson was first junior warden. He served as the last master of this short-lived lodge from 1861–66. It was forced to surrender its charter due to the difficulties caused by the Civil War. In 1864 Maxwell, together with Carson and St. Vrain, affiliated with Montezuma Lodge No. 109 (now No. 1).

William Maxwell (?–1798) Brigadier General in American Revolution. Although little is known of his early life, it is thought he was born in Ireland and brought to N.J. in his early years. He entered the colonial service in 1758, serving in the French and Indian War until the Revolution, when he became colonel of the 2nd N.J. battalion. He was with the Canadian expedition of 1776 that ended in disaster, and with Schuyler at Lake Champlain. He was made brigadier general in 1776 and harassed the enemy after the Battle of Trenton. In 1777 he commanded a N.J. brigade at the battles of Brandywine and Germantown and was with the army at Valley Forge. He played an important part in the Battle of Monmouth. He resigned his commission in 1780. Washington said of him: "I believe him to be an honest man, a warm friend to his country, and firmly attached to its interests." He was a member of the Pennsylvania Military Lodge No. 19 and was once recorded as a visitor to American Union Lodge. He is also listed as a past master in the N.J. proceedings of 1786–1857 (p. 66). d. Nov. 12, 1798.

Charles A. May (1817–1864) Hero of the Mexican War. b. Aug. 9, 1817 in Washington, D.C., he entered the army in 1836 as a second lieutenant of the 2nd Dragoons. He served in the Seminole War and captured King Philip, the principal chief of that nation. He was promoted to captain in 1846, and served as chief of cavalry under Gen. Zachary Taylor, q.v., throughout the Mexican War. He commanded the cavalry at the battles of Palo Alto, Resaca de la Palma, Monterrey, and Buena Vista. At Resaca de la Palma, he turned the day by charging an earthen breastwork and capturing General La Vega, commanding the artillery. For his gallantry at Palo Alto he was brevetted major; for Resaca, lieutenant colonel; and colonel for Buena Vista. He resigned his commission in 1860, moved to New York City and became vice president of the Eighth Avenue Railroad. He received all three degrees at an “occasional lodge” in Charleston, S.C. on March 29, 1859 at which Albert Pike, q.v., was present and the grand master presided. d. Dec. 24, 1864.

Burnet R. Maybank (1899–1954) Governor and U.S. Senator from South Carolina. b. March 7, 1899 in Charleston, S. Car. Graduate of Coll. of Charleston (S.C.). Jonathan Maynard A lieutenant in the American Revolution who claimed that his life was spared by the Indian chief, Joseph Brant, when the latter found him to be a Freemason. After the war he resided in Framingham, near Boston, where he was a well-known and respected citizen. He often told the story of being taken prisoner in New York by a party of Indians under Brant. As he was about to be put to death by torture, Brant, who was present, discovered the symbols of Masonry marked in ink upon the prisoner's arms. Brant interposed, saved Maynard, and saw that he was sent as a prisoner to Canada, where after several months, he was exchanged and sent home.

Alexander McGillivray (1740–1793) Chief of the Creek and Seminole Indians; British Colonel; Spanish and American General. b. in 1740 of a Scotch father and Creek mother, whose father was a French officer of Spanish descent. It has been stated that McGillivray's character reflected the traits of the four bloods—the polished urbanity of the Frenchman, the duplicity of the Spaniard, the sagacity of the Scotchman, and the subtlety of the Indian. He received a classical education from his father's brother, a Presbyterian clergyman of Charleston, but on reaching manhood, turned to his mother's people. He eventually became head of the Creeks, and their allies, the Seminoles and Chickamaugas, and could thereby bring 10,000 warriors into the field. He sided with the British in the Revolution, and Georgia confiscated his lands. This made him a bitter enemy, and he led a long war against the western settlers. After the war, he sided with the Spanish of Florida and aided in many raids. He was invited to New York by none other than George Washington, together with 28 of his chiefs. Before leaving, he wrote a letter to the Spanish, telling them he would remain faithful to them in spite of any treaty that might be signed. The U.S. gave him $100,000 for his confiscated property and a commission as major general in the U.S. Army. On his return, he at once began new raids and continued them until his death. General James Robertson, who opposed him militarily on many occasions said: "The Spaniards are devils, and the biggest devil among them is the half-Spaniard, half-Frenchman, half-Scotchman and altogether Creek scoundrel, McGillivray." It is not known where he received his degrees, but on his death, Feb. 17, 1793, he was buried with Masonic honors in Panton's Garden, Pensacola, Fla.

William McKinley (1843–1901) Twenty-fifth President of the United States, 1896–1901. b. Jan. 29, 1843 in Niles, Ohio. Educated at Poland Academy and Allegheny Coll. He taught in public schools, and at the outset of the Civil War, enlisted as a private in the 23rd Ohio Volunteer Infantry, rising through grades to captain in 1864, and brevetted major by President Lincoln on March 13, 1865, for gallantry in battle. Following the war he took a course at the Albany (N.Y.) Law School and was admitted to the Ohio bar in 1867, settling at Canton. He was U.S. congressman from Ohio from 1876–91. An advocate of high protective tariff, he was chairman of the committee on ways and means that reported the tariff bill of 1890, known as the “McKinley Bill.” When his district was changed by a Democratic legislature, he was defeated for congress in 1890. He was with the organization directed by Marcus Hanna, Republican politician of Cleveland. He was elected governor of Ohio for two successive terms, 1892–96. He was elected president in 1896 by a popular plurality of 600,000 votes and in 1900 with plurality of 849,000 votes. He was shot by the anarchist, Leon Czolgosz, on Sept. 6, 1901 at Buffalo, N.Y. and died Sept. 14. Although a Union Army major, he received his degrees in a southern lodge during the war. He was protecting and managing the army hospital at Winchester, Va., and was struck by the ties which he saw existing between the Union surgeons and Confederate prisoners. When he learned the reason for such a brotherly spirit in spite of war and hatred, he asked to be admitted to the Craft. His petition was presented to Hiram Lodge No. 21 of Winchester and he was initiated May 1, 1865, passed May 2, and raised May 3. J. B. T. Reed, a Confederate chaplain, served in the East. During the early part of his congressional career he was a frequent visitor to the lodges of the District. He was grand orator at the dedication of the Masonic Temple, Canton, on June 25, 1890; and on Dec. 14, 1899, while president, he delivered an address at the Masonic fraternity's centennial anniversary of the death of Washington. On Feb. 7, 1900 a delegation headed by J. T. Taylor, master of Columbia Lodge No. 2397, London, England, visited the White House and presented him an engrossed certificate of membership in the English lodge. On May 22, 1901 he attended a reception given in his honor by California Commandery No. 1, San Francisco. The gold invitation card presented to him is now in the library of the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania and was presented on May 12, 1913 by John Wanamaker, q.v. While visiting in Adams, Mass., Sept. 7, 1897, McKinley received the brethren of Berkshire Lodge and autographed the record book of that lodge. He was made an honorary member of the Illinois Masonic Veterans' Association on Oct. 28, 1898; on his death this group presented a gold memorial plate to his widow. He was an honorary member of the New York Veterans' Association. On Oct. 23, 1899 he tendered a reception to the Supreme Council, AASR (SJ) at the White House. On May 23, 1900 he received the members of the Mystic Shrine at a reception at the White House, during an Imperial Council meeting in Washington. In speaking at the centennial of Washington's death he said: "We have just participated in a service commemorative of the one hundredth anniversary of the death of George Washington. Here at his home, which he loved so well, and which the patriotic women of the country have guarded with loving hands, exercises are conducted under the auspices of the great fraternity of Freemasons, which a century ago, planned and executed the solemn ceremonial which attended the Father of his Country to his tomb. . . . Masons throughout the United States testify anew their reverence for the name of Washington and the inspiring example of his life . . . the Fraternity justly claims the immortal patriot as one of its members; the whole human family acknowledges him as one of the greatest benefactors.” Five cornmanderies of Knights Templar escorted McKinley’s remains from the White House to the Capitol on Sept. 17, 1901 and at the immense funeral on the 19th, 2,000 Knights Templar in uniform formed the fourth division of the funeral escort.

Addis E. McKinstry (1870–1941) President of International Harvester Co., 1933–35. b. Jan. 27, 1870 near Eaton, Ohio. Began in employ of Wm. Deering & Co., Chicago in 1886.

From 1916–20 he was division manager of International Harvester; vice president and director, 1920–32; first vice president and director, 1932–33. Chairman of executive committee and director from 1935. Received his degrees in Alpha Lodge No. 155, Galesburg, Ill. on Feb. 21, March 5 and 21, 1896. d. March 21, 1941.

John McKinstry American Colonel in Revolutionary War. It is claimed that as a captain at the Battle of The Cedars (Canada) on May 20, 1776, he was taken prisoner, and that when about to be killed, gave a Masonic sign of distress and was saved by the Indian Chief, Joseph Brant, q.v. McKinstry was a charter member of Hudson Lodge No. 7, Hudson, N.Y. on March 7, 1787. Hayden's Leaflets of Masonic Biography, which uses the story in quotes, states: "At the battle of The Cedars, 30 miles above Montreal in 1776, Colonel McKinstry, then a captain in Patterson's regiment of Continental troops, was twice wounded, and afterward taken prisoner by the Indians employed in the British services ... already he had been fastened to the fatal tree, and the preparations for the human sacrifice were rapidly proceeding, when, in the agony of despair, and scarcely conscious of a hope, the captive made the great mystic appeal to a Mason in the hour of danger. It was seen and understood by the Chieftain Brant, who was present on the occasion. Brant at once interfered in his behalf, and succeeded, by the influence of his position, in rescuing his American brother from his impending fate. Having freed him from his bonds, he conducted and guarded him in safety to Quebec, where he placed him in the hands of the English, by whom he was permitted to return to his home on parole."

It is said that Brant's friendship with McKinstry continued throughout their lives, and that Brant visited him at his home in Greendale, N.Y. In 1805 they attended Hudson Lodge No. 7 in Hudson, N.Y. together. W. L. Stone, author of The Life of Joseph Brant, knew McKinstry, and reported that he always spoke in glowing terms of his Indian benefactor. There is some question whether Brant was at the Battle of The Cedars, as it is possible that he was in England or on a ship returning from England. Other sources say the incident happened at the Battle of Oriskany rather than The Cedars.

It is not false pride when we say to ourselves those things which are true; for instance, that Masonry is the first of all such organizations in all quarters of the globe and that all the others, worthy as they may be, are nothing but imitators of our fraternity. Evidently we have given to those organizations something of that life and spirit which has made Masonry and which has endeared Masonry to the hearts of men. . . . Through all the years of my life I have put all that I have against those who would deny any man the right to worship God as he pleases or who would draw any line of creed or of color. I believe in that as I believe in the fundamental principles which have made Masonry the great fraternal organization. We have attended strictly to our own business and in attending to our own business, we have carried out those principles of goodwill. . . ." d. March 24, 1955.

John Meek (1791–1875) Ship captain. b. Nov. 24, 1791 at Marblehead, Mass. He went to sea at an early age and probably reached the West coast by 1812. He later became master of the Amethyst, engaged in otter hunting under Russian contract and also in the Hawaiian–California trade. He was one of the first Americans to visit the Hawaiian Islands, going there in 1809, only 31 years after their discovery by Capt. Cook, q.v. He is also thought to be the first Freemason to reach Calif. He became a charter member of the Hawaiian Lodge Le Progres at Honolulu. This lodge was established by Capt. LeTellier, q.v., a French ship captain. The first meeting was held on LeTellier's ship Ajax while anchored in Honolulu harbor on April 8, 1843. Meek served as senior warden of this lodge in 1848, and his home was frequently used as a meeting place. He also organized Hawaiian Lodge No. 21 under Calif. jurisdiction. Meek imported blooded livestock to Hawaii, and these animals formed the nucleus for the present herds in the islands. d. Jan. 29, 1875 in Honolulu.

Made a Mason, May 12, 1902, in Harmony Lodge No. 12, Portland, and member of Scottish Rite there. d. July 14, 1937.

Merrill C. Meigs Publisher; aviation pioneer. b. Nov. 25, 1883 in Malcom, Iowa. He was employed by Rogers & Co., Chicago, 1908–11; J. I. Case Co., Racine, Wis., 1911–14; and Lord & Thomas Advertising Agency, Chicago, 1915–18. From 1918–26 he was director of advertising of the Chicago Evening American, and was publisher of the Chicago Herald Examiner, 1926–29. From 1930–33 he was vice president of the American Weekly; publisher of the Chicago American, 1933–38; and now vice president of The Hearst Corp., Chicago. In 1940–42 he was on leave as chief of the aircraft section of the War Production Board. He was advisor to the Aviation Policy Board, and since 1948 has been consultant to the Civil Aeronautics Authority. The Northerly Isle Airport of Chicago was renamed Merrill C. Meigs Field by the city council in 1949. Member of Welcome Lodge No. 916, Chicago, receiving degrees on March 4, April 8, 29, 1911.

Return Jonathan Meigs, Sr. (1740–1823) Colonel in the American Revolution. b. in Middletown, Conn., he was the father of Return J. Meigs, Jr., q.v. The origin of his name is as unusual as the name itself. His father was in love with a young Quakeress who repeatedly rejected his suit saying “Nay, Jonathan, I respect thee much; but I cannot marry thee.” On his final visit, he slowly mounted his horse to leave when the relenting lady said, “Return, Jonathan! Return, Jonathan!” These happy words were given his first-born in commemoration of the event. He answered the Lexington alarm as a captain of a contingent from Middletown, Conn., serving at Bunker Hill, and under Benedict Arnold, q.v., in the Quebec Expedition, where he was captured in Dec., 1775, paroled in May, 1776, and exchanged in Jan., 1777. In the latter year, he was promoted to colonel, and on May 23, 1777, with 170 men, he raided Sag Harbor, L.I., in whale boats, taking 90 prisoners, burning 12 vessels, and returning without the loss of a man. For this, Congress voted him a sword. He commanded a regiment under Anthony Wayne, q.v., at the storming of Stony Point, and was honorably mentioned by Washington. Subsequently, he was one of the earliest settlers of Ohio, going there in 1788 with his son. In 1801, he was appointed Indian agent of the Cherokees, among whom he passed the remainder of his life, dying Jan. 28, 1823. He was buried at Hiwassee Old Garrison Cemetery some 10 miles east of Dayton, Tenn. Plumb’s History of American Union Lodge No. 1 (Ohio) states in one place that he received the third degree, Jan. 11, 1791 (same date as his son was raised), but in quoting the minutes on p. 127, it shows that although both father and son were proposed for the 3rd degree, only the son received it on that date. It is not definitely known when the first two degrees were conferred, but probably at the same time his son received these degrees—Dec. 6 and 24, 1790. James R. Case, Conn. Masonic historian, has discovered from the old minutes of Wooster Lodge No. 10 of Colchester, Conn. that the Senior Meigs was visiting there on June 24, 1791, and on that date gave the initiation before the lodge at the St. John's Day celebration. He was rewarded on that date by being raised to the sublime degree of Master Mason. He served as master of American Union Lodge in 1801 and was treasurer from 1791–94. The bicentennial history of St. John's Lodge of Middletown, Conn. also lists him as a member, but this seems to be a case where famous military men from that city who were Freemasons were confused with members of that particular lodge.

Return Jonathan Meigs, Jr. (1764–1824) Postmaster General of the U.S.; Governor of Ohio; U.S. Senator from Ohio; Chief Justice, Supreme Court of Ohio; Federal Judge of Michigan. b. Nov. 16, 1764 in Middletown, Conn. His father of the same name, q.v., was a Revolutionary War officer. He graduated from Yale in 1785, and then studied law. In 1788 he went to Ohio with his father, settling at Marietta, participating in many Indian fights of that period. From 1803–04 he was chief justice of Ohio supreme court, and then had charge of the St. Charles district in Louisiana until 1806, with the rank of lieutenant colonel. He was also judge of the supreme court of that district in 1805–06. In 1807–08 he was named judge of the U.S. district court of Michigan. He served as U.S. senator from Ohio from 1809–10, when elected governor of Ohio in the latter year, and served in that capacity until 1814. President Madison appointed him postmaster general of the U.S. in March, 1814 and he continued in office under Monroe until Dec., 1823, when he retired to Marietta. Meigs received his degrees in American Union Lodge No. 1 at Marietta on Dec. 6, and Dec. 24, 1790, and Jan. 11, 1791. His father is recorded as having been raised in that lodge on the same date. In 1792 he delivered two addresses before the lodge, and the records of 1802 show him very regular in attendance. After this period, however, his absence from Marietta interfered with his lodge activity. d. March 29, 1824.

Kenneth C. Meinken President of Electronic Tube Corp. from 1954. b. Dec. 4, 1900 in New York City. Attended Hamilton Prep. School and Cornell U. He was successively manager of a machine works, building contractor, and realtor in Philadelphia. From 1941–43 he was project engineer for National Union Radio Corp., assistant to president (1943–46), and president, 1946–53. Member of University Lodge No. 610, Philadelphia, Pa. since 1919.

Edwin B. Meissner (1884–1956) President of St. Louis Car Co. from 1922–56, and of St. Louis Mining & Milling Corp., Joplin, Mo., from 1941. b. Dec. 5, 1884 in Milwaukee, Wis. He started as a messenger for the Milwaukee Electric Railway & Light Co. in 1899 and rose to chief clerk. He became associated with the St. Louis Car Co. in 1911 as assistant to the president, became vice president in 1915, and president and general manager since 1922. He is a director of several companies and banks. Mason and Shriner. Received degrees in Cornerstone Lodge No. 323 on Sept. 17, 1919, May 20 and June 22, 1918. Affiliated with University Lodge No. 649, University City, Mo. in 1932 and reaffiliated with Cornerstone Lodge on Dec. 18, 1933. d. Sept. 10, 1956.

Phillip Schwarzert Melanchthon (1497–1560) (Also Melanthon and Melancthon) German scholar and religious reformer who collaborated with Martin Luther in the Protestant Reformation. He was a professor of Greek and theology at Wittenberg. In 1521 he published Loci Communes Rerum Theologicarum, the first great Protestant treatise on dogmatic theology. He was noted for his vast learning, skill in dialectics, and a moderation that tempered Luther's vehemence. He drafted the Augsburg Confession in 1530 and sought consistently to reconcile Protestantism with Roman Catholicism, and thus attain Christian unity. His association with Freemasonry rests entirely on the authenticity of the Charter of Cologne, to which his name is signed as the representative of Dantzic. This charter is claimed to be the result of the Congress of Cologne, which convened in 1525 in the city of Cologne, with the most distinguished Freemasons of the time representing 19 grand lodges. It set forth the character and aims of the Craft. Its authenticity has been questioned by many Masonic scholars, but upheld by others.

Lauritz L. H. Melchior Operatic tenor. b. March 20, 1890 in Copenhagen, Denmark. He attended Mel-choir's School at Copenhagen from 1896–1905. Although now a tenor, he made his debut as a baritone at the Copenhagen Opera on April 2, 1913. His first appearance there as a tenor was on Oct. 8, 1918. He has sung at Covent Garden, London, since 1925; with Metropolitan Opera, N.Y. since 1926, and at the Wagner festivals, Bayreuth, since 1925. He has appeared with marked success in Paris, Berlin, Vienna, Hamburg, Buenos Aires, and many other cities throughout the world. He has been making motion pictures and radio and TV appearances in recent years. His latest motion picture is The Stars Are Singing. He received the three degrees in 1918 at the age of 28 in St. John's Lodge (Zorobabel og Frederick) in Copenhagen. He is also an honorary member of Frederick Lodge No. 857, N.Y.C. (March 24, 1935). In 1944 he received the coveted Distinguished Achievement Award of the Grand Lodge of New York.

James M. Melear (?–1955) Editor of the Methodist Christian Advocate (Southern edition) 1916–32. b. in Sullivan Co., Tenn. Received three degrees from the U. of Chattanooga between 1891 and 1904. He served churches in Carnegie, Sherman Heights, Athens, and Knoxville. (Tenn.), Baraboo, Wis., Frankfort, Ind., Lexington, Ky. between 1892–1916. Mason and Knight Templar. d. Dec. 28, 1955.

Melesino The name of a lieutenant general in the Imperial Russian Army who established a rite which was known as the “Melesino Rite.” A Greek by birth, he was a learned man and a Freemason. The first lodge of his rite was established at St. Petersburg about 1765. It consisted of seven degrees:

Apprentice, Fellow Craft, Master Mason, The Mystic Arch, Scottish Master and Knight, The Philosopher, The Priest or High Priest of the Templars. It was Christian in character, teaching a belief in the Messiah and the dogma of the Trinity.

Thomas W. Melham Imperial Potentate of the Shrine, 1957–58. b. Jan. 19, 1902 in Brandt, S. Dak. Graduate of U. of Wisconsin in 1923. He began with National Cash Register Co. at Dayton, Ohio, and later in Philadelphia. Turning to insurance, he returned to Wis. as a special agent and was the first person in that state to receive the professional degree of Charter Life Underwriter. In 1937 he joined Prudential in Milwaukee, and in 1952 transferred to N.Y.C. as manager of the Manhattan agency. Raised in Silver Spring Lodge No. 337, Whitefish Bay, Wis. in 1928, he was master in 1952. Member of Kenwood Chapter No. 90, R.A.M.; Ivanhoe Commandery No. 24, K.T.; and Wisconsin Valley Scottish Rite, all of Milwaukee. Arthur C. Mellette (1842–1896) Last Governor of Dakota Territory and first Governor of South Dakota. b. Jan. 23, 1842 in Indiana. He served in the Civil War. A good friend of Benjamin Harrison, he was one of his first supporters for president. Harrison appointed Mellette as governor of the Dakota Territory as one of his first official acts. He came to the Dakotas in 1878 and affiliated with Kampseka Lodge No. 13, at Watertown in 1881. It is presumed he received the degrees in Indiana. While in Indiana he practiced law, published the Muncie Times and was elected to the state legislature, where he devoted himself to the reform of the school laws and raised Indiana from a low plane to among the highest in the public school systems. d. May 25, 1896. He was also a member of Watertown Commandery No. 7, K.T.

Andrew W. Mellon (1855–1937) American industrialist and Secretary of the Treasury, 1921–32 under Coolidge and Hoover. b. March 24, 1855 in Pittsburgh, Pa. He was educated at Western U. of Pennsylvania (now U. of Pittsburgh) and was in the class of 1873. For many years he was president of the Mellon National Bank and officer, or director, of various financial and industrial corporations. He engaged in the development of coal, coke, and iron enterprises. He resigned as president of the bank on March 1, 1921, and three days later became U.S. secretary of the Treasury. When he was confirmed as U.S. ambassador to Great Britain on Feb. 5, 1932, he resigned as Treasury secretary. He served as ambassador until March 17, 1933. In 1930 he established the A. W. Mellon Educational and Charitable Trust. When the National Gallery of Art was established in Washington, D.C., in 1937, as a branch of the Smithsonian Institution, the trustees of the fund gave 15 million dollars for the building. In addition, Mellon's private art collection, consisting of 126 paintings and 36 pieces of sculpture was given to the nation as the nucleus of the present collection. Many world-famous paintings were in this collection. Mellon was made a Mason "at sight," Dec. 29, 1928, by J. Willison Smith, grand master of Pennsylvania at Pittsburgh. His brother, Richard B. Mellon, q.v., received the degrees at the same time. Mellon affiliated with Fellowship Lodge No. 679 of Pittsburgh. He received the Royal Arch degree in 1931. d. Aug. 26, 1937.

Richard B. Mellon (?–1933) Banker and railroad president. b. in Pittsburgh, the brother of Andrew W. Mellon, q.v. He began with the Ligonier Valley Railroad and was later its president. He was successively judge of city court, Kansas City, Kans., county attorney, deputy commissioner internal revenue, Washington, D.C., judge of Tax Court of U.S. Mason, 32° AASR (SJ) and Shriner. d. Dec. 29, 1957.

George H. C. Melody (1793–1860) Pioneer Missouri Freemason. b. March 7, 1793 on the Atlantic Ocean, while parents were en route from England to America. A business failure, he had little worldly goods. He was perhaps the most devoted Mason in the early days of the Missouri grand lodge, which he helped found at the organizational meeting on April 24, 1821 at St. Louis, and where he acted as grand junior deacon pro tern. He constituted the first Royal Arch chapter in Missouri in 1826, and attended the organization of the Grand Cornmandery, K.T. of Missouri in 1860. He was a friend of such men as General Lafayette, Governor Dewitt Clinton, Disraeli, Victor Hugo, and King Louis Philippe. He was an associate of such prominent Missourians as Frederick and Edward Bates, Nathaniel B. Tucker, Dr. Hardage Lane, and Governor Hamilton R. Gamble. While grand master pro tem, he received General Lafayette on April 29, 1825. He served several years as deputy grand master, and was the first grand lecturer of the grand lodge and grand chapter of Missouri. In 1844–45 he took a party of 14 Iowa Indians to England and France. He died Oct. 15, 1860. In 1942 (April 27) the grand lodge and grand chapter of Missouri dedicated a monument to him in the cemetery at Rocheport, Mo. where he is buried.

George J. Whyte–Melville (see under Whyte).

George W. Melville (1841–1912) Rear Admiral, U.S. Navy; Arctic Explorer and Engineer-in-Chief of Navy. b. Jan. 10, 1841 in New York City. Entered the Navy in July, 1861 with rank of midshipman. He was engineer of the Jeannette, under the command of Lt. George W. DeLong, which sailed into Arctic waters in 1879 to discover an opening to the supposed polar sea by a northeast passage near Wrangel Land. After the sinking of the ship on June 13, 1881, Melville accompanied DeLong over the ice to Bennett Island, where they separated into two parties, Melville leading one of them in a small boat to Siberia, reaching the Lena Delta on Sept. 17, 1881. He then searched for the DeLong party and discovered some of their huts. He returned the following spring and eventually found the remains of DeLong and his eleven companions, in March. He rescued the records of the Jeannette and returned them to the U.S. In 1884 he was chief engineer of the Thetis on the Greely, q.v., relief expedition. He became chief of the bureau of steam engineering, U.S. Navy from 1887–1903, and retired as a rear admiral in 1903. He was a member of St. Albans Lodge No. 56, Brooklyn, N.Y. d. March 17, 1912.

Moses Mendelssohn (1729–1796) German Jewish philosopher, called “The German Socrates.” He was the grandfather of Felix Mendelssohn, the composer. He formed a close friendship with Lessing, q.v. in 1754, which inspired the latter to write Nathan der Weise, a dramatic poem on toleration. He was also a friend of Nicolia, Lavater, and Kant, contributing to several of their works as a critic. He wrote Phadon in support of the immortality of the soul and his Jerusalem oder über Religiöse Macht und Judentum was a plea for religious tolerance. Among his many writings are Philosophische Gespräche; the satire Pope ein Metaphysiker; the essay Abhandlung über die Evidenz in den Metaphysischen Wissenschaften. The bulletin of the International Masonic Congress of 1917 lists him as a Freemason, and Beswick, in his Swedenborg Rite, states that he was a Scottish Rite Mason.

Catulle Mendès (1841–1909) French critic and poet. He founded the Revue Fantaisiste at Paris in 1859, and was dramatic critic of Le Journal from 1893. He was the founder of the Parnassian school of poetry, the origins of which he described in Légende du Parnasse Contemporain in 1884. Among his poetic writings are Philomela; Hesperus; Contes Épiques; and Odelettes Guerrières. He also authored a number of plays including La Femme de Tabarin and La Reine Fiammette. The bulletin of the International Masonic Congress of 1917 lists him as a Freemason.

Comte Honore G. V. R. Mirabeau (1749–1791) French revolutionary leader. Between 1774–80 he was imprisoned many times for intrigues. He lived for six years in England, 1774–80. He was perhaps the most important figure of the French Revolution in its first two years. His influence in the national assembly was achieved by oratory and personality. He believed strongly in a limited constitutional monarchy. He was elected president of the national assembly in 1791, but died soon after. His Masonic membership is debatable; some sources claim he was a Mason; others say he was an Illuminati, but not a Freemason.

Francisco de Miranda (see under de Miranda).

Langley; with Bureau of Aeronautics of Navy; executive officer of U.S.S. Saratoga. In WWII he was commanding officer of the U.S.S. Hornet in 1941–42, this ship being the Shangri-La from which American planes under General James Doolittle, q.v., took off on April 18, 1942 to bomb Tokyo and other Japanese cities. He was in command of the carrier Midway during the Battle of Midway; air commander of the Solomon Islands in 1943; commander of Task Force 58 of the Pacific Fleet—the greatest carrier task force in naval history at that time—which operated against the Marshalls, Truk and Tinjan-Saipan. In 1945 he was chief of naval operations for air. A member of Biscayne Bay Lodge No. 124, Miami, Fla., he was raised on Jan. 29, 1919, receiving 32° AASR (SJ) at Miami on Feb. 14, 1919. d. Feb. 3, 1947.

Tom Mix (1880–1940) Movie actor; cowboy; soldier and adventurer. b. Jan. 6, 1880 in El Paso Co., Texas. In early life he was a cowboy in Texas, Arizona, Wyoming, and Montana. In the Spanish–American War, he served in the Army in the Philippines and also in the Boxer Rebellion in China. In the Boer War, he served with the British and was at the siege of Ladysmith. Returning to America he was sheriff of Montgomery Co., Kansas, and Washington Co., Okla. He then became deputy U.S. marshal and enforcement officer of Eastern Okla. and served three years with the Texas Rangers. From 1906–09 he was livestock foreman of the Miller Bros. “101” Ranch at Bliss, Okla. In 1929 he was with the Sells–Floto Circus. He won the national riding and roping contest at Prescott, Ariz. in 1909, and again at Canon City, Colo. in 1911. His motion picture career began in 1910. He was perhaps the best known actor of his day. He varied his motion picture making with tours with SellsFloto Circus until 1933, when he organized his own Tom Mix Circus and Wild West Show, making personal appearances in the U.S. and Europe. Mix was raised in Utopia Lodge No. 537 of Los Angeles, Calif. on Feb. 21, 1925, the first of a trio of famous motion picture celebrities to join this lodge. The others were Monte Blue and Richard Arlen, qq.v. Tom was so pleased to become a Mason that he paid ten years dues in advance. He was also a Royal Arch Mason and 32° AASR (SJ). Mix was a member of the “233 Club,” taking an active part in conferring Blue Lodge degrees with that group of Mason-actors. He was killed Oct. 12, 1940 in an automobile crash in Arizona and buried with Masonic services on Oct. 16, 1940.

David Macbeth Moir (1798–1851) Scottish physician and author, known as “Delta” from the triangle he signed to his essays and poems. A contributor to Blackwood's Magazine, he wrote the Scottish novel, The Life of Mansie Wauch and Outlines of Ancient History of Medicine. Member of Canon-gate Kilwinning Lodge, Edinburgh.

Francis, 2nd Earl of Moira (1754–1826) British soldier and colonial administrator. He was Francis Rawdon Hastings, his father being Sir John Rawdon and mother Lady Elizabeth Hastings, eldest daughter of the Earl of Huntingdon. In 1761

his father was created first Earl of Moira, and son Francis assumed the courtesy title of Lord Rawdon. He was educated at Harrow. At the start of the American Revolution, he was promoted from ensign to lieutenant in the 5th Foot and embarked for America in 1773. Attached to the regiment was Lodge No. 86 and it would seem probable that here was where he was initiated. In 1775 he was promoted to captain in the 63rd Foot. He was at the Battle of Bunker Hill, served as adjutant general in 1778, and was in command of the left wing at the Battle of Camden where he defeated General Gates in 1780. He was at Hobkirk's Hill in 1781. Irish by birth (b. Dec. 7, 1754), he raised a regiment of Irish volunteers in Philadelphia in 1777 when he was 23 years old. He championed the regency of the Prince of Wales in 1789, and in 1790 assumed the name of "Hastings" with its corresponding title in the English peerage. With Wellesley, he attempted to form a ministry in 1812. He was governor general of Bengal and commander-in-chief of India from 1813–22. He carried on successful wars against the Gurkhas in 1816 and established British supremacy in central India. In 1819 he purchased the island of Singapore; was governor of Malta in 1824, Masonically, he was perhaps the most famous man of English Freemasonry in the period which preceded the union of the two rival grand lodges in 1813. From 1790–1813, he was acting grand master to H. R. H. George, Prince of Wales, later George IV, q.v. In 1806–07 he was the 46th Grand Master Mason of Scotland. Had it not been for his intervention, and that of the 4th Duke of Atholl, q.v., the Unlawful Societies Act of 1799 would have caused the dissolution of English Freemasonry. When he left for India in 1813, his farewell banquet was graced by six noted Royal Arch Masons—the Dukes of Sussex, York, Clarence, Kent, Cumberland, and Gloucester, qq.v., and he was appointed acting grand master of India by the Grand Lodge. On his way to that continent, he laid the first stone of a new Roman Catholic Cathedral in Mauritius. He was buried on the ramparts of the Island of Malta. He left a letter, in which, among other requests, he desired that his “right hand might be cut off” and buried with his wife at her death. This wish was complied with, and his hand now rests, clasped with hers, in the family vault at the old Kirk of Loudoun.

Andrew Mokronovsky Polish general who succeeded Count Ignatius Potocky as grand master of Polish Freemasonry in 1783, serving until 1785.

Comte Gabriel Jean Joseph Molitor (1770–1849) French soldier who was created Marshal of France and a peer in 1824. He served in the revolutionary and Napoleonic armies and distinguished himself at Essling and Wagram in 1809. He was governor general of Holland in 1811 and retired in 1815, but was recalled to service in 1818, and commanded a corps in the French expedition to Spain in 1823. He was initiated in the lodge attached to the 60th Regiment of the Infantry of the Line.

Mathias P. Moller (1855–1937) Founder and president of M. P. Moller Organ Works, Hagerstown, Md., manufacturers of Moller pipe organs. b. Sept. 29, 1855 in Bornholm, Denmark. He came to the U.S. in 1872 and began work in an organ factory in Erie, Pa. He settled in Hagerstown, Md. in 1880, where he established an organ works. He was also president of M. P. Moller Motor Car Co., Kinetic Engineering Co., and owner of the Hotel Dagmar. An active Lutheran, he was elected to the Maryland Synod 18 times, to the general convention of the Lutheran Church eight times, and to the World Lutheran Convention at Copenhagen in 1929. Mason. d. April 13, 1937.

Henry Howard Molyneux (see 4th Earl of Carnarvon).

Jose Gregorio Monagas (1795–1858) President of Venezuela from 1851–55. He was placed in office by his brother, Jose Tadeo Monagas, q.v., who had been president from 1846–51, and also followed him with another term, 1855–58. The reign of Jose Gregorio was distinguished by his abolition of slavery in 1854. The Monagas family held a virtual dictatorship over Venezuela. Jose Tadeo's son, Jose Ruperto Monagas, q.v., was also president of Venezuela from 1869–70 and was overthrown by General Guzman Blanco, q.v. Jose Gregorio was a 33° AASR member and grand commander of the Supreme Council of Venezuela.

Jose Ruperto Monagas Venezuelan General and President of Venezuela in 1868–70, following his father, Jos-6 Tadeo Monagas, q.v., as president on the latter's death. He was overthrown by General Guzman Blanco, q.v. A 32° AASR in the Supreme Council of Venezuela.

Jose Tadeo Monagas (1784–1868) President of Venezuela,

1846–51 and 1855–58. A Venezuelan general, he fought under Bolivar, q.v., in the War of Independence, 1812–21. He was military leader of the Venezuelans when the union with Greater Colombia dissolved in 1830. He was the choice of Paez as his successor to the presidency in 1846, but broke with Paez in 1847. The Monagas family held a virtual dictatorship in Venezuela. He arranged for his brother, Jose Gregorio Monagas, q.v., to succeed him as president when he retired from that office in 1851, but in 1855 he took over again from the brother. He revised the constitution in 1857, was overthrown by a revolution in 1858, and banished. He returned to power in 1868, but died soon after. He was a 32° AASR, in the Supreme Council of Venezuela. His son, Jose Ruperto Monagas, q.v., was president of Venezuela from the time of his father's death in 1868 until overthrown by General Guzman Blanco, q.v. in 1870.

Bon Adrien Jeannot de Moncey (1754–1842) French General created Marshal of the Empire in 1804 and peer of France by Louis XVIII. He served in the Revolutionary and Napoleonic armies, and commanded the army which defeated the Spaniards in 1795. In 1804 he was created Duc de Conegliano. He commanded the National Guard in Paris in 1814, and defended the city against allied forces. He commanded a corps in the French expedition to Spain in 1823. He was a grand officer of the Grand Orient of France in 1814.

Frank W. Mondell (1860–1939) U.S. Congressman to 54th and 56th through 67th Congresses (1895–97 and 1899–1923) from Wyoming. b. Nov. 6, 1880 in St. Louis, Mo. He went to Wyoming in 1887, prospecting for coal. Largely through his efforts, the Cambria coal fields were developed and the town of Newcastle started. He was the city's first mayor and served four terms. When Wyoming became a state in 1890 he was elected to the state senate and served as president of that body. He served a total of 26 years in congress. From 1923–25 he was director of the War Finance Corp. Member of Newcastle Lodge No. 12, Newcastle, Wyo., receiving degrees on April 4, July 23 and Aug. 1, 1891. Exalted in Wyoming Chapter No. 1, Cheyenne, on Aug. 22, 1896. d. Aug. 6, 1939.

Gaspard Monge (1746–1818) French mathematician who is considered the inventor of descriptive geometry. He was active in the establishment of the Ecole Polytechnique, where he taught descriptive geometry. He became the Comte de Peluse. The Bulletin of the International Masonic Congress of 1917 states he was a Freemason.

Ralph M. Monk Vice President of Caterpillar Tractor Co. since 1950. b. Feb. 24, 1903 at Plymouth, Ill. Graduate of U. of Illinois in 1925 and 1927. Admitted to the bar in 1927 and practiced at Peoria, Ill. until 1938, when he became director of industrial and labor relations of Caterpillar and 1950, vice president. Received degrees in Peoria Lodge No. 15, Peoria, Ill. on Jan. 6, 13, 20, 1930. Knight Templar and Shriner.

Ora E. Monette (1873–?) Organizer, founder and president of the Bank of America at Los Angeles in 1923. b. April 12, 1873 near Bucyrus, Ohio. Graduate of Ohio Wesleyan U. in 1895. He practiced law at Bucyrus, Ohio from 1896 until 1907, when he moved to Los Angeles. The original Bank of America later consolidated with the Bank of Italy, and later changed its name to Bank of America again. In the latter change he was vice president of the organization. Mason. Deceased.

James Monroe (1758–1831) Fifth President of the United States. b. April 28, 1758 in Westmoreland Co., Va. He served in the American Revolution, leaving William and Mary College to do so. He fought under General Mercer and was at Harlem, White Plains, and Trenton, being wounded in the latter engagement. He rose to the rank of lieutenant colonel. From 1783–86 he was a member of the Continental Congress, and practiced law at Fredericksburg, Va. He was U.S. senator from Virginia from 1790–94, and one of the negotiators of the Louisiana Purchase in 1803. He was governor of Virginia from 1799–1802 and again in 1811. He became U.S. secretary of state from 1811–17, and during the same period was U.S. secretary of war from 1814–15. His presidential term from 1817–25 was marked with good feeling because of lack of vigorous factional quarrels. Florida was acquired in 1819, the Missouri Compromise enacted in 1820, and the Monroe Doctrine promulgated in 1823. While he was U.S. minister to France, his wife effected the release of Madam de Lafayette, wife of the Marquis de Lafayette, q.v., who was in prison expecting to be executed. He received the Entered Apprentice degree in Williamsburgh Lodge No. 6, Williams–burgh, Va. while he was a student at William and Mary Coll. This lodge was formerly No. 457, and 365 under the Grand Lodge of England. The date of his initiation is Nov. 9, 1775, and he was 17 at the time. Where he received his 2nd and 3rd degrees is not known. Two lines of thought prevail—Boydon suggested that it might have been in the Williamsburgh lodge in 1776. John Dove thought that he received the remaining degrees in St. John's Regimental Lodge. The lodge records at Williamsburgh do not show they were conferred in 1776, although they do show his payment of quarterly dues until Oct., 1780. Inasmuch as he left school—and Williamsburgh in March, 1776, it seems more likely that St. John's lodge would be the answer. The proceedings of the Grand Lodge of the District of Columbia for 1825 show that he was made an honorary member of Washington Naval Lodge No. 4, Washington, D.C. On Oct. 6, 1817 he participated in the Masonic cornerstone laying of Central Coll. This school merged into the U. of Virginia in 1819. On June 8, 1819 Cumberland Lodge No. 8 of Nashville, Tenn. met, adopted resolutions and marched in a body to meet Monroe. Wilkins Tannehill (later to be grand master) delivered an address of welcome and Monroe was escorted into the town. Later that day he was "given a private reception by Masons." On June 24, 1819 Abraham Lodge No. 8 and Clark Lodge No. 51, both of Louisville, Ky. held a joint St. John's Day celebration, and had as guests President Monroe and General Andrew Jackson, q.v. He was present at the Masonic cornerstone laying of the city hall in Washington, D.C. on Aug. 22, 1820. He died July 4, 1831. On July 25, 1831 Richmond Randolph Lodge and lodges 10, 14 and 54 participated in a funeral procession in honor of Monroe in Richmond, Va.

Joseph Montfort (1724–1776) Sometimes called “The first, the last, the only Grand Master of America,” an honor which is warmly contested by others as belonging to (1) Henry Price of Mass., q.v. whose commission was dated April 30, 1733 and (2) Thomas Oxnard of Mass., q.v. whose commission was dated Sept. 23, 1743, b. in England, he was made a Freemason before leaving for America. He located in Halifax, N. Car. and became clerk of Edgecomb Co. court before Halifax Co. was created. He was commissioner of the Town of Halifax, member of the colonial assembly, colonel of the provincial troops, treasurer of the northern counties of the province, commissioner for the management of N. Car. affairs in England, and a member of the provincial congress which met in Newbern in April, 1775. His daughter, Mary, married Willie Jones, the first ex-officio governor of N. Car. It was from the Hon. and Mrs. Willie Jones that John Paul, father of the American Navy, took the name “John Paul Jones,” q.v. Monfort promoted the idea of building Masonic temples. It is said that his idea made such an impression on the London fraternity that its members were inspired to begin the erection of the first temple in London. Benjamin Franklin, in Philadelphia, urged the building of the first such temple in America and the building at Halifax, N. Car. is the second such structure in this country. This marked the end of the “tavern” stage of Freemasonry. The document issued by the Grand Lodge of England, by order of Henry, 5th Duke of Beaufort, q.v., and attested to by James Haseltine, grand secretary, is dated Jan. 14, 1771. It states, in part; “Know Ye that We, of the Great Trust and Confidence reposed in our Right Worshipful and well beloved Brother, Joseph Montfort, Esquire, of Halifax, in the Province of North Carolina, in America, Do hereby Constitute and appoint him the said Joseph Montfort, Provincial Grand Master Of and For America, with full power and authority in due form to make Masons & Constitute and Regulate Lodge as Occasion may Require.” Montfort died March 26 (or 25th), 1776. He was reburied on the the grounds of Royal White Hart Lodge No. 2, Halifax, and on Feb. 13, 1911, a stone was unveiled at the new burial site stating, “The First, The Last, The Only Grand Master of America.”

Jacques Etienne Montgolfier (1745–1799) French inventor, who with his brother, Joseph Michel, q.v., built the first practical balloon. b. Jan. 7, 1745 at Vidalon–les–Annonay, France. He began practice in Paris as an architect, but his father requested that he return to Annonay to assist him in his business of paper manufacture. The two brothers assisted their father in the business until the latter retired. Meanwhile they developed and perfected the idea of balloons, by watching heat rise from a burning scrap of paper. Their first balloon ascent was made at Annonay on June 5, 1783 with the balloon staying aloft for ten minutes. Their success was at once reported to the Academy in Paris, and the brothers were invited to demonstrate their experiment in Paris. Jacques Etienne made the trip, and there constructed a blue balloon 74 feet high, colorfully decorated with signs, wreaths, and portraits. The passengers on this flight were a sheep, a cock, and a duck. The experiment took place at Versailles on Sept. 20, 1783 in the presence of a large audience. Etienne was presented to King Louis XVI and received the Cordon of St. Michel. A pension was allotted to Joseph, and letters of nobility were granted their old father. The Academy of Science bestowed the title of “corresponding member” on the two brothers. It was at this time that Etienne was made a Freemason in the Lodge of the Nine Sisters in Paris. He was raised by the architect, Soufflet, his name first appearing on the membership list of 1784. The two brothers continued their experiments, and in 1792 invented a hydraulic ram. They also introduced numerous improvements in paper-making. Their images are represented on a monument erected in their honor at Annonay.

Joseph Michel Montgolfier (1740–1810) French inventor, who with his brother, Jacques Etienne, q.v., invented the first practical balloon. Both had grappled for some time with the mystery of flying and were familiar with Joseph Priestley’s Experiments and Observations on Different Kinds of Air. Joseph had tinkered with parachutes and had dropped a sheep from a tower with a rig resembling a parasol. One day while staring at an engraving of the French and Spanish besieging the British at Gibraltar, he thought that although the allies were blocked by land and sea, they were not by air. He knew that smoke rose in air. Why couldn’t he store enough smoke somehow to lift a man? On the spur of the moment, he sprang up, found some scraps of taffeta, and at once contrived a small spherical bag which when held over a flame for a moment floated to the ceiling. He appears to have been made a member of the Lodge of the Nine Sisters, at Paris, at a much later date than his brother, for his name first appears on the membership list in 1806, whereas Etienne became a member in 1784.

Richard Montgomery (1736–1775) Major General in American Revolution, killed in the storming of Quebec. b. Dec. 2, 1736 in Swords, near Feltrim, Ireland. His father was a member of the British parliament. He was educated at Trinity Coll., Dublin, and entered the English Army at the age of 18 in the 17th Infantry. In 1757 he was ordered to Halifax, N.S., and soon after participated in the siege of Louisburg under Wolfe, the campaign around Lake Champlain, and the fall of Montreal in 1760. He then served in the campaigns of the West Indies, returning to New York in 1763, and then to England. He resigned his commission in 1772, and returned to America the following year, where he married Janet, daughter of Robert R. Livingston, the jurist, and thus became a brother-in-law of Robert R. (2nd), Henry Edward, and Morgan Lewis, qq.v., all prominent Freemasons and two (Robert R. and Morgan Lewis) being grand masters of New York. He settled on the Hudson near Rhinebeck. He was a delegate to the 1st provincial congress in N.Y.C. in 1775, and in the same year was made a brigadier general in the Continental Army. He was second in command to General Schuyler on the expedition to Canada, but because of the illness of Schuyler, he assumed command and captured St. John's, Chambly, and Montreal. At this time he was made major general and joined his 300 men with Benedict Arnold's, q.v., 600 for an assault on Quebec in Dec. 1775. He was killed with the first volley of British guns, while leading the assault on the fortified city. Carleton, the British commander and a Freemason, gave him burial within the city. In 1818 the remains were moved to St. Paul's churchyard in N.Y.C. and interred on July 8. As an early American martyr of the Revolution, he was toasted at Masonic meetings as "one of the three eminent Masons who fell in liberty's cause—Montgomery, Warren and Wooster," qq.v. This toast was given in American Union Lodge on June 24, 1779 (a Conn. military lodge). Lodges in Conn., Mass. and N.Y. have been named for him. In the original proceedings of the Grand Lodge of New York for June 4, 1819, the grand treasurer's account shows the following: "To cash paid for expenses for the funeral of brother Gen. Montgomery." The proceedings of this grand lodge in 1902 (p. 100) also list him as a member of Mount Vernon Lodge No. 3, Albany, N.Y. James R. Case in his Fifty Early American Military Freemasons believes that he was initiated in the traveling Lodge of Unity No. 18 under Irish registry, as this lodge was attached to his 17th Regiment of Foot. This lodge's chest fell into the hands of the Americans at the capture of Stony Point in 1779, along with other regimental impedimenta and was returned under a flag of truce by Samuel Holden Parsons, master of American Union Lodge. d. Dec. 31, 1775.

Sir John Moore (1761–1809) British General. b. in Glasgow, Scotland, he served in the American Revolution, 1779–83. In 1794 he assisted in the reduction of the French garrisons in Corsica, followed by service in the West Indies, Ireland, and Holland. He distinguished himself at Alexandria and Cairo in 1801, and became commander-in-chief of Portugal in 1808. He was ordered to expel the French from the peninsula; approaching Madrid, he found that 70,000 of Napoleon's troops had occupied that city and cut them off from retreat to Portugal. After a disastrous retreat through mountains in winter for 250 miles, he was attacked while embarking, and in the victory killed 2,000 French at La Coruna. However he fell mortally wounded (Jan. 16, 1809), and was buried in the ramparts of La Coruna, as related in Charles Wolfe's poem The Burial of Sir John Moore. He received his degrees in St. John's Lodge No. 211 (now 2) of Halifax, N.S., April 2, June 5, and June 26, 1781; and on Nov. 30, 1798 affiliated with Renfrew County Kilwinning Lodge No. 11 of Paisley, Scotland.

Abraham Mora Colombian professor and business man. b. Jan. 8, 1902 in Pacho, near Bogota, Colombia. His family lost their property in a civilwar shortly after his birth. Educated in the American College for Boys, he later was professor there for 15 years and was director of the commercial dept. for nine years. He then organized commercial houses. Was manager of University City in Bogota for nine years. He is now manager and director of Prefabricaciones Limitada; officer of Terrenos Valenzuela, S.A.; Heliaceros, S.A. and Equipos Andamios y Encofrados, S.A. A member of Leatad Lodge No. 10, he was raised on Feb. 10, 1943 and has served three terms as master of same. From 1950–54 he was grand master of the Grand Lodge of Colombia. He is grand secretary general of the Supreme Council of Colombia, 33° since 1948. He has held many positions and received many honors in the symbolic and Scottish rites throughout the Americas.

Gerardo Morales (see under Machado y Morales).

Francis, 9th Earl of Moray (see Lord Doune).

James, 7th Earl of Moray Ninth Grand Master Mason of Scotland in 1744.

Sir Robert Moray (also Murray) (1600?–1673) Scottish soldier, philosopher, and alchemist; first president of the Royal Society and the first known initiate into speculative Freemasonry in England. His initiation, May 20, 1641, was by some members of the Lodge of Edinburgh serving in the Scots Army, which was then besieging Newcastle–on–Tyne. Moray was quartermaster general of that army. The record of his initiation appears in the History of the Lodge of Edinburgh: “At Neucastell the 20 day off May 1641. The qwhilk day ane serten nomber off Mester and othere bing lafule conwined, doeth admit Mr. thie Right Honerabell Mr. Robert Moray Generall quarter Mr. to the Armie off Scotlan and the sam Bing aproven be the hell Mester off the Mesone off the Log off Edenbroth quherto they heawe set to ther handes or markes. A. Hamilton, R. Moray, Johne Mylln, James Hamilton.” This was five years before the initiation of Elias Ashmole, q.v. The only further record of Moray’s attendance at his lodge was in 1647, but in his correspondence, he constantly used his Mason’s Mark, which was in the form of a pentalpha. He had the distinction of being the first president of the Royal Society and the leading member of that body during his lifetime. Knighted by Charles I, he was secretary of state of Scotland under Charles II, and was in great favor with that monarch; so much, in fact, that on his death (July 4, 1673), the king ordered him buried in the garden at Whitehall at his expense. He devoted much of his time to chemistry experiments and was the keeper of the king’s laboratory. He is described in a 1753 history as being “a great admirer of the ‘Rosy Crusians’ and well versed in chemistry and experimental philosophy.”

Miguel Morayta (1833–1917) Spanish lawyer, philosopher, writer, and professor of history in Madrid. He was a deputy to the Cortes and at one time grand master of the Grand Orient of Spain.

After that country gained its independence in 1821, he engaged in politics, and aided in organizing the new government. He led the army in victories over reactionaries in El Salvador in 1828 and Guatemala in 1829. He fled to Peru where he organized an army and invaded Costa Rica with the intention of reorganizing the federation, but was captured, court-martialed, and shot Sept. 15, 1842. A Mason, a lodge was named in his honor and a future president—Bertrand, q.v., was initiated in it.

Count Nikolay Semenovich Mordinov Russian admiral and statesman. Member of The Scull Lodge which opened in Moscow in 1809.

Jean Victor Moreau (1763–1813) French General of Revolutionary and Napoleonic Armies. He commanded the army of the Rhine and Moselle in 1796 and drove the Austrians back to the Danube. In 1799 he commanded the army in Italy and was defeated at Cassano d'Adda. In 1800 he commanded the Army of the Rhine and won the battle of Hohenlinden. He headed the Republican and Royalist conspiracy against Napoleon, q.v., and was exiled. He spent his exile near Trenton, N.J. between 1805–13, and while in this country visited Holland Lodge No. 8, N.Y.C., on Dec. 27, 1806. He entered the Russian service and was mortally wounded at the Battle of Dresden, Aug. 27, 1813, dying Sept. 2. He is recorded as a member of the Loge Parfaite Union, Rennes, France, but when visiting Holland lodge registered as a member of Loge de Sincerite, no location given.

Moved to Falls City in 1895, serving as mayor of that city, and in the state senate. Was unsuccessful candidate for U.S. senate in 1918 and for governor in 1920. Member of Falls City Lodge No. 9, Falls City, Nebr., receiving degrees on June 28, Oct. 9, 1911 and Jan. 15, 1912. Member of Scottish Rite at Lincoln, Nebr. d. May 31, 1942.

Albert P. Morehouse (1835–1891) Governor of Missouri, 1887–88. b. July 11, 1835 in Delaware Co., Ohio. Came to Nodaway Co., Mo., at the age of 21 with his father. He began as a teacher, studying law in the meantime. Admitted to the bar in 1860, he began practice in Montgomery Co., Iowa. Returned to Mo. when the Civil War broke out and was commissioned a first lieutenant in Kimball's regiment of enrolled militia. Was an ardent worker for the establishment of the Northwest Teachers Coll. at Maryville. Served in state legislature two terms, and elected lieutenant governor in 1884 on the ticket with J. S. Marmaduke, q.v. On Marmaduke's death in 1887 he became governor. After retirement in 1889, he devoted himself to farming. Member of Maryville Lodge No. 165, Owens Chapter No. 96, R.A.M., and Maryville Commandery No. 40, K.T., all of Maryville. The orders of Knighthood were conferred in Nov. and Dec., 1888. Committed suicide Sept. 23, 1891.

Jose Maria Morelos (1765–1815) Mexican Catholic priest and patriot, who shares the honors with Hidalgo, q.v., as liberator of Mexico. b. Sept. 30, 1765 in Valladolid (now named Morelia in his honor), of poor parents, who soon died. At the age of 30 he had saved enough to enter the Coll. of San Nicholas in his home town, where Hidalgo was rector. Ordained to the priesthood in 1800, he became cure of Caracuaro and Nocupetaro. When Hidalgo proclaimed independence in 1810, Morelos joined him and was given command of the revolution in Southwest Mexico. Starting with 25 men from his parish, he swelled the number to 20,000 at one time, and gained virtual control of the entire area, succeeding Hidalgo as leader of the rebels. A series of defeats, first at the hands of Iturbide, q.v., on Dec. 24, 1813, and later at Puruaran, Jan. 15, 1814, forced him on the defensive. He proclaimed the first Mexican constitution at Apatzingan on Oct. 22, 1814. Was captured at Texmalaca on Nov. 5, 1815, taken to Mexico City, degraded from the priesthood, tried, and executed at San Cristobal on Dec. 22, 1815. Although no proof is offered, Gould in his Military Lodges states he was a Freemason.

Mariano Moreno (1778–1811) Argentine patriot, jurist, and Freemason. He wielded the pen against the Spanish yoke and was named first secretary in the 1810 junta. The following year he was sent to England to obtain support and recognition of Argentine's independence; he died at sea.

Daniel Morgan (1736?–1802) Brigadier General in American Revolution. b. about 1736 in New Jersey. In 1754 he moved to Charleston, Va. and the following year began his military career as a teamster in Braddock's Army. Became acquainted with Washington in the French–Indian War. Settled on a grant of land east of Winchester, Va. in 1762, where he devoted himself to farming and stock raising, with periodic terms in the military service. He fought in Pontiac's War as a lieutenant; farmed from 1765–75; served in Lord Dunmore's War on the frontier in 1773; headed a rifle company of 96 men which arrived in Cambridge, Mass. in July, 1775. He stormed Quebec with Arnold, q.v., and his detachment made the greatest advance; he was captured, but exchanged. Served under Gates, q.v., in his campaign against Burgoyne and received much credit for victory at Freeman's Farm. In Nov. 1777 he joined Washington. He resigned his commission in 1799 in general resentment against congressional promotions. He was back again in Oct. the next year as a brigadier general in the Southern Army. He defeated Tarleton in the Battle of Cowpens with only 900 men, in one of the most brilliant military actions of any war. Twice again he retired to Va. during the war, each time due to rheumatism. In 1781 he was in command of all the light troops and cavalry in Lafayette's army. In 1795 he commanded the large army of Western Pa., as a major general. This army put an end to the "Whisky Insurrection." Member of Williamsburg Lodge No. 6, Va. d. July 6, 1802.

Ephraim F. Morgan (1869–1950) Governor of West Virginia, 1921–24. b. Jan. 16, 1869 in Marion Co., W. Va. Graduate of West Virginia U. in 1897, and began practice of law at Fairmont in 1898. Served as city attorney of Fairmont and judge of intermediate court of Marion Co. Was member of W. Va. public service commission, 1915–20, and solicitor for Dept. of Commerce 1927–33. He served in the 1st Va. Inf. in the Spanish–American War. Member of Fairmont Lodge No. 9, Fairmont, W. Va. receiving degrees on April 9, May 21 and Aug. 27, 1906. Also a 32° AASR (SJ) and Shriner. d. Jan. 15, 1950.

Frederic E. Morgan President of Principia, Elsau, Ill., a school for sons and daughters of Christian Scientists, organized from kindergarten through four years of liberal arts college; served as president 1938–54, and chairman of board since 1942. b. in St. Louis, Mo. Graduate of Washington U. (Mo.) in 1919, and Harvard in 1933. He was a rancher in Oregon until 1915, and has been with Principia since that time, serving as director of the school from 1919–38. Mason and 32° AASR (NJ).

John Hunt Morgan (1826–1864) Confederate Major General noted for his daring raids. b. June 1, 1826 in Huntsville, Ala. In 1830 he settled near Lexington, Ky. In the Mexican War he served as a 1st lieutenant in a cavalry regiment. At the opening of the Civil War he was engaged in the manufacture of bagging. He entered as a captain of Ky. volunteers, and joined General Simon Buckner at the head of the Lexington Rifles. In 1862–63 he commanded a cavalry force in General Bragg's Army. In a series of raids on Ky. he destroyed many millions worth of military stores, captured and burned railroad trains of supplies, tore up tracks, burned bridges, and thereby made it necessary for Union forces to garrison almost every town of importance in the state. Appointed major general in 1862; in 1863, headed a bold raid into Kentucky, Ohio, and Indiana, but was captured and imprisoned in the Federal prison at Columbus, from which he escaped with six Confederate captains in Nov., 1863. He then undertook a raid in Tenn., and while near Greenville, Tenn., was surrounded and killed on Sept. 4, 1864. A member of Daviess Lodge No. 22, Lexington, Ky. (1846), he was buried in the Lexington cemetery with Masonic honors.

Justin C. Morgan Federal Judge, Buffalo, N.Y. since 1956. b. July 8, 1900 in Buffalo, N.Y. Graduate of Colgate U. in 1921 and U. of Buffalo in 1924, being admitted to the bar in 1925, and practicing in Buffalo until 1956. From 1928–35 he was U.S. attorney for Western dist. of N.Y. Received degrees in Hiram Lodge No. 105, Buffalo, N.Y. in 1925; Scottish Rite membership at Buffalo; received 33° (NJ) in Sept., 1957. Past master of his lodge, past thrice potent master of Palmoni Lodge of Perfection, and in 1956 master of ceremonies of the Grand Lodge of New York.

William Morgan (1774-?) His disappearance in 1826 gave rise to the Anti-Masonic party, 141 Anti-Masonic newspapers in the U.S., and almost killed Freemasonry in America. b. Aug. 7, 1774 in Culpeper Co., Va. He later lived at Lexington, Ky., and Richmond, Va. He served under Andrew Jackson, q.v., at the Battle of New Orleans, and in 1821 moved to York, Upper Canada where he became a brewer. In 1823 he was at Rochester, N.Y. and in 1826 took up residence in Batavia. He had visited lodges before coming to Batavia, but there is no evidence to show that he was ever initiated. He did receive the Royal Arch Degree at LeRoy, N.Y. on May 31, 1825. In Batavia he was denied admission to the local lodge, and when a petition for a Batavia chapter was drawn up, his signature appeared on it. On protest it was destroyed and a new one substituted, omitting his name. In anger, he contrived with a David C. Miller, owner of the local Republican Advocate, to publish an expose of Freemasonry. Miller was supposed to have received the E.A. degree in Albany, N.Y. The expose was entitled, Illustrations of Freemasonry by One of the Fraternity Who Had Devoted Thirty Years to the Subject. He was jailed several times for debts, petit larceny, etc., and on his last confinement was released to Lotos Lawson. What happened from here, was, and continues to be, in the realm of speculation. The opponents of Masonry said he was drowned in the Niagara River; the other side said he was paid $500 to leave Batavia, taken to Canada, and released. On Oct. 7, 1827 a badly decayed body was found on the beach 40 miles from Fort Niagara. It was denied that the body was Morgan's and it was claimed by a Mrs. Monroe as that of her husband. Thurlow Weed remarked that "it was a good enough Morgan till after election." The Anti-Masonic movement had started and feeling ran high until it died out in 1835. Families, churches, and communities were split; Freemasons by the thousands publicly disavowed their memberships. Lodges and grand lodges went underground. In New York there were 500 lodges, but by 1834 there were only 49. This was the low point, and from there on recovery was fast and the growth permanent. By 1860 New York had 432 lodges and 25,000 members—10,000 more than in 1820. In 1831 a national Anti-Masonic convention was held with most of the states represented; it nominated William Wirt, q.v., of Maryland for president of the U.S.

Willis E. Morgan Vice President of Burroughs Adding Machine Co. since 1953. b. June 3, 1905 in Phillipsburg, Kans. Graduate of U. of New Mexico in 1925, and Harvard in 1948. He served as conservation commissioner of N.Y., and also as chairman of Governor Roosevelt’s agriculture advisory commission. For a short time he was governor of the Farm Credit Administration, and acting, and under secretary, of treasury. Active in Jewish charity projects. Member of Obed Lodge No. 984, Poughkeepsie, N.Y., receiving degrees on Sept. 19, 1921 and Jan. 16 and April 3, 1922.

Stephen Morin Founder of the Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite in America. There is virtually no personal data on this man who is one of the Masonic “pioneers” of the Western world. Who he was, what he did, when and where he was born or died, is not known. On Aug. 27, 1761, he was empowered by a patent from the “Deputies General of the Royal Art, Grand Wardens, and officers of the Grand Sovereign Lodge of Saint John of Jerusalem” at Paris, to “multiply the Sublime Degrees of High Perfection and to create Inspectors in all places where the Sublime Degrees are not established.” There is even question as to who granted the patent (i.e. the grand lodge, the accepted rite, or a joint authority of both). At any rate he shortly sailed for the Americas and established bodies of the Scottish Rite in Santo Domingo and Jamaica. He appointed M. M. Hayes, q.v., a deputy inspector general for North America, and Hayes in turn appointed Isaac da Costa, q.v., a deputy for South Carolina, where in 1801 the Mother Supreme Council, AASR was created, and eventually spread throughout the U.S.

Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart (1756–1791) Austrian composer who created more than 600 works during his short life, covering almost every known field of music. b. Jan. 27, 1756 in Salzburg, Austria. His full name was Johannes Chrysostomus Wolf-gangus Theophilus Mozart, son of Leopold—also a composer and a Freemason. When his father received his second degree in his own lodge, Wolfgang wrote Fellow Craft's Journey (Op. K468) to honor the occasion. As a child prodigy, he toured with his father and sister, composing his first published works at the age of seven. He was brought to London at the age of eight, playing before the royal family. In 1768, at the age of 12, he received an imperial commission to compose and conduct an opera, and was made concertmaster to the archbishop of Salzburg in 1769. That same year he was made a chevalier of the Golden Spur by the pope. Returning to Salzburg, he broke with the new archbishop, Hieronymus, who had attempted to hold him in ecclesiastical bondage. In 1782 he settled in Vienna as a teacher and composer. In spite of his position as royal chamber composer to Emperor Joseph II, q.v., he lived in poverty. On Dec. 5, 1784 he was proposed for membership in the lodge Zur Wohltatigkeit and was initiated on Dec. 14, becoming No. 20 on the lodge register. Ten days later he attended lodge Zur wahren Eintracht and on Jan. 7, 1785, he received the second degree in the latter lodge at the request of his mother lodge. On Dec. 1, 1785 his own lodge, Zur Wohltatigkeit united with the lodges Zu den drei Feuern and Zurn heiligen Joseph, to form a new lodge—Zur neugekroentn, Hoffnung (new crowned hope). This was by decree of Emperor Joseph II. For the occasion, Mozart wrote Opening Ode (Op. K483) and Closing Ode (Op. K484). The text includes: "Oh sing today beloved brothers/ Your song of jubilation,/ For Joseph's benevolence/ Has crowned anew our hope/ For in our hearts a threefold flame now gleams." Much of his greatest music was composed after his initiation; an impressing amount had Masonic connections. His greatest work is perhaps The Magic Flute, his last opera. It was first produced in Vienna in Sept., 1791, shortly before his death. Mozart felt that Freemasonry was being persecuted and this opera was intended to vindicate the aims of the institution. The overture contains three chords, played thrice to the rhythm of the three raps in the third degree (it belonged in the first degree at this time). The second act is laid in the temple of Isis and Osiris and the Masonic allusion is very striking. It was thought that the Craft was of Egyptian origin at that time. Here the high priest puts three questions: "Is he virtuous?, Is he charitable?, Can he be silent?", and the three chords are heard once again. In 1785 he wrote Die Gessellenreise (Journey of the Fellowcrafts), a Masonic song (Opus 468). On April 20, 1785 he wrote Maurerfreude (Opus 471), a short cantata which was performed on April 24 in a special lodge held that day to celebrate Von Born's discovery of the method of working ores by amalgamation. His last Masonic work was written for the dedication of a Masonic temple in Vienna on Nov. 15, 1791. The words were by Schikaneder, a member of the lodge, who also wrote the libretto for The Magic Flute. It is his Opus 623, written for two tenors and a bass with orchestral accompaniment. It was the last finished composition of which Mozart conducted the performance. It contains an appendix and a hymn for closing of the lodge, which was probably Mozart's farewell to the Craft. The words of the hymn, in part, are: "Today we consecrate this habitation for our temple, for the first time we gather within this new seat of knowledge and of virtue, and look, the consecration is completed. Oh! that the work were finished also that consecrates our hearts." Mozart was present when his good friend and fellow composer Franz Joseph Hayden, q.v., was initiated in Lodge Zur Wahrn Eintracht of Vienna on Feb. 4, 1785. It is a matter of speculation why Hayden was not taken into Mozart's own lodge, now consolidated as Zur Neugekronten Hoffnung (New Crowned Hope) with its auspicious membership that included a ruling prince, 36 counts, one marquis, 14 barons, 42 nobles, and other prominent men of Vienna. His death came under unusual circumstances while on a trip to Berlin, and it is thought he was poisoned by a man named Salieri. He was buried in an unknown grave. A lodge of mourning was held for him and the oration delivered there was published in 1792, and sold for the benefit of his family: "It has pleased the everlasting Master Builder to tear our beloved Brother from the chain of our brotherhood. Who did not know him? Who did not value him? Who did not love him, our worthy Brother, Mozart? Only a few weeks ago he stood in our midst, and with the magic tones added such beauty to the dedication of our Masonic Temple. Mozart's death brings irreparable loss to his art; his talents which were apparent in his earliest youth have made him even then the greatest marvel of his time. Half Europe valued him. The great called him their favorite, Liebling, and we called him Brother. But while we must of necessity recall his powers in Art we must not forget the praise due to his great heart. He was a most enthusiastic follower of our Order. Love for his Brethren, sociability, enthusiasm for the good cause, charity, the true and deep feeling of pleasure when he was able by means of his talents to help one of his Brethren, these were the chief features of his character. He was husband, father, friend to his friends. Brother to his Brethren, these were the chief features of his character. Only the wherewithal was wanted to hinder him from making hundreds happy, as his heart bade him.”

Alphonse Marie Mucha (1860–1932) Czech painter and illustrator. In 1923 he was elected sovereign grand commander of the Czech Supreme Council, AASR.

John S. Muckle (1862–1929) Engineer and inventor. b. Dec. 12, 1862 in Philadelphia, Pa. Member of engineering firm of Muckle & Co., Philadelphia for 22 years. Member of Lodge No. 51, Philadelphia, Pa., receiving degrees on May 22, June 26, 1902. d. March 20, 1929.

Leo Mueffelman (1881–1934) German Masonic martyr. Studied in Rostock and Berlin, Germany, where he earned his doctorate on the thesis, The Problem of Freedom and Will. While on one of his trips abroad in 1933, he heard that the Nazis had arrested his closest Masonic colleagues. He hurried back to Germany to help them, but was arrested himself. After his release, broken in health as a result of torture and abuse, he died Aug. 23, 1934. He found his life’s work in Masonry. The son of Dr. Ludwig Mueffelman, he was initiated by his father in Humanitas Grand lodge of Hamburg on Nov. 13, 1913 and was passed and raised in one day (May 20, 1915) while under arms. In 1921 he and his father founded the Lodge of the Ancient Charges and he was master in 1925. In 1930 he founded the Symbolic Grand Lodge of Germany. After the dissolution of the grand lodge by Hitler, one of the lodges, Ein Hashiloah continued, and eventually was incorporated into the Grand Lodge of Israel.

Friederich von Mueller German poet. He was a friend of Goethe, q.v., and a member of Lodge Amelia at Weimar, being initiated in 1809. He later served as the orator and deputy master of the lodge. He delivered the address to the lodge on the occasion of the 50th jubilee of the Grand Duke Charles Augustus, q.v., of Saxe Weimar in 1825. Shortly thereafter he made another address to the memory of Goethe. Several selections by him were printed in the song book of his lodge.

Frederick Augustus Conrad Muhlenberg (1750–1801) Lutheran minister; son of Henry M. Muhlenberg, founder of the Lutheran Church in America; member of Continental Congress, and first speaker of the first U.S. House of Representatives. b. Jan. 1, 1750 in Trappe, Pa. He was educated at Halle, Germany, returning to America in 1770, where he became his father's assistant. From 1773–76 he was pastor of the Christ German Lutheran congregation in New York City, but his sympathies with the patriots compelled him to leave. He then resided for a time with his father at Trappe, Pa., and in 1777 moved his family to New Hanover to take pastoral charge of that part of his father's field of labor, and soon afterward of the congregations at Oley and New Goshenhoppen. On March 2, 1779 he was elected to the 1st Congress, and in Aug. of that year he laid aside his pastoral office and entered on a political career. He was a member of Lodge No. 3, Philadelphia, Pa. as was his brother John P. G. Muhlenburg, q.v. He is recorded as a visitor to Lodge No. 8, Chester Co. Pa. on Dec. 24, 1788. d. June 4, 1801.

John Peter Gabriel Muhlenberg (1746–1807) Lutheran minister; son of Henry M. Muhlenberg, founder of the Lutheran Church in America; Revolutionary Major General; U.S. Congressman and U.S. Senator. b. Oct. 1, 1807 in Trappe, Pa. Educated at Halle, Germany, returning to America in 1766, where he was pastor of Lutheran churches in New Germantown and Bedminster, N.J. In 1772 he moved to Woodstock, Va., where there was a large concentration of German Lutherans. Peculiarly, he had to go to England to be ordained an Episcopal priest before he could collect tithes—which he did. An ardent patriot, and friend of Washington, he accepted a colonel's commission in the Army. In a very dramatic and eloquent sermon before his congregation, he ended with the words: "There is a time for all things—a time to preach and a time to pray; but there is also a time to fight, and that time has now come." Then pronouncing the benediction, he went to the door of his church, ordered the drums beat for recruits, and 300 of the congregation responded. They became the 8th Va. Regiment, or "German Regiment," and fought with honor. He first went to the relief of Charleston, S.C. He was present at the Battle of Sullivan's Island, becoming brigadier general in 1777. He was engaged at Brandywine, Germantown, Monmouth, Stony Point, and

Yorktown. At the close of the war he was made major general. Returning to Pa. he was elected a member of the Pa. council, and was vice-president of that state when Franklin was president. He was a member of the 1st U.S. Congress (his brother Frederick A. C. Muhlenberg, q.v., was its first speaker) and also served in the 2nd and 3rd congresses, serving from 1789–95. He was elected again and served from 1799–1801. In 1801 he was elected U.S. Senator from Pa., but resigned before congress met, to accept the appointment as supervisor of revenue for Pa. His statue is in the U.S. Capitol, Washington, D.C. He was a member of Lodge No. 3, Philadelphia, Pa. (as was his brother, Frederick A. C.), receiving his degrees, April 13–15–17, 1779, at the same time as General James Hogun, q.v., and General William Thompson, q.v. He is recorded as a visitor to Lodge No. 8, Chester Co., on two occasions—Sept. 2, 1784 and Dec. 20, 1785. d. Oct. 1, 1807.

Joachim Murat (1767–1815) French General and Prince; King of Naples. Was Napoleon's famous cavalry commander. He served in Italy in 1796–97 and Egypt, 1798–99, rising to general of division. He aided Napoleon in the coup d'etat of 1799, and the following year married Napoleon's sister, Maria Annunciata Bonaparte. He was appointed governor of Paris, and created marshal of France in 1804. In 1805 he was created prince and high admiral. He commanded the cavalry at the battles of Austerlitz (1805) and Jena (1806). In 1808 he became king of Naples under the title Joachim I Napoleon, and was known as the "Dandy King." He joined Napoleon on his return from Elba, and was defeated by the Austrian Army at Tolentino in May, 1815, captured, and executed on Oct. 13, 1815. In 1803 he was appointed senior grand warden of the Grand Orient of France. When the fifth Supreme Council of the World was established at Naples, on June 11, 1809, by the supreme council at Milan, a concordat became necessary and was executed May 3, 1811, between the Grand Orient, which was created June 24, 1809, and the Supreme Council of Naples, whereby the latter should have sole control over the degrees beyond the 18th. Murat (then king) accepted the supreme command of both bodies. His son, Napoleon Lucien Charles Murat, q.v., was grand master of the Grand Orient of France.

Napoleon Lucien Charles Murat (1803–1878) Prince of France and son of Joachim Murat, q.v. Napoleon Bonaparte was his mother's brother. He came to the United States in 1825, but made repeated efforts to recover his father's throne as King of Naples. He settled in France about 1848, and was created a senator after the coup d'état of Dec. 2, 1851, and given formal recognition as prince of the imperial family. He was appointed grand master of the Grand Orient of France, –resigning the office in 1861.

Car. line, and during the first part of the war served with his regiment with the main body of the Army under Washington. At the capture of Stony Point, Murfree commanded the N.C. battalion of picked men that took position immediately in front of the fort and opened fire to distract fire. It is said that three-quarters of the light infantry officers in that action were Masons, and often appeared in American Union Lodge. Murfree visited this lodge, June 24, 1779, at West Point. He was then sent to take part in the southern campaigns and served in Georgia under General Sumner. When the army disbanded in 1783, he retired as a colonel and became a leading figure in the Society of the Cincinnati in his state. His early Masonic connection was with the Royal William Lodge No. 5 at Winton, N.C., which he served as master. He represented the lodge at the organization of the grand lodge at Tarborough in 1787, serving as junior warden pro-tern of the convention. When the grand lodge began to issue charters under its own registry, Murfree promptly filed a petition of American George Lodge No. 17 at Murfreesboro, Tenn., under the Grand Lodge of N. Car. and was its first master in 1789 and represented it at grand lodge session in 1790. d. July 6, 1809.

Joseph S. Murrow (1835–1929) A Baptist missionary to the Seminole Indians, and “founder of Freemasonry in Oklahoma.” b. June 7, 1835 in Georgia, he came to the Indian Terr. in 1857. His long career among the Indian tribes caused him to be known as “Father Murrow” and this was carried into his Masonic career, where the term was one of endearment. He was on the lookout for Masons at all times, both among the whites and Indians during this early period, with the idea of establishing a lodge. This was accomplished with the establishment of a lodge at Boggy Depot, which afterwards moved to the town of Atoka and is now known as Oklahoma No. 4. He received his degrees in Andrew Jackson Lodge No. 88, Linden, Tex. on Sept. 15, Oct. 20, Dec. 15, 1867. He dimitted from it on Feb. 16, 1867 and affiliated with the above named lodge (Ok-la-ho-ma No. 217) at Boggy Depot under the jurisdiction of Arkansas. Count Wassily W. Mussin–PushkinBruce Russian secret councillor and chamberlain of Emperor Alexander I, q.v. In 1814 he was elected to head the Directorial Grand Lodge of Russia. This lodge split the following year, due to differences, and he became the first grand master of the new grand lodge “Astrea.” On Aug. 1, 1822, Alexander I sent an edict through Kochubey, closing all Masonic lodges in Russia. S. S. Lanskoj, q.v., grand master of the other grand lodge also received a copy of this edict.

Benito Mussolini (1883–1945) Italian dictator and anti-Mason. A revolutionary from youth, he was many times jailed and was under constant police surveillance. Became editor of Avarai, the official Socialist paper of Italy, in 1912, and resigned in 1914 to establish his own Il Popolo d'Italia. He appealed for Italy to enter WWI with the allies and served as a private in that war. After the war he engaged in a campaign against Communism and organized the Fascio di Combattimento at Milan on March 23, 1919. This was the beginning of Fascism in Italy. It officially took the form of a political party in 1921. In 1922 he led the Fascists in a march on Rome, and when the cabinet resigned, Mussolini was summoned by the king to form a ministry. By gaining control over a number of ministries, changing the electoral law, and suppressing all opposition, he gained control of the government. In 1929 he signed a treaty with the Roman church, ending a 59-year-old dispute. He conquered Ethiopia in 1936; withdrew from the League of Nations in 1937; conquered Albania in 1939; aided Franco in Spanish civil war; did away with the chamber of deputies in 1938; and entered WWII on side of Hitler in May, 1940. When the allies invaded Italy, he was deposed in July, 1943 and imprisoned. In a daring mission, the Germans rescued him in 1943. He was captured and killed by Italian partisans on April 28, 1945. At the time of Mussolini's rise to power, there were two grand lodges in Italy. He played one against the other, and finally the Roman church against what remained. He banned Freemasonry in Italy in 1923. Torrigiani, q.v., the grand master of the Grand

Orient of Italy, died in prison on the island of Lipari, a martyr to the Masonic cause, and other grand officers suffered various punishments.

As a military resident of Cephalonia in 1822–33, he met Byron and declined offer to become commander of Greek Army. Began the conquest of Sind in 1842 and completed it by the victory of Hyderabad in 1843. He subdued the hill tribes in 1844–45 and resigned the government of Sind in 1847. He was the author of books on colonial administration and the government of India. He was made a Mason on June 16, 1807 in Doyle's Lodge of Fellowship, Guernsey, England, and in Nov. 1848 became an honorary member of Union Lodge Limerick, Ireland.

Francis, 7th Lord of Napier Thirty-seventh Grand Master Mason of Scotland, 1788–89.

Frederic John Napier (see 1st Viscount Chelmsford).

Napoleon I (1769–1821) French military genius and Emperor of France, 1805–14. b. Aug. 15, 1769 in Ajaccio, Corsica. d. in exile May 5, 1821, on island of St. Helena. At one time he controlled most of Europe. His biographers have depicted him as a champion of the French people and a defender of democracy on one hand, and as an adventurer and despot who exploited the Revolution for personal gain, on the other. He possessed an unquestionable military genius and great administrative ability. This biographical sketch will confine itself to his Masonic associations, the main part being taken from Bro. J. E. S. Tuckett's research appearing in the A.Q.C. transactions of 1914. One source has it that he was initiated in an Army Philadelphie Lodge between 1795–98, and another places it at Malta between June 12–19, 1798. The former would seem to have preference, as authorities who have studied his movements state that the Malta initiation would be unlikely at that –time. In 1801 a prominent Ecossais member, Bro. Abraham, wrote “as proud now to number the immemorial Brothers Bonaparte and Moreau, q.v., among its members.” The official report of a Masonic festival at Dijon in Nov. of that year described Masonic honors paid to Bonaparte and Moreau. Napoleon's four brothers—Joseph, Lucian, Louis, and Jerome, qq.v., were Freemasons, as well as his stepson, Eugene Beauharnais, q.v., his brother-in-law Murat, q.v., and nephew, Jerome. Most of them held high Masonic rank. The Empress Josephine was friendly to Freemasonry and was initiated into adoptive Freemasonry in the Lodge Les Francs Chevaliers at Paris in 1804, with several ladies of her court, and became an active member as well as patroness of that rite. Those who were chosen by Napoleon for high honor and office in the state were usually Freemasons. Of the six, who, with the emperor himself, formed the Grand Council of the Empire, five were certainly Freemasons, including Arch

Chancellor Prince Jean Jacques Regis Cambaceres, q.v., an enthusiastic and active Mason. Of the nine lesser imperial officers of state, six at least were active Masons. Of the marshals of France who served under Napoleon, at least 22 of the first 30 were Freemasons, many of them grand officers of the Grand Orient. The union of all the separate and often mutually hostile rites in one governing body was a project of Napoleon. As first consul of France, he threatened to abolish Freemasonry altogether unless this was accomplished. Late in 1804, at the request of Cambaceres, he interested himself in the reorganization of the Grand Orient, with the result that in 1805 it assumed control over the whole body of Freemasonry in the empire, with the emperor's brother, Joseph, as grand master, and Cambaceres and Murat as his deputies. Through Cambaceres, Napoleon assured the craft of his imperial protection, stating that he had instituted inquiry on the subject of Freemasonry, and that he perceived that their high moral aims and purposes were worthy of his favor.

Napoleon III (1808–1873) Emperor of France, 1852–71. Son of Louis Bonaparte, q.v., and nephew of Napoleon I. Full name was Charles Louis Napoleon Bonaparte. He became head of the Bonaparte family when Napoleon II died in 1832. He plotted a revolt in Strasbourg in 1836, but it was discovered and he was sent to America; he returned in 1837 and formed another conspiracy, at Boulogne in 1840. This time he was arrested and condemned to life imprisonment. He escaped prison in 1846, and made his way to England, where he wrote social and military papers. After the revolution of 1848 he was welcomed to Paris, elected to the national assembly, and became president of the Republic, Dec. 10, 1848. He immediately began to acquire absolute authority, and by a coup d'état made himself dictator in 1851, and emperor on Dec. 2, 1852. He sent Archduke Maximilian, q.v., to Mexico and dreamed of establishing a Catholic and French empire in America, but his plans were frustrated by Juarez, q.v., the Mexican people, and the U.S. Bismarck involved him in the Franco-Prussian War and he was deposed by the national assembly in 1871; he retired with family to England, where he died. He was a member of the Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite of France.

Alfred Joseph Naquet (1834–1916) French scholar, chemist and politician. He was a member of the chamber of deputies in 1871 and of the senate in 1882. He is known as the father of the French divorce law. He wrote among others, Principes de Chimie; Socialisme Collectiviste et Socialisme Liberal; and Temps Futurs. Bulletin of International Masonic Congress, 1917, states he was a Freemason.

Viscountess of Narbonne Lady of French nobility who was initiated into adoptive Freemasonry in a lodge established in 1780 by the Lodge of Social Contract. The Princess de Lamballe, q.v., was grand mistress of the lodge at the time. Other contemporary initiates of the lodge were the Viscountess of Alfrey, Countess of Maille, and Abbe Bertolio, qq.v.

Viscount Horatio Nelson (1758–1805) British Naval hero. Saw first service in the West Indies in 1780. Served under Hood in taking Bastia and Calvi, losing his right eye in last engagement. He completed the reduction of Corsica in 1794 and was appointed commodore in 1796. With Jervis he gained victory over French and Spanish fleets off Cape St. Vincent in Feb., 1797, and was named rear admiral that year. Was shot through right elbow in attempting to take Santa Cruz de Tenerife in 1797, and lost his arm by amputation. Captured or sunk all but two frigates of the French fleet in Battle of the Nile, 1798. Blockaded Malta and Naples; and was created viscount in 1801. Won the Battle of Trafalgar with the French fleet in 1805, but was struck by a sharpshooter's musket ball that broke his spine, and he died as victory was completed with the annihilation of the enemy fleet. A writer in the Freemasons' Quarterly Review in 1839 claimed Nelson and his servant, Tom Allen, were Freemasons, but gives no evidence to support his claim. Hamon Le Strange, in his History of Freemasonry in Norfolk, says that among the furniture of the Lodge of Friendship No. 100, at Yarmouth, there is a stone bearing an inscription to Nelson. On one side of the stone is an inscription commemorating the foundation of the Lodge of United Friends No. 564 on Aug. 11, 1697, and on the other side the inscription: "In Memory of Bro. V. Nelson of the Nile, and of Burnham Thorpe, in Norfolk, who lost his life in the army of Victory, in an engagement with ye Combin'd Fleets of France and Spain, off Cape Trafalgar, Oct. 21, 1805. Proposed by Bro. John Cutlove." At the Masonic Hall, Reading, may be seen a framed print with a representation of a banner carried at Lord Nelson's funeral. It bears the following words: "We rejoice with our Country but mourn our Brother." It was carried at the funeral by York Lodge No. 256.

Jeremiah O'Brien (1744?–1818) Naval captain in American Revolution. Birth date is variously given as 1744 and 1740. His father, Morris, was a native of Cork, Ireland. He settled in Machias, Maine, where he engaged in the lumber business with his six sons, before the Revolution. When the English ship Margaretta sailed into the Machias harbor with two lumber sloops, O'Brien as captain, commandeered one of the sloops, and with 60 volunteers, including his brothers, captured the Margaretta. This was the first Naval engagement of the Revolution. He then captured the Diligence and her tender. Subsequently, he cruised the coast for a year and a half, taking several prizes. He was later captured while commanding the privateer, Hannibal, and was imprisoned six months on a guardship and sent to England, from where he escaped. He later became the collector of the port of Machias. He became a member of St. Andrew's Lodge, Boston, being raised on March 26, 1778. At least three of his brothers were Freemasons. Jeremiah, with his father, started Warren Lodge No. 2, East Machias. It was named for General Joseph Warren, q.v., and Jeremiah was its first junior deacon and senior warden in 1782–84. In 1802 he is listed as one of the subscribers to The Vocal Companion and Masonic Register, printed in Boston. At one time a congressional committee was being prodded by Irish politicians, the Knights of Columbus, and the Ancient Order of Hibernians, to erect a monument to his memory. When Admiral George W. Baird, q.v., appeared before the committee and informed them of his Masonic connections, the monument plan was dropped. In 1900 a U.S. destroyer was named for him. The O'Brien Rifles (from Maine) of the Spanish–American War was also named in his honor. Sources also differ on his death date. One gives it as Sept. 5, 1818 and another Oct. 5, 1818.

Joseph O'Brien Revolutionary War patriot and brother of Jeremiah O'Brien, q.v. He assisted in the capture of the British vessels at Machias, Maine, and later served as a private in the Revolutionary Army. Member of Warren Lodge No. 2, East Machias, Maine, which was founded by his brother, Jeremiah, and father, Morris.

William S. O'Brien (1825–1878) Early California gold miner. b. in Abbeylax, Ireland. He emigrated early in life to N.Y.C., where he acquired citizenship in 1845. Went to Calif. in 1849 and worked some time in the mines. In 1851 he was in the liquor business in San Francisco, and subsequently in the ship–chandlery business. In 1854 he entered into partnership with James C. Flood, his former associate in mining, and for 12 years they conducted a restaurant–saloon. Acquiring an interest in the silver mines of Nevada, they devoted themselves entirely to mining operations. O'Brien was one of the four principal stockholders of the mine on the Comstock ledge called the Big Bonanza, which was discovered in 1874. He left a fortune of 15 to 20 million dollars. In 1853 he was secretary of Golden Gate Lodge No. 30, San Francisco, Calif. d. May 2, 1878.

Daniel O'Connell (1775–1847) Irish national leader known as "The Liberator." b. Aug. 6, 1775. He united Irish Roman Catholics under the leadership of their priests into a league for urging Irish claims, and in 1823 originated the Catholic Association, and perfected its constitutional method of agitation for repeal of civil disabilities by mass meetings. He was elected a member of parliament in 1828. He took his seat only after the Catholic emancipation act of 1829, which was forced on Wellington and Peel by public opinion. He led the agitation for the abolition of tithes of the established church in Ireland, and opposed the movement against rent. He was lord mayor of Dublin in 1841, and revived the earlier demand for repeal of the union between Great Britain and Ireland. He recreated the Catholic Association in 1842, and was arrested for seditious conspiracy in 1843, being released the following year. He found his power broken by dissension, opposition by young revolutionaries, and distress from the potato famine. O'Connell was raised in Lodge No. 189, Dublin, Ireland, in 1797, and served as master of the same in 1800. He later became a member of Lodge No. 13, Limerick, and a charter member of the lodge in Tralee. He once defined Freemasonry as "Philanthropy unconfined by sect, nation, colour or religion," and stated that he was "pleased to own himself a Mason." In 1800 he was selected by the grand lodge to explain to the grand master that the appointed district deputy grand master was disliked and should be removed. He fulfilled this delicate mission with success. Throughout the Seaton Rebellion, (1808-14), he acted as standing counsel for the Grand Lodge of Ireland. Little more is heard of him as a Freemason until 1837, when he wrote a letter to The Pilot, Dublin, to contradict a rumor that he still belonged to the Craft, stating that his objections to it were (1) that it might counteract the temperance movement, and (2) the wanton and multiplied taking of oaths. When this was reported to the grand lodge he was expelled by resolutions. Ironically the presiding deputy grand master had himself been made a Mason by Daniel O'Connell.

Entered the military service, and during the invasion of Spain by Napoleon in 1808, he was minister of war under the provisional government of Cadiz. Was imprisoned on restoration of Ferdinand VII, but later released and appointed adjutant to the king in 1820. A known liberal, he was appointed viceroy of Mexico, arriving at Vera Cruz, Aug. 3, 1821. He offered to give the country full self-government and through Santa Anna, q.v., met with Iturbide, q.v., at Cordova and signed a treaty recognizing the independence of Mexico under the immediate rule of Ferdinand VII. O'Donoju and Iturbide were members of the first ruling junta. It is said that O'Donoju formed several Masonic lodges and established a Masonic paper, El Sol. d. Oct. 8, 1821.

Hans Christian Oersted (1777–1851) Danish physicist, who, in 1819, discovered that a pivoted magnetic needle turned at right angles to a conductor carrying a current, thus founding the science of electromagnetism. In both his writings and his talks, he treated science in a popular vein, and thus contributed to education. A Mason.

Patrick O'Flynn (? –1818) Revolutionary War soldier. He owned the famous "The Sign of the Ship" tavern at the corner of Third and Market streets in Wilmington, Del., where he was host to such notables as George Washington, Thomas Jefferson, John Adams and his wife, Abigail, Louis Philippe, Aaron Burr, and Commodore Perry. The name of the tavern was later changed to "Happy Retreat." He was a State representative in 1806. Member of Lodge No. 14 (Pa. charter) at Wilmington, and master of the same in 1780.

Aaron Ogden (1756–1839) Revolutionary War officer; U.S. Senator and Governor of New Jersey. b. Dec. 3, 1756 in Elizabeth, N.J. Graduated from Princeton in 1773 and was a tutor in Barber's Grammar School from 1773 until 1775, when he entered the Revolutionary Army as a lieutenant, later advancing to brigade major. He served as a colonel, in the War of 1799 with France, and in 1812 declined an appointment by President Madison as major general. Washington entrusted him with the delicate task of contacting Sir Henry Clinton in an effort to exchange Major Andre's life for the surrender of Benedict Arnold. He studied law and was admitted to the bar in 1784, practicing in Elizabeth. He served in the U.S. senate from Feb. 28, 1801 to March 3, 1803, and was governor of New Jersey in 1812. He was a trustee of Princeton Coll. from 1803 until his death. He was a member of Lodge No. 19, a military lodge of the Penn. Artillery about 1779, and later was a charter member and first junior warden of Military Lodge No. 36 of Pa. registry, whose warrant was dated May 25, 1782 and signed by officers of the New Jersey brigade. He was a captain at the time. He was a signer of the petition for warrant of Washington Lodge No. 41 (now No. 33) of Elizabeth, N.J., Dec. 28, 1818. d. April 19, 1839. His brother Matthias, q.v., commanded the 1st N.J. Reg., and Aaron served under him at one time. He was a cousin of Francis B. Ogden, q.v.

Francis B. Ogden (1783–1857) American inventor. b. March 3, 1783 at Boonton, N.J., the son of Mathias Ogden, q.v., and cousin of Aaron Ogden, q.v. He served in the War of 1812, and was an aide-de-camp to General Andrew Jackson, q.v., at the Battle of New Orleans on Jan. 8, 1815. He is credited with having first applied the principles of the expansive power of steam and the right angular gear on marine engines. In 1813 he received a patent for low pressure condensing engines with two cylinders, with gears at right angles. The first engine of this construction was built in 1817. James Watt, who examined the plan, declared it would make “a beautiful engine.” The first screw propeller brought into practical use was by John Ericsson on the Thames River in May, 1837, and the vessel was called the Francis B. Ogden. At Liverpool Ogden built the first propeller boat to be used in the U.S.; it was named the Robert F. Stockton. Ogden was U.S. consul at Liverpool from 1829–40 and at Bristol from 1840–57. Member of Holland Lodge No. 8, N.Y.C. d. July 4, 1857.

Matthias Ogden (1754–1791) Colonel and brevet Brigadier General of American Revolution. b. Oct. 22, 1754 in Elizabethtown, N.J. He was the father of Francis B. Ogden, q.v., and brother of Aaron Ogden, q.v. He joined army under Washington at Cambridge, and accompanied Benedict Arnold, q.v., in his march through the Kennebunk woods in the winter of 1775, participating in the attack on Quebec, where he was wounded. He was made lieutenant colonel of the 1st battalion in 1776, and subsequently colonel of the 1st regiment of the N.J. Continental line, which he commanded until the close of the war. His brother, Aaron, served under him in this regiment, and both were members of Lodge No. 36 of Pa. registry, which was established in the N.J. brigade on May 25, 1782. He was taken prisoner in Nov., 1780. He originated and commanded the unsuccessful attempt to capture Prince William Henry (later William IV, q.v.), in March, 1782. Brevetted brigadier general Sept. 20, 1783. d. March 31, 1791.

James E. Oglethorpe (1696–1785) Founder of Georgia, and British Major General. b. Dec. 31, 1696 in London. He entered the army at an early age, after a short time at Oxford, and was commissioned in the Guards about 1714. He was on the continent with the Duke of Marlborough and Prince Eugene, and in the campaign against the Turks in 1716. He was elected to parliament in 1722 from Hazlemere, and continued as an M.P. for 32 years. Here he concerned himself with the unfortunate condition of the large number of debtors in London prisons and conceived the idea of establishing a colony for them where they could start life anew. Parliament granted ~£10,000 for this and a large sum was raised by subscription, Freemasons contributing heavily. In 1733 the Grand Lodge of England passed a resolution which authorized charity for a society “enabling the trustees to send distressed brethren to Georgia, where they may be comfortably provided for.” The new colony was named Georgia in honor of the monarch. In 1733 he led a band of 150 persons (35 families) to settle at the mouth of the Savannah River, made terms with the Indians, laid out the city of Savannah, was chosen first governor, and supervised its civic affairs. He returned to London in April, 1734, taking the Yamacraw Indian chief and several members of his tribe with him. He returned to Georgia in 1735 with about 300 more emigrants, among whom were the noted Methodist clerics, John and Charles Wesley. In the meantime a number of persecuted German Protestants had joined the colony. Having trouble with the Spanish, who were in possession of Florida, he hastened back to England and raised a regiment of about 600 men and was back in Georgia before the close of 1738. He repelled a Spanish attack in 1742 that was designed to throw the English out of the South. He returned to England in 1743 to answer charges made against him and was acquitted. Another trial in 1752 saw him acquitted again. In 1745 he was made major general and sent north against the forces of the pretender. In 1752 he resigned his charter to Georgia to the British government, and in 1754, retired from parliament. At the start of the American Revolution he was offered supreme command of the British forces in America, but he refused unless he was first given an opportunity to attempt to conciliate the difficulties. He was the only founder of an American colony to see the formation of the United States. In 1735 the Grand Lodge of England issued a warrant for the establishment of King Solomon's Lodge No. 1 at Savannah (now Solomon's No. 1). Oglethorpe was its first master and served for nine years. This lodge was organized by Oglethorpe in a low vale under the spreading branches of an oak, in Feb., 1734. On June 21, 1866 a chair was presented to the lodge, made from the oak under which the lodge was first convened. The lodge also has a Bible presented it by Oglethorpe in 1735. d. 1785.

George Oliver (1782–1867) English clergyman, scholar and early Masonic author. b. Nov. 5, 1782 in Pepplewick, England. He was educated at Nottingham and became a schoolmaster. After taking the Orders in 1813, he became Vicar of Clee in 1815, and later Vicar of Scopwick in Lincolnshire. He received the degree of D.D. in 1836, and became Rector of Wolverhampton. He is said to have been initiated by his father, Dr. Samuel Oliver, in St. Peter's Lodge, Peterborough, as a Lewis (son of a Mason). He later established a lodge at Grimsby and was master for many years. In 1813 he was appointed provincial grand steward, provincial grand chaplain in 1816, and deputy provincial 1944–45. Recalled grand master for Lincolnshire in 1833. He was probably the most prolific Masonic writer the Craft will ever know. From his study poured history, symbolism, law, morals, religion, ethics, facts and fancy in an endless river of information—and misinformation. He taught that Masonry began in the earliest periods of history, that it was given by Seth to his descendants and that after Noah, the art became divided into “pure” and “spurious,” the “pure” coming down through the patriarchs of the Old Testament to Solomon and thus to us. He insisted on giving Masonry a Christian character, and failed to see that the non-sectarianism of the Craft was its great attraction and the bond between its adherents. Had his beliefs persisted, there would have been no universality in Freemasonry. d. March 3, 1867.

George T. Oliver (1848–1919) U.S. Senator from Pennsylvania, 1909–17. b. Jan. 26, 1848 in Donoughmore, Ireland during a visit abroad by his parents who were residents of Pittsburgh, Pa. Fabian Onsari (1892–1956) Argentine politician, newspaper editor, and author. b. Jan. 20, 1892 in San Vicente, Buenos Aires, Argentine. Associated himself with the Argentine Liberal Party, Union Civica Radical, whose founder was Dr. Leandro N. Alem, grand master of Argentina in 1887. Onsari's first public office was that of councilor for the municipality of Avellaneda in 1918–28, and again 1936–40. In 1920 he was elected deputy of the Provincial Legislature for Buenos Aires, serving until 1926, when he was elected senator from the same province. He served until 1930, when a revolution headed by General Jose F. Uriburu exiled Onsari and other high officials of the Liberal party including the ex-president, Dr. Marcelo de Alvear. The political situation becoming normal, he returned from his island exile and was elected deputy of the National Congress for 1938–42, and reelected 1942–46. The latter term was not completed, as another revolutionary movement under General Rawson dissolved the congress. In his political party Onsari held all the offices from secretary to president, retiring from active political participation in 1945. Robert Treat Paine (1731–1814) Signer of the Declaration of Independence. b. March 11, 1731 in Boston, Mass. Graduate of Harvard in 1749. He studied theology and preached for a time, but finally took up law and practiced in Boston. He afterward removed to Taunton. He was a delegate to the provincial congress in 1774–75, and the Continental Congress from 1774–78, serving on important committees, and signing the Declaration of Independence. He was speaker of the Mass. house of representatives in 1777, and also attorney general of that state. From 1790–1804 he was judge of the supreme court of Mass. In 1780 he was a founder of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences. His son, Robert Treat Paine, Jr., q.v., was a poet. Paine is generally accepted as being a Mason. He was among those present at Roxbury, Mass. at a called meeting of the grand lodge, June 26, 1759. Some state that he was a member of Massachusetts Lodge, Boston. d. May 11, 1814.

Robert Treat Paine, Jr. (1773–1811) Poet. b. Dec. 9, 1773 in Taunton, Mass., the son of Robert Treat Paine, q.v., signer of the Declaration of Independence. Graduate of Harvard in 1792. He wrote for several newspapers and became interested in the stage. When he married an actress, his father renounced him, and he was ex-eluded from fashionable society. He then studied law at Newburyport and practiced for a time in Boston. His writings were full of wit and sarcasm and have been called common-place and tawdry by some critics. There is no proof of his Masonic membership, but the name of "Massachusetts Lodge" creeps up in his biography as it does in his father's. The Gentleman's Pocket Register and Free-Masons Annual Anthology of 1813 carried a Masonic ode "written for, and sung at the anniversary of the Massachusetts Lodge, on the visitation of the Grand Lodge, 1796. By the late R. T. Paine, Jr. Esq." d. Nov. 13, 1811.

Thomas Paine (1737–1809) Political philosopher and author who wrote Common Sense; Crisis, the Rights of Man; and The Age of Reason. b. in England of Quaker parents. He tried various occupations but finally went bankrupt. At the suggestion of Benjamin Franklin, he came to America in 1774, and became the editor of Pennsylvania Magazine. His 47 page pamphlet Common Sense, published in 1776, advocated absolute independence, and did much to concentrate sentiment in favor of immediate independence in the colonies. He served for a time in the Continental Army as an aide to General Nathanael Greene, q.v., and following the war went to England and France. He was soon outlawed from England for his writings, urging the people to overthrow their monarchy. He fled to France and became a member of the National Convention and a French citizen. Again he offended the party in power (Jacobins), and was imprisoned. While in prison he wrote The Age of Reason. This was an attack on the Christian religion, and it alienated many of his former friends. Paine, himself, was a Deist. Returning to America in 1802, he became involved in political controversies and lived his last years in ostracism and relative poverty. Although Paine wrote An Essay on the Origin of Freemasonry, he was not a Freemason. This essay sought to trace Freemasonry to the Celtic Druids. He drew on Smith Dodd and Prichard for his references. Certain writers have made claims that he was a member of various lodges both in America and France. d. June 8, 1809.

Served 18 consecutive sessions in the state assembly, and was on the committee that originated the plan for forming the first congress, which met in N.Y., and was the forerunner of the Continental congress. Was appointed King's attorney in 1773, and moved to New London, Conn., where he was a member of the committee of correspondence. He was early a militia –officer. He joined Ethan Allan at Ticonderoga, participated in the Battle of Long Island in Aug. 1776, and was commissioned a brigadier general in that month. Served at Harlem Heights and White Plains, and was later stationed at Peekskill, N.Y., to protect the posts on the North River. He reinforced Washington in N.J. and built the fortifications at West Point. He was commissioned major general in 1780, and succeeded General Israel Putnam, q.v., in command of the Conn. line, serving until the close of the war. He then resumed law practice in Middletown, Conn., and in 1778 was appointed by Washington as the first judge of the Northwest Territory. He moved to Marietta, Ohio. When returning from treating with the Wyandotte Indians on Lake Erie, in the interests of the State of Conn., his boat overturned in the rapids of Big Beaver River on Nov. 17, 1789, and he was drowned. He was an important link in the American counterespionage service, and at one time was suspected of double dealing with the British, being so mentioned in the intelligence reports of Sir Henry Clinton. One of his agents, perhaps by no coincidence, used the code name "Hiram." He received his first degree on May 18, 1863 in St. John's Lodge No. 2, Middletown, Conn. and on Oct. 23, 1765 was admitted a member of Hiram Lodge No. 1, New Haven, Conn. In 1891–92 he made a voyage to northern Greenland; in 1893–95, a third voyage, which was intended to reach the North Pole, failed in its objective. In 1897 he was granted five years' leave of absence from the Navy and was presented with a ship, the Windward, by Lord Northcliffe, which had been used by a British expedition. On his fourth voyage of 1898–1902, he reached 84° 17' N., the farthest north in the American Arctic. Granted another three years' leave in 1903, he sailed in the specially equipped Roosevelt in 1905–1906, and reached within 174 miles of the pole before being forced back. His final and successful expedition in 1908–09 reached the pole on April 6, 1909. When announcing the success of the expedition, he learned that Dr. Frederick A. Cook, who had been a surgeon on the 1891 expedition, had claimed he reached the pole on April 21, 1908—a year before Peary. Cook's claim and Cook himself, were later discredited, and Peary's attainment recognized. A member of the explorers' lodge, Kane No. 454 of N.Y.C., he received his degrees, Feb. 4, 18, and March 3, 1896. To this lodge he presented the Masonic flag that was displayed at Independence Bay, Greenland, on May 20 and 25, 1895. On March 30, 1920 this lodge presented his widow with a special medal in honor of her distinguished husband. Peary also presented two specimens of the great meteorite weighing 90 tons, which he discovered in North Greenland, to the Grand Lodge of New York. d. Feb. 20, 1920.

Co. as assistant district attorney and chief assistant district attorney. As a counsel to U.S. senate committee on banking and currency in 1933–34, he conducted an investigation into banking and stock market practices that led to the creation of the Securities and Exchange Commission, and served as one of its first members. Became associate justice of supreme court of N.Y. in 1935, serving until 1950, when he resigned to become unsuccessful candidate for mayor of N.Y.C. Member of York Lodge No. 197, N.Y.C., and past master of same.

Dom Pedro I (1798–1834) Emperor of Brazil, and as Dom Pedro IV, was later president of Portugal. Name in full was Dom Antonio Pedro de Alcantara Bourbon, the second son of John VI, King of Portugal, of the house of Braganza. b. in Lisbon. He fled to Brazil in 1807 to escape the French. He was made regent of Brazil in 1821, but took sides with the Brazilians against the Portuguese, and declared the independence of that country on Sept. 7, 1822. He was crowned emperor on Oct. 22, 1822. At first he was a popular monarch, but his influence was weakened by despotic actions, and he abdicated in 1831, going to Europe. He was proclaimed king of Portugal, resigned in favor of his daughter, and waged a successful war against his brother Dom Miguel, the usurper. Initiated in Rio de Janeiro in 1821, he was at once elected grand master of the Grand Orient of Brazil. However, in 1822, he suppressed Freemasonry.

During this time he was a farmer. Enlisted in Union Army as a private in 83rd Ill. Vol. Inf., and later became an officer. While in the army he studied law, and was admitted to the bar in 1865, first practicing at Clarksville, Tenn. In 1870 he moved to Fredonia, Kans. In addition to his law practice he owned the Fredonia Journal; later moved to Coffeyville, and edited the Coffeyville Journal. Received degrees in Keystone Lodge No. 102, Coffeyville, Kans. on April 21, May 19, Dec. 15, 1877; was secretary in 1879; dimitted June 2, 1886. d. Oct. 7, 1912.

Peter Pelham (? –1751) Early American artist and engraver. b. in England. He was the first engraver and earliest known artist in New England, coming to America in the latter quarter of the 18th century. His earliest known work in America was a portrait of Cotton Mather dated 1727. He also kept a school in Boston where he taught drawing, painting, and needlework, as well as academic subjects. In 1748 he married the widow of Richard Copley, the mother of John Singleton Copley, the artist, to whom Pelham gave instructions. He became a member of St. John's Lodge, Boston, Nov. 8, 1738, and was secretary of the lodge from 1738–44. d. Dec., 1751.

Carlos Pellegrini President of Argentina, 1890–92. b. in 1846 of Italian parents. He turned to politics after campaigning in Paraguay, and became successively representative, minister, and vice president. He was the prime mover in founding of the Argentina National Bank, and an outstanding economist and jurist. Mason.

Charles Camille Pelletan (1846–1915) French journalist and politician. The son of Pierre Clement Eugene Pelletan, q.v. The bulletin of the International Masonic Congress in 1917 states both were Freemasons.

Pierre Clement Eugene Pelletan (1813–1884) French Senator and author. Member of the Corps Legislatif from 1864–76, and of the senate in 1876–84. He was the author of Les Droits de l'Homme; La Famille, La Mere, and Nouvelles Heures de Travail. He was the father of Charles Camille Pelletan, q.v. The bulletin of the International Masonic Congress in 1917 states both father and son were Freemasons.

Pittsfield, Maine. He was on the staff of the Rochester (N.Y.) Post Express from 1900–11. After 1911 he devoted himself to writing. Among his books are The Scarlet Years; Rifle Rule; Flaming Frontier; Red Man's Courage; Log Cabin Men; The Blazing West; The Torch Bearers; Call of the Wilderness. He wrote about 45 historical novels. Member of Oxford Lodge No. 18, Norway, Maine. d. June 11, 1940.

Edmund Pendleton (1721–1803) Revolutionary patriot and statesman. b. Sept. 9, 1721 in Caroline Co., Va. He had little formal education, and while employed as a clerk, studied law, and was licensed to practice in 1744. Elected to Virginia house of burgesses in 1752. In 1773 he was one of the committee of correspondence, and a member of the first Continental Congress. He attended, in company with George Washington, Peyton Randolph, Patrick Henry, Benjamin Harrison and Richard Henry Lee. As president of the Virginia convention, he was head of the government of the colony from 1775 until the creation of the Virginia constitution in 1776, and was appointed president of the committee of safety in that year. He drew up the celebrated resolutions by which the delegates from Va. to the Continental Congress were instructed to propose a declaration of independence, and his words were afterwards incorporated almost verbatim in the Declaration. On the organization of state government in Va., he was chosen speaker of the house, and with George Wythe and Thomas Jefferson, revised the colonial laws. In 1779, on the establishment of the court of appeals he became president of that body, serving until his death. He was an uncle of Nathaniel Pendleton, q.v. A member of Fairfax Lodge No. 43, Culpepper, Va., he is listed in the proceedings of the Grand Lodge of Virginia in 1800–01–02, and in 1803 in the death list. His name on the lodge record was Edward, but most Masonic historians agree that this was an error and should have been Edmund. d. Oct. 23, 1803.

Nathaniel Pendleton (1756–1821) Revolutionary soldier; U.S. district judge; Constitution framer. b. in 1756 in Culpepper Co., Va., a nephew of Edmund Pendleton, q.v. Entered Revolutionary army at 19, and served with rank of major on staff of Gen. Nathanael Greene, q.v. He settled in Georgia, studied law, and became U.S. district judge. Washington suggested his name for secretary of state, but the proposition was opposed by Alexander Hamilton. Hamilton and Pendleton later became good friends, and the latter acted as Hamilton's second in his duel with Aaron Burr. He was a delegate to the convention that framed the constitution of the U.S., but not being present on the last day of its proceedings, failed to sign it. He moved to New York City in 1796. Member of Solomon's Lodge No. 1, Savannah, Ga. d. Oct. 20, 1821.

John Penn (1741–1788) Signer of Declaration of Independence. b. May 17, 1741 in Caroline Co., Va. Studied law with his relative, Edmund Pendleton, q.v., and was admitted to the bar in 1762. In 1774 he moved to Greenville Co., N.C. where he became a distinguished lawyer. Chosen to Continental Congress of Sept. 8, 1775 to fill a vacancy, and was reelected in 1777 and 1779. When Cornwallis invaded N. Car., Penn was placed in charge of the public affairs of that state and given almost dictatorial powers. There is no proof of his Masonic membership other than a statement made by Col. William L. Taylor of Granville Co., that appeared in the proceedings of the Grand Lodge of North Carolina in 1912. He stated that his father and Penn had attended lodges together in N. Car. d. Sept. 1788.

John Penn (1729–1795) Proprietary governor of Pennsylvania, and grandson of founder, William Penn. b. July 14, 1729 in London, England. Educated in Europe and sent to Pennsylvania, where on Feb. 6, 1753, he became a member of the provincial council with rank of “first member.” He left the colony after Braddock’s defeat, but returned as lieutenant governor, on Oct. 30, 1763. On the death of his father he sailed to England in 1771, leaving the government to the council, but in August, 1773, returned to Pa. as governor in his own right, and by deputation from his uncle. On June 30, 1775 the assembly provided for arming the province, and appointed a committee of safety, which thenceforth was supreme in Pa. Within a month after the Declaration of Independence was signed, a constitutional convention met and vested the supreme executive power in a council; Penn lost his power from this time until June 28, 1779, when the legislature of Pa. transferred to the state most of the proprietary property, and voted a remuneration for same. Sachse in his Old Masonic Lodges of Pennsylvania states that Penn was a member of the “first lodge” in Philadelphia. d. Feb. 9, 1795.

James C. Penney Founder of the J. C. Penney Co., Inc., the world’s largest department store chain, with more than 1700 stores in all 48 states, doing an annual sales of over one billion dollars. b. Sept. 16, 1875 in Hamilton, Mo. A graduate of Hamilton (Mo.) High School, he attended in 1949 the Masonic cornerstone laying of a new high school building at Hamilton, for which he and his sister gave more than half of the $250,000 cost. He holds honorary doctorates from eleven colleges and universities. He founded the J. C. Penney Co. in 1902, and is now honorary chairman of the board. Known as "the Golden Rule merchant," he quit using the word "employee," and called each of his 90,000 workers an "associate," giving each a share in the profits in addition to a salary. After the 1929 stock market crash, Penney lost his fortune, and wound up beaten and despondent, at 56, in a sanitarium, but proved that his method was sound by borrowing money and staging a comeback in which he recouped his fortune. Penney has influenced great numbers of young people through his business operations, Christian youth movements, and by talks, articles, and letters. His own comeback from the depths of financial and mental depression was made possible by a sudden and dramatic rekindling of Christian faith within him. He received his degrees in Wasatch Lodge No. 1, Salt Lake City, Utah, April 28, May 19, and June 2, 1911. In 1955 he became a dual member of United Services Lodge No. 1118, New York City. He is a member of Utah Chapter No. 1, R.A.M., Utah Council No. 1, R. & S.M., and Utah Commandery No. 1, K.T., all of Salt Lake City. He has contributed generously to the retirement of the bonds on the Masonic temple of that city. He received the 32° AASR (SJ) in Utah Consistory No. 1, April 23, 1936, KCCH, Oct. 24, 1941, and 33°, Oct. 16, 1945. He has addressed many Masonic groups. In April, 1958 he was presented the gold distinguished service award by the General Grand Chapter, Royal Arch Masons, at Kansas City, Mo.

James G. Percival (1795–1856) American poet, physician, linguist, geologist, and botanist. b. Sept. 15, 1795 in Kensington, Conn. A man of great learning, he wrote his first poem at the age of 14, and was graduated from Yale in 1815, at the head of his class. After teaching a short time in Philadelphia, he studied medicine and botany, and was licensed to practice. Was appointed assistant surgeon of U.S. Army and professor of chemistry at West Point in 1824, but soon gave it up for medical practice in Boston. He later moved to New Haven, Conn. His best known poems are Prometheus and Cleo. He assisted in preparing the scientific words in the first edition of Noah Webster's Dictionary of the English Language. In 1835 he made a geological survey of Conn. In 1853 he was engaged by the American Mining Co. to survey their lead region in Wis., and the following year was appointed geologist of that state. Initiated, June 4, 1822, in Hiram Lodge No. 1, New Haven, Conn. d. May 2, 1856.

John Percival (1779–1862) Naval officer of War of 1812. b. April 3, 1779 in Barnstable, Mass. He left the merchant service in 1809 and entered U.S. Navy as sailing-master. During the war he displayed great courage in the capture of the British ship, Eagle. He commanded the U.S.S. Constitution as captain, in 1843–47, retiring in 1848. His rough and eccentric manners won him the soubriquet of “Mad Jack.” Member of Holland Lodge No. 8, N.Y.C. in 1816. d. Sept. 17, 1862.

Bishop W. Perkins (1841–1894) U.S. Senator and Representative from Kansas. b. Oct. 18, 1841 in Rochester, Ohio. He prospected through Calif. and N. Mexico in 1860–62, served as sergeant of 83rd Ill. Regiment, and captain in 16th U.S. Colored Inf. He studied law and was admitted to the bar in 1867, beginning practice in Princeton, Ind., and moving later to Oswego, Kansas. Became editor of the Oswego Register in 1873. Served in 48th through 51st U.S. congresses, 1883–91, and was appointed to fill vacancy in U.S. senate, serving from Jan. 1, 1892 to March 3, 1893. He then resumed law practice in Washington, D.C. Original lodge unknown, but admitted to Adams Lodge No. 63, Oswego, Kans. on April 12, 1870. Was senior deacon, 1871; junior warden, 1872. d. June 20, 1894.

George C. Perkins (1839–1923) U.S. Senator and Governor of California. b. Aug. 23, 1839 in Kennebunkport, Maine. Went to sea at age of 12 as a cabin boy, and followed the sea for several years. In 1855 he shipped before the mast on a sailing vessel bound for San Francisco. In Calif. he engaged in mercantile pursuits in Oroville and later was in banking, mining, milling, farming, whale fishing, and operation of coastal steamships. He was elected to the state senate in 1869, and served for eight years. Served as governor of Calif. in 1879–83. In 1893 he was appointed to the U.S. senate to fill a vacancy caused by death of Leland Stanford, q.v., and was reelected twice, serving from 1893–1915, and was not then a candidate for reelection because of ill health. He received his degree in Oroville Lodge No. 103, Oroville, Calif. in Dec., 1859, before he had attained legal majority. He was master of the same in 1864–65, and grand master of the Grand Lodge of California in 1874. He later affiliated with Oakland Lodge No. 188, Oakland, Calif. He became a member of Franklin Chapter No. 20, Oroville, in 1860, and was high priest in 1866. In 1867 he was commander of Oroville Commandery, K.T. He later affiliated with Oakland Chapter, R.A.M., and Oakland Commandery, K.T. d. Feb. 26, 1923.

Jacob Perkins (1766–1849) American born engraver and inventor. b. July 9, 1766 in Newburyport, Mass. He was apprenticed to a goldsmith, and at the age of 15, carried on the business of a goldsmith in his native town. Here he invented a method of plating shoe buckles. When about 21 years old he was employed by the state of Mass. to make dies for copper coinage, and three years later, invented a machine for cutting and heading nails at one operation. He made improvements in bank note engraving by substituting steel for copper plates. After residing for some time in Boston and New York, he moved to Philadelphia in 1814, where he was associated with a firm of bank note engravers. In 1818 he went to England, and in 1819 established the firm of Perkins, Fairman, and Heath, for printing of bank notes. When the penny post was introduced in 1840, his firm (now Perkins, Bacon and Petch) printed the first British stamps —the famous “Penny Black.” In a letter written Dec. 3, 1839, they stated they would charge eight pence per thousand stamps, exclusive of paper. Perkin’s original plates were used until the die was reengraved in 1855 by Wm. Humphrys. He also perfected engines and machines worked by steam power. He invented a “bathometer” to measure the depth of water and a “pleometer” to mark with precision the speed with which a vessel moved through water. He also constructed a gun using steam for propulsion, that would shoot a ball through 11 planks; he attached a tube on the barrel, which, when filled with balls, fell into the barrel and were discharged at the rate of nearly 1,000 per minute. He was a member of St. Peter's Lodge (now defunct), Newburyport, Mass., receiving his degrees on June 10, 15, 1794. In a book entitled Jacob Perkins, His Inventions, His Times and His Contemporaries, it is stated that he was a member of the Newburyport Commandery, K.T., and assisted in conferring the degrees of Red Cross and Knight Templar. d. July 30, 1849.

Joseph Perkins (? –1824) Founder of the Missouri Fur Co. in 1820, in competition with the American Fur Co., which was headed by Pierre Chouteau, Jr. and Bartholomew Bert-hold, qq.v. Included in the founders of the Missouri Fur Co. were two other Freemasons, Joshua Pilcher and Moses B. Carson, qq.v. The first record of Perkins in Mo. was in 1804, when he was summoned as a member of the first grand jury in St. Louis. He was a member of the famous Louisiana Lodge No. 109 at St. Genevieve, Missouri Territory, and later a member of Missouri Lodge No. 1, of St. Louis. In 1814 he was in charge of an escort of 60 U.S. regular troops as a lieutenant. This detachment accompanied General William Clark, q.v., from St. Louis on several barges for Prairie du Chien, north on the Mississippi River. This place was then held by Indians and traders. Perkins and Clark established a fort there, and Perkins remained for some time in charge of the post. He was buried by Missouri Lodge No. 1 in St. Louis, Jan. 24, 1824.

Aristides S. Pietri Published first Masonic book in Puerto Rico in 1873, covering the first three degrees, with their secret work and baptismal ceremonies, and an explanation of the origin of symbols and ancient rites. In 1885 he published Historical Summary of Ancient and Modern Freemasonry. Was several times master of Aurora Lodge under the United Grand Lodge of Colon and Cuba.

Willem Pijper (1896–1947) Netherlands composer. He was of the opinion that good music during the initiation ceremonies was of great value and for that purpose, composed his Six Adagios—his last work. The first public appearance of this work after his death was conducted by a Roman Catholic, who could have had no idea of the Masonic trend of the composition. This was also the case of the Roman Catholic critic, who after having stated that this composition was quite different from the composer's former work, wrote of the Six Adagios: "For what purpose, for what liturgic ceremony were they intended? How could it be that this purpose took possession of the entire man, Pijper, to such an extent, and changed his spiritual horizon so thoroughly? When did this alteration start? At what pace did it develop? Fast or Slow? Were the motives strong enough to suppose that they would have been of lasting influence on Pijper's aesthetics? I hope that one of his friends keeps data which will serve as a starting point for this chapter of Pijper's biography, which will have to declare an evolution as remarkable from the psychological, as from the musicological point of view. . Then he writes a song which, familiarly speaking, has a head and a tail. We hear it, we understand it, because it could rise from each of us. And the rest does not matter. One or another accord, this or another instrument, this or another rhythm, it all seems of no importance since that melody goes the way we desire, even without knowing it. That is why I consider the Six Adagios a masterwork." Pijper died in 1947 at the age of 51 after a long illness.

Albert Pike (1809–1891) Lawyer, poet, soldier, adventurer, author and 8th Grand Commander of the Southern Supreme Council, AASR. b. Dec. 29, 1809 in Boston, Mass. He entered Harvard in 1826, but financial problems prevented the completion of his education. Nevertheless, he became one of the leading intellectuals of that era by self-education. After a time as principal of a school in Newburyport, Mass., he set out for the partially explored regions of the West, traveling by stage to Cincinnati; by steamer to Nashville; on foot to Paducah; by keel-boat down the Ohio; by steamer up the Mississippi; and in 1831 he left with a caravan of ten wagons as one of a party of 40 men under Capt. Charles Bent, q.v., en route from St. Louis to Santa Fe. He arrived at Taos on Nov. 10, 1831, having walked 500 miles from the Cimarron River, where his horse ran away. He remained at Santa Fe until Sept., 1832, and then started with a party down the Pecos River and into the Staked Plain, to the headwaters of the Brazos. Pike, with four others, then made their way to Fort Smith, Ark. Here he again took up the teaching profession, and in 1833 became associate editor of the Arkansas Advocate, purchasing the paper a year later. He then took up the study of law, and being admitted to the bar, sold the paper. In 1839 he contributed to Blackwood's Magazine, a poem, Hymns to the Gods, which established him as a poet of reputation. As a lawyer, he was recognized throughout the Southwest. In the Mexican War, he was commissioned a captain of cavalry in Archibald Yell's, q.v., regiment. After Yell's death, Pike had several differences of opinion with the new commander, which resulted in a bloodless duel between them, but ended his cavalry career. For the next few years he divided his time between the law and his writing, and his residence between New Orleans and Little Rock. When the Civil War broke out in 1861, he cast his lot with the Confederacy, and was named Indian agent and brigadier general of the area, which included the Indian Territory. Once again he differed with his superiors, and when accused of insubordination, he resigned, serving the rest of the war period as a judge of the Arkansas superior court. He practiced law in Memphis, Tenn. for two years before moving to Washington, D.C. at the beginning of his term as sovereign grand commander of the Southern Jurisdiction AASR. He was raised in Western Star Lodge No. 2, Little Rock, Ark in Aug., 1850, when he was 40. Two years later (Nov. 4, 1852), he became charter member and first master of Magnolia Lodge No. 60, Little Rock. On Oct. 4, 1880 he affiliated with Pentalpha Lodge No. 23, Washington, D.C. While in Arkansas he served on many grand lodge committees, including Masonic Law and Usage; Foreign Correspondence; Library; By-Laws, and was a trustee, and subsequently president, of St. John's College, established by that grand lodge. Exalted in Union Chapter No. 2, R.A.M. of Little Rock, Nov. 29, 1850, he became the first grand scribe of the Grand Chapter of Arkansas, and grand high priest in 1853–54. He was first commander of Hugh de Paynes Commandery No. 1, K.T. of Little Rock. Received the R. & S.M. degrees in Columbia Chapter, R.A.M., of Washington, D.C. On March 20, 1853 he received the AASR (SJ) degrees, 4°–32° at Charleston, S. Car, from Albert G. Mackey, q.v., and received the 33° in New Orleans in 1857. The following year he was elected an active member, and sovereign grand commander (Jan. 3, 1859). In this position he did much for that rite. As one has said, "He found the Scottish Rite in a cabin and left it in a temple." He rewrote the AASR ritual, as well as many Masonic books, including Morals and Dogma. d. April 2, 1891, and is buried in the House of the Temple, Washington, D.C.

William J. Pike (1864–1923) U.S. Consul. b. March 24, 1864 in Scranton, Pa. He published and edited a weekly paper in Northern Pennsylvania until 1889, and then became a government clerk in Washington, D.C. Entered consular service in 1903, and became consul at Zittau, Germany; vice consul at Reichenberg, Bohemia; later consul at Reichenberg and Kehl; consul general at Coburg, Germany; and consul at St. Gall, Switzerland, and Strassburg, France. Received degrees in Lodge No. 338 of Pa. on Oct. 28, 1884, March 24, April 28, 1885. d. April 23, 1923.

Zebulon Pike (1779–1813) Discoveror of Pike's Peak in Colorado, and brigadier general in War of 1812. b. Jan. 5, 1779 in Lamberton, N.J. His father, of the same name, was a captain in the Revolutionary Army, and when the son was a child, the family moved to Bucks Co., Pa., and then later to Easton. Young Pike was appointed an ensign in his father's regiment in March, 1799. He was killed at the attack on York, Canada, April 27, 1813. The younger Pike is often referred to as a Freemason, and his membership is given in Lodge No. 3, Philadelphia. This, however, was undoubtedly his father of the same name (1751–1834) as he was initiated Feb. 19, 1782 (young Pike would have been three years old at the time). In 1791 a "Zebulon Pike" was a petitioner to the Grand Lodge of New Jersey for a warrant for a traveling lodge in the Army, but this too must have been the father, as young Pike was but 12 at this time. Later records of Lodge No. 3, Philadelphia list "Zebulon Pike" as "removed" from the lodge.

Marcele H. del Pilar (see under del Filar).

Joshua Pilcher (? –1843) Founder of the American Fur

Co. in 1820, together with two other Freemasons, Joseph Perkins and Moses B. Carson, qq.v. A Virginian, he was a relative of Thomas F. Riddick, q.v., the first grand master of the Grand Lodge of Missouri, with whom he was associated in business for some time. In the fur trade he secured a thorough knowledge of the geography and resources of the Northwest Territory. At the death of General William Clark in 1838, President Van Buren appointed him superintendent of Indian affairs in St. Louis and he filled this position until his death. He served as a second to Senator Thomas H. Benton, q.v., in his duel with Lucas. The pioneer St. Louis Lodge No. 111 became defunct following the War of 1812, and when its successor, Missouri Lodge No. 12, was formed under the Grand Lodge of Tennessee under date of Oct. 3, 1815, Pilcher was named charter master.

Brought up as an Indian boy, he was given the benefit of a good education, being sent 200 miles to school in Tenn.; later attended the Columbia (Tenn.) Academy, and graduated from the U. of Nashville. He returned to Miss. to become a farmer; married, and was the first Choctaw to depart from the practice of polygamy. He also did great service to his tribe by enforcing the treaty on sale of liquor, and, as a reward, was made a captain and elected a member of the national tribal council of the five civilized tribes. In 1828 he headed the delegation sent to Indian Territory (Okla.) in 1828 to select the lands for their future homes, and to make peace with the Osage. He later immigrated, and built a cabin on the Arkansas River. Charles Dickens met Pitchlyn on a steamboat on the Ohio River in 1842, and mentioned him in his American Notes as an Indian chief. Actually, Pitchlyn did not become a chief until 1860. Dickens described him as a handsome man with black hair, aquiline nose, broad cheekbones, sunburnt complexion, and eyes that were bright, keen, dark and piercing. He favored the Union cause in the Civil War, although three of his own children, and many of his people, joined the Confederate cause. After 1860 he spent most of his time in Washington, D.C., representing his tribe, and pressing claims for lands sold to the U.S. in 1830. In addition to the treaty of 1820, he signed the treaty of Dancing Rabbit (Miss.) in 1830, treaty of Washington (1855), and was principal chief of treaty of Washington in 1866. He was an able orator, a Christian, and a man of much wisdom and tact. His lodge and chapter are not known, but he was probably a member of both in Washington, D.C. as he was knighted in Washington Cornmandery No. 1, K.T., Washington, D.C., May 27, 1854. His name is mentioned in the bylaws of that commandery in 1857, 1859, 1869, and 1893. In 1854 he addressed the Grand Lodge of Georgia "giving good evidence that he felt and understood the true principles of the Order of Masonry; and also gave a very favorable account of the conditions of the Craft in his tribe, which he considered a convincing proof of their progress in civilization." He was also a Scottish Rite member, having received his 32° at the hands of Albert Pike, q.v., in the spring of 1860. A warm friendship developed between Pike and Pitchlyn and the bonds grew stronger after the Civil War. It was Pike's intention to elevate Chief Pitchlyn to the 33° as noted in a letter dated Dec. 7, 1865: "I hope you may remain in Washington until the 3rd Monday of Feb., when the Supreme Council meets there, and I shall propose you for election to the Honorary 33°." d. Jan. 17, 1881 and was buried in the Congressional Cemetery in Washington. The Masonic rites were conducted by his friend, Albert Pike.

Frederick W. Pitkin (1837–1886) Governor of Colorado, 1878–84. b. Aug. 31, 1837 in Manchester, Conn. Graduate of Wesleyan U. (Conn.), and Albany (N.Y.) law school. In 1860 he went west, practicing in Milwaukee, Wis. His health became impaired and he went to Europe, but returned in 1873 in what was thought to be a dying condition. He moved to Colo. and engaged in rough labor in the mines, regaining sufficient health to resume law practice. As governor, his prompt and fearless intervention in the riots of Leadville saved many lives and much destruction. Pitkin Co., Colo. is named in his honor. Affiliated with Independence Lodge No. 80, Milwaukee, Wis. on June 2, 1865 from Manchester, Conn. Excluded for NPD on Nov. 16, 1877 and suspended for same on Jan 2, 1878. Member of Wisconsin Chapter No. 7, aAm., Milwaukee and knighted in Wisconsin Cornmandery No. 1, K.T. on Nov. 25, 1865, being suspended from same on June 1, 1880. d. Dec. 18, 1886.

Key Pittman (1872–1940) U.S. Senator from Nevada, 1913–40. b. Sept. 19, 1872 in Vicksburg, Miss. Educated by private tutors, and S.W. Presbyterian U. of Tenn. Began law practice in Seattle, Wash. in 1892, and joined the movement to the Klondyke in 1897, where he worked as a common miner two years. Here he served as counsel for miners, attacking the corruption of government officials at Dawson, and went to Nome in 1899, where he became first district attorney and one of the leading counsels for miners in their fight against the conspiracy to rob them of their mines. In 1901 he moved to Tonopah, Nev. Elected to fill an unexpired term in U.S. senate in 1912, and served from 1913–41. He was president pro tern–pore of the senate in 73rd through 76th congresses. Member of Tonopah Lodge No. 28, Tonopah, Nev., receiving 32° at Reno on Sept. 11, 1903. d. Nov. 10, 1940.

William S. Pitts (1830–1918) Composer of The Little Brown Church in the Vale. b. Aug. 18, 1830 in Western New York. He was a music teacher, and later a country physician. The famous song was actually written before the church was built. Pitts visited Bradford, Iowa in 1857, when he was living in Wisconsin, and the site where the church is now located so impressed him that he imagined it to be the perfect setting for a church. Five years later Dr. Pitts moved to Fredericksburg, Iowa, about 20 miles from the church site, and at that time the building was under construction. He became the teacher of a small singing school at Bradford. The song was first sung in the church before it was finished. It was published by the H. M. Higgins Co. of Chicago, and became immensely popular. It was sung by the Fiske Jubilee Singers throughout the country, and before the royal courts of Europe. The building was dedicated, Dec. 29, 1864, a few months prior to the publication of the song—and appropriately had been painted brown. In later life Pitts moved to Clarion, Iowa, and then to Brooklyn, N.Y., where he died Sept. 25, 1918. He was buried in a spot he picked and named—Rose Hill cemetery in Fredericksburg, Iowa. Six Freemasons were his pallbearers. Among his other songs were The O/d Musician and His Harp; Allie Ray; Nellie Wildwood; Sabbath Bells, and Little Fred. He received his degrees in Bradford Lodge No. 129 at Nashua, (two miles southwest of the famous church) in Chickasaw Co., in the early 60's. He became first master of Mt. Horeb Lodge No. 333, Fredericksburg, Iowa, when constituted in 1874, and was made secretary soon after, holding the office as long as he lived there.

Pius VII (1742–1823) Pope from 1800–23. Anti-Mason. Real name was Luigi Barnaba Chiaramonti. b. in Cesena, Italy. He ratified the concordat with France in 1801, and in 1804, visited Paris and crowned Napoleon emperor. Gradually he split with Napoleon, losing several provinces to the French in 1808. He was held prisoner by Napoleon at Savona and Fountainebleau from 1809–14, and reentered Rome in 1814. He restored the Jesuit order in 1814, and Aug. 13, 1814, issued an edict forbidding the meetings of all secret societies (especially the Freemasons and Carbonari), under heavy corporal penalties, to which were to be added, according to the malignity of the cases, partial orentire confiscation of goods, or a pecuniary fine. The edict also renewed the Bull of Pope Clement XII, q.v., by which the punishment of death was incurred by those who obstinately persisted in attending Masonic meetings.

Pius IX (1792–1878) Pope from 1846–78, being the longest pontificate in history. Anti-Mason. Became archbishop of Spoleto in 1827, and on becoming pope, proclaimed political amnesty in 1846, to meet critical conditions in Papal States. After the insurrection of Rome in 1848, he was forced to flee to Gaeta, but was restored by the French in 1850. From then on he became an extreme reactionary. He proclaimed the dogma of the Immaculate Conception in 1854, and convened the Vatican Council in 1869, which promulgated the dogma of papal infallibility. He lost his temporal powers to Victor Emmanuel in 1870, and thus became the first “prisoner of the Vatican.” About 1870, certain irresponsible Masonic journalists reported that he was a Freemason. This must have been an attempt to discredit him with the Roman Catholics, for about this time his rule had become most obnoxious to Protestants in general, and Freemasons in particular. The story of his “Masonic – membership” is still going the rounds after 89 years, but has been thoroughly discredited by more enlightened research. Among the statements made—and still being printed—in the Masonic press are: that he was initiated in a Sicilian Lodge under the name of Giovinni Maria Mastai-Ferretti; that he was initiated into Los Hijos des Hiram Lodge (place not given) under the symbolic name of Savola; that he received the degrees while at Montevideo, Uruguay, in 1816; that he was initiated in Chile in 1823; that he affiliated with Lodge Eterna Catena of Palermo, Italy in 1839; that a document numbered 13715 issued by Orient of Nuremberg, Grand Lodge of Bavaria certifies he was a Mason; that he received the 18° AASR; that he visited lodges in Spain; that he visited lodges in Argentina; that his photograph was made in full Masonic regalia; that a Bro. J. B. Nones of St. John's Lodge No. 1, N.Y., when at Tripoli, sat with the "late Roman Pontiff," Pius IX in a Masonic lodge; that his signature is in the visitors book of the principal lodge in Florence, Italy; that Masonic charges were pressed against him in 1874; that he was tried in absentia by the Grand Orient of Palermo and "excommunicated"; that said expulsion order was signed by King Victor Emmanuel II, "grand master of Italy."

Louis Pizitz Merchant and philanthropist. b. April 3, 1868 in Poland. Came to the U.S. in 1892, and was naturalized in 1893. He rose from a house-to-house salesman at Swainsboro, Ga. in 1892, to chairman of the board of Louis Pizitz Dry Goods Co., Birmingham, Ala. in 1936. He is not only a Freemason, but an honorary knight commander of the Knights of Columbus, and recipient of the Knights of Columbus silver cup for services as city chairman in the K.C. drive in 1941. He is the founder, and past president, of the Young Men's Hebrew Association of Birmingham; founder and honorary life president of the Beth-El Hebrew Temple, Birmingham; founder of Ensley Negro Hospital, and fund chairman of the Tuskegee Institute (famous Negro college). He is a member of Birmingham Fraternal Lodge No. 384, Birmingham, Ala., being raised on April 26, 1920.

Frederick W. Plaisted (1865–1943) Governor of Maine, 1911–13. b. July 26, 1865 in Bangor, Maine. Educated in St. Johnsbury (Vt.) Academy. He was the owner and editor of The New Age at Augusta, Maine from 1889–1914. He served as sheriff of Kennebec Co., postmaster of Augusta from 1914–23.

Mason and 33° AASR (NJ), he was grand high priest of the Grand Chapter of Maine in 1901, and grand commander of the Grand Commandery, K.T. of Maine in 1902. d. March 4, 1943.

Edward S. Plank (1875–1926) Member of the Baseball Hall of Fame at Cooperstown, N.Y. b. Aug. 31, 1875 at Gettysburg, Pa. He was one of the greatest “lefties” of the game. He was elected to the Hall of Fame in 1946, 20 years after his death. He never pitched for a minor league, going from Gettysburg Coll. to the Philadelphia American League team, where he played from 1901–14, and then to the St. Louis American League. He was one of the few pitchers to win more than 300 games in big league ball. In eight of the 17 seasons, he won 20 or more games. He was raised in Good Samaritan Lodge No. 336, Gettysburg, Pa., on Nov. 13, 1913; exalted in Good Samaritan Chapter No. 266, R.A.M., Dec. 17, 1915, and knighted in Gettysburg Commandery No. 79, K.T., all of Gettysburg. He remained a member of these bodies until his death on Feb. 24, 1926.

George Plater (1736–1792) Sixth Governor of Maryland (1792), and – member of Continental Congress. b. in 1736 in St. Mary's Co., Md. Graduate of William and Mary Coll. in 1753, he studied law and made a reputation as a successful Maryland lawyer. He was a member of the Md. convention at Annapolis, May 8, 1776, that invited the royal governor, Robert Eden, to vacate. He was then appointed to the council of safety to prepare the state for the coming conflict. He was a member of the Continental Congress from 1778–81, and president of the Maryland convention that ratified the U.S. Constitution in 1788. He was a member of the old lodge at Leonardtown, Md., when it was chartered June 6, 1759, and its first junior warden. He later served several terms as master. d. Feb. 10, 1792.

Member of Holland Lodge No. 8, N.Y.C. in 1803. d. Sept. 12, 1807.

Alfred Pleasonton (1824–1897) Union Major General (brevet) in Civil War. b. June 7, 1824 in Washington, D.C. Graduate of U.S. Military Academy in 1844, served in Mexican War, and subsequently on frontier duty. He was acting adjutant general to General William S. Harney during the Sioux expedition, and his adjutant general in the Seminole campaign, and operations in Kansas, Oregon, and Washington Territory. Entered Civil War as a major of 2nd Cavalry, and at the end of the Virginia peninsular campaign, became brigadier general of volunteers. He fought at Boonesborough, Stone Mountain, Antietam, Fredericksburg, and Chancellorsville. He was breveted lieutenant colonel for action at Antietam, and major general of volunteers in June 1863. Was commander-in-chief of the cavalry in the Battle of Gettysburg. Transferred to Mo. in 1864, he drove the forces of General Sterling Price from the state. After retirement, he was U.S. collector of revenue, and later president of the Terre Haute and Cincinnati railroad. Member of Franklin Lodge No. 134, Philadelphia on Jan. 31, 1853. d. Feb. 17, 1897.

Ignaz Joseph Pleyel (1757–1831) Austrian composer, chiefly of instrumental works, who composed Pleyel's Hymn, widely used in Masonic ritualistic work. b. June 1, 1757, the 24th son of the village schoolmaster at Ruppersthal, Lower Austria. He studied under Haydn, q.v., for several years, and then went to Italy, where he developed a taste for Italian opera. In 1789 he became musical director of the cathedral at Strasburg. In 1791 he was conducting in London. The tune of the Masonic funeral hymn is taken from the slow movement of his fourth quartet, opus 7, and first appeared as a hymn tune in Arnold and Callcott's Psalms in 1791. Since that time the tune has appeared in all the major denominational hymnals, and usually is associated with John Cennick's Children of the Heavenly King. In 1795 Pleyel went to Paris where he published music, and, in 1807, established a piano factory which still bears his name. As far as known, he was not a Freemason. d. Nov. 14, 1831.

Member of Algabil Lodge No. 544, St. Louis, 32° AASR and member of Moolah Shrine Temple, St. Louis. Member of the grand council, Order of DeMolay, and member of Legion of Honor of same.

Robert Plot (1651–1696) A learned man and non-Mason, from whose writings we learn much of early 17th century Freemasonry in England. He was a professor of chemistry at Oxford, and later keeper of the Ashmolean Museum, to which position Elias Ash-mole, q.v., appointed him. His Natural History of Staffordshire, has a passage or two in it ridiculing Freemasonry. He gave much important information on the customs, organization, and ritual of the craft at that time and without his diatribe on the subject, we would know very little of Freemasonry at that early period.

Charles S. Plumb (1860–1939) University professor and author. b. April 21, 1860 in Westfield, Mass. Graduate of Mass. Agricultural Coll. He was an instructor in agriculture at the State Agricultural Experiment Station of N.Y., professor of agriculture at U. of Tennessee, and at Purdue U. George Poindexter (1779–1853) U.S. Senator, Congressman, and Governor of Mississippi. b. in Louisa Co., Va. Orphaned in early life, he became a lawyer at Milton, Va., and, in 1802, moved to Mississippi Territory where he attained note as a lawyer and politician. Was attorney general of the territory in 1803, and, in this capacity, conducted the prosecution of Aaron Burr. He killed Abijah Hunt, a merchant, in a duel, following a political argument. He was a member of the territorial legislature in 1805, and in 1807 elected to U.S. congress, serving until 1813. In congress he won a reputation as an orator. In 1813 he was appointed U.S. judge for Mississippi, over much protest. Was with Jackson at the Battle of New Orleans, and his enemies accused him of gross cowardice in later years. In spite of this, he was elected governor of Mississippi, 1819–21. He was appointed senator in 1830 to fill an unexpired term and served until 1835. He moved to Louisville, Ky. in 1835, but soon returned to his law practice in Miss. Received degrees in Dillon Lodge No. 16, Dillon, Mont., Sept. 23, 1915, March 3, 1916 and March 11, 1917. 32° AASR and Shriner. d. Dec. 3, 1951.

Joel R. Poinsett (1779–1851) U.S. Secretary of War, and Minister to Mexico. Our traditional Christmas flower, the Poinsettia, is named in his honor. b. March 2, 1779 in Charleston, S. Car. His wealthy parents gave him an excellent education in private schools in the U.S., and, in medicine, at Edinburgh U., Scotland. He traveled widely in Europe and the Czar of Russia offered him a commission in the Russian Army. President Madison sent him to South America to inquire into the conditions and the prospects of their success in the struggle with Spain for independence. While in Chile the Spanish captured several American vessels, and Poinsett put himself at the head of a force given him by the Chilean government and retook the ships. Back in South Carolina, he served in the state legislature and was elected to U.S. congress in 1821–25. Here he advocated the cause of the South American republics and that of Greek independence. In 1822 he was sent on a special mission to Mexico during the reign of Iturbide, q.v. He returned to Mexico as U.S. Minister under President Adams in 1825, and served until 1829. During this time he negotiated a treaty of commerce. The Catholic church complained that he was interfering, but he justified his course in a pamphlet after his return. At the request of the Freemasons of Mexico, he sent for charters for five of their lodges, which subsequently established the Grand Lodge of Mexico. They were granted by the Grand Lodge of New York. He also introduced Royal Arch Masonry to Mexico. At his installation as deputy general grand high priest of the General Grand Chapter, Royal Arch Masons, April 3, 1830, he defended his actions in helping the Mexican brethren saying: “I have been most unjustly accused of extending our order and our principles into a neighboring country, with a view of converting them into an engine of political influence. In the presence of this respectable assembly of my brethren, and on the symbols of our order, which are spread around me, and the sacred book which is open before me, I solemnly aver, that this accusation is false and unfounded—and that if Masonry has anywhere been converted to any other than the pure and philanthropic purposes for which it was instituted, I have in no way contributed to such a perversion of its principles. And with the same solemnity I here declare, that if such evil councils were to prevail in this country, and Masonry be perverted to political use, which God forbid, I would sever the ties, dear as they are to me, which now unite me to my brothers.” He is recorded as being a past master of both Recovery Lodge No. 31, Greenville, S. Car., and of Solomons Lodge No. 1, Charleston, S. Car. In 1821 he was elected deputy grand master of the Grand Lodge of South Carolina. He was unable to serve as grand master due to his appointment as Secretary of War (1837–41) under Van Buren. In 1821 he was elected grand high priest of the Grand Chapter of South Carolina, holding office until 1341. He was elected deputy general grand high priest in 1829, 1832, and 1835. Upon the revival of Greenville Lodge No. 5, Greenville, S. Car. in 1849, he became its master despite his age. On his return from Mexico, he brought back a beautiful flowering shrub which had struck his fancy, developed, and improved it on his S. Car. plantation. He unwittingly immortalized his name in the plant world. Previously it had been called “painted leaf” and “Mexican fire plant.” Now, it is officially Poinsettia pulcherrima. d. Dec. 12, 1851.

Countess of Polignac French Countess, who was an early member of French Adoptive Freemasonry, a female organization which received quasi-Masonic recognition from the Grand Orient of France. Other famous names, who were her contemporaries in this organization, were the Duchess of Chartres; Duchess of Bourbon; Princess Lambelle, Countess of Choiseul-Gouffier and Marchioness of Contebonne, qq.v.

Daniel A. Poling President of World Christian Endeavor Union; Editor of Christian Herald and Christian Endeavor World; lecturer, and author. b. Nov. 30, 1884 in Portland, Oreg. Graduate of Dallas (Oreg.) Coll. in 1904, and 1906, and many honorary doctorates. Was Prohibition candidate for governor of Ohio in 1912. Pastor of Marble Collegiate-Dutch Reformed Church, N.Y.C., 1922-30; Baptist Temple, Philadelphia, 1936-48. President of Greater N.Y. Federation of Churches, 1926-27, and of General Synod Reformed Church in America, 1929-30. A director of the J. C. Penney Foundation, the Presbyterian Ministers Life Insurance Fund, and trustee of Bucknell U. He is a major in the chaplain officer's reserve, U.S. Army. Since 1948 he has been chaplain of the Chapel of Four Chaplains, an inter-faith shrine, Philadelphia, which is a memorial to the four young clergymen of three faiths who gave up their lives in the sinking of the U.S.S. Dorchester in WWII. Dr. Poling's son, the Rev. Clark V. Poling, was one of those four heroic chaplains. He has flown nearly two million miles on religious missions, and in WWII visited every major theater, and was on every active front. When he joined the Lodge of the United Services No. 1118, N.Y.C. Dr. Poling said: "I arrived at the decision that Masonry is a vital and dynamic force in America, and in the world, for everything high and worthy to which my life has been long committed. And there is something more. Masonry occupies, in my opinion, a unique position of opportunity and obligation in the human order today. Particularly in our great American cities. Masonry, casting aside bigotry and intolerance, is the powerful friend of all the American freedoms. As I had not known and could not know until I became a Mason, but as I long sensed, this brotherhood is freedom's friend. Reaching my conclusions, I could not escape the conviction that I owed something here; that, if I would be accepted, then surely I belonged! That my little weight should be, must be, committed to the unrelenting struggle of Freemasons against every form of man's enslavement, against every foe, however insidious, both within and without, every foe of our American freedom. Now I know that Masonry points the feet of men and directs their wills toward those highest objectives of moral, social, political—aye, and spiritual—achievement; those objectives that at last beyond time and space, center in the ultimate glory and wonder of man's immortal soul." Dr. Poling is a member of Crescent Shrine Temple, Trenton, N.J. and past imperial chaplain of the Shrine. Received 33° AASR (NJ) in 1959.

James K. Polk (1795–1849) Eleventh President of the United States, 1845–49; Governor of Tennessee, 1839–41. b. Nov. 2, 1795 in Mecklenburg Co., N. Car. In 1806 his family moved to N. Car., where his father became a large landowner, farmer, and surveyor. Young Polk often accompanied his father on surveying expeditions, and worked on the farm. Graduated from U. of North Carolina in 1818. In 1819 he entered the law office of Felix Grundy, q.v., and attracted the attention of Andrew Jackson, q.v. An orator of note, he was named "Napoleon of the Stump." Served two years in the state legislature. Was U.S. congressman from 1825–39, withdrawing to become a candidate for governor. He was speaker of the house from 1835–39. His term as president saw Texas admitted to the Union; the War with Mexico; threatened war with England over the Oregon question; creation of the territorial governments of Oregon, New Mexico, and California, and the troubles of the rising question of slavery. On June 5, 1820, he petitioned, was elected, and initiated in Columbia Lodge No. 31, Columbia, Tenn. Was passed Aug. 7, and raised Sept. 4, 1820. He was elected junior deacon in Oct., 1820 junior warden, Dec. 3, 1821, and was active until his public duties called him to other fields. He received the Mark Master degree in Cumberland Chapter No. 1, R.A.M. of Nashville, Jan. 17, 1821, and at a stated meeting on the same date, his petition for Past, Most Excellent, and Royal Arch degrees was read and ordered to lie over for one month. At the next stated meeting on Feb. 1, he was permitted to withdraw his petition, obviously for the purpose of placing it with LaFayette Chapter No. 4, which had just been chartered in his home town of Columbia. He received these degrees, April 5, 22, and 24, 1825 in LaFayette Chapter, and was recorded as captain of the host, pro-tern, on Sept. 8, 1825. On June 24, 1840 (St. John's Day) he attended the Masonic procession to the Methodist church at Nashville, Tenn. with Cumberland Lodge 18, and Hiram Lodge 7. On May 1, 1847 he attended the Masonic cornerstone laying of the Smithsonian Institution, together with Vice President George M. Dallas, q.v. In his diary of this day, Polk wrote, "About 12 o'clock a large procession, consisting of the military, Masons, the order of Odd Fellows, and citizens appeared at my door. . . . Delegations of the Masonic Lodges of Pennsylvania and Maryland were present, as also a large number of the Masonic Fraternity, and the Odd Fellows of the District of Columbia." On July 5, 1847 he was in Portsmouth, N.H. where his reception included a Masonic procession under the direction of the grand master. He died June 15, 1849. His remains were removed from their temporary resting place in the Nashville cemetery, May 22, 1850, and reinterred on the capitol grounds with Masonic ceremonies. When the General Grand Chapter, R.A.M. of the U.S. met in Nashville, Term. in 1874, his widow invited the members to her home for a reception.

William Polk (1758–1834) Colonel in the American Revolution. b. July 9, 1758 in Mecklenburg Co., N. Car. He attended Queen's College at Charlotte, N. Car. until the beginning of the Revolution, and in April, 1775, was appointed a lieutenant in the 3rd S. Car. regiment. He made several expeditions, and captured the noted Tory, Thomas Fletcher, on one of them. He joined Washington as a major with the 9th N. Car. regiment in 1776, and was in the battles of Brandywine and Germantown. On the staff of General Caswell, he was present at the Battle of Camden; promoted to lieutenant colonel of the 4th S. Car. Cavalry, he was attached to the command of General Sumter and saw much active service, notably at the Battle of Eutaw Springs, remaining on duty in that section until the end of the war. He was twice wounded. He was appointed brigadier general in the regular army, in 1812, by President Madison, but declined the commission. In 1824 he was one of the three commissioners of N. Car. appointed to receive Lafayette. In 1783 he was appointed surveyor general by the legislature, took up residence at French Lick Fort (now Nashville, Tenn.), and remained there until 1786. From 1811–19 he was director, and, later president, of the State Bank of N. Car. but resigned to devote more time to his 100,000 acres of land in Tenn. When president of the bank, he made Jacob Johnson, the father of Andrew Johnson, q.v., its first porter; to Samuel Polk, father of James K. Polk, he gave the agency for renting and selling portions of his land; to Andrew Jackson he furnished the necessary information from his surveys to enable him to secure valuable lands in Tenn. Thus three presidents were indebted to his efforts. A member of Hiram Lodge No. 40, Raleigh, he was grand master of the Grand Lodge of North Carolina from 1799–1801. d. at Raleigh, Jan. 4, 1834.

Arthur G. Pollard (1843–1930) General Grand High Priest, General Grand Chapter, Royal Arch Masons, 1903–06. b. Jan. 5, 1843 in Plaistow, N.H. In 1861 he entered the employ of A. G. William J. Pollard (1860–1913) Lawyer, and St. Louis Police Judge who originated the “Pollard Plan” for reforming drunkards. b. May 1, 1860 in Kingston, Mo. He was judge of the 2nd district police court of St. Louis from 1903. His “pledge plan” consisted of releasing accused drunkards on their signing of a total abstinence pledge for one year. It has been widely copied in the U.S. and abroad. It was enacted into the statutes of Great Britain by Parliament. He visited Great Britain in 1906, where he addressed meetings and explained the “Pollard Plan.” The state of Vermont, and Victoria, Australia adopted the plan. President Taft appointed him to represent the U.S. at the International Congress on Alcoholism at London in 1909, and again at The Hague, in 1911. At the latter conference, 550 delegates and members signed a declaration praising Great Britain, Vermont and Victoria for recognizing and adopting the plan. Mason. Member of Itaska Lodge No. 420, St. Louis, receiving degrees Jan. 4, 6, 20, 1890. d. Dec. 12, 1913.

In speaking of Freemasonry in 1901 he said: "Freemasonry is the most remarkable, and altogether unique, institution on earth. Will you tell me of any other that girdles the world with its fellowship and gathers all races and most ancient religions, as well as our own, into its brotherhood? Will you tell me of any other that is as old or older; more brilliant in its history; more honored in its constituency; more picturesque in its traditions? Today it lies in the hand of the modern man, largely an unused tool, capable of great achievements for God, for country, for mankind, but doing very little. For one, I believe that circumstances may easily arise, when the highest and most sacred of all freedoms being threatened in this land, Freemasonry may be its most powerful defender, uniting all minds and commanding our best citizenship. d. 1908.

Rodman M. Price (1816–1894) U.S. Congressman to 32nd Congress (1851–53) and Governor of New Jersey from 1854–57. b. May 5, 1816 in Newton, N.J., he attended Princeton and studied law. Was appointed purser in the Navy in 1850, serving for tenyears. He was in the Mexican War as an officer on the frigates Fulton and Missouri, and the sloop Cyane. He was the first American to exercise judicial functions in Calif., and was a delegate to the first constitutional convention of that state. He then returned to N.J. He is known as the father of the public school system of that state; and he established a ferry from Weehawken to N.Y. In 1861 he was a delegate to a peace conference in Washington, D.C., which tried to prevent the impending war. He was probably made a Mason in Calif., for in Dec., 1853, we find him affiliating with Union Lodge No. 11, Orange, N.J. d. June 7, 1894.

Stephen Price American theatrical manager. Member of Holland Lodge No. 8, N.Y.C.

Sterling Price (1809–1867) Brigadier General of Mexican War; Confederate Major General; Governor of Missouri; U.S. Congressman. b. Sept. 11, 1809 in Prince Edward Co., Va. Moved to Charitan Co., Mo. in 1831, and was speaker of the lower house in 1840–44. Served as U.S. congressman, 1845–46, resigning in the latter year to raise the 2nd Missouri cavalry for the Mexican War. As its colonel, he joined Col. Doniphan under General Kearney, and marched from Ft. Leavenworth to Santa Fe. Made brigadier general on July 20, 1847, he moved to Chihuahua, where he was military governor. Defeated the Mexicans at Santa Cruz de Rosales in 1848. He was governor of Missouri from 1853–57, and state bank commissioner from 1857–61. As a major general of the state guard, he was joined by Generals McCulloch and Pearce to defeat General Lyon at Wilson's Creek in Southwest Mo., but fell back before General Fremont. He was driven from Springfield, Mo. toward Ft. Smith, Ark. by General Curtis, and was defeated at Pea Ridge, March 7, 1862. After participating in the engagements around Corinth and Tupelo, Miss., he was assigned to the Army of the West, and then to the district of Tenn. Assigned to command the district of Arkansas, he was driven from Little Rock by General Steele, but later forced Steele to retreat. He made a raid into Mo. in Sept., 1864, and after many engagements, reached the Mo. River. After the surrender he went to Mexico, but returned to Mo. in 1866. He was a member of Warren Lodge No. 74 of Keytesville, Mo., and is recorded as being a visitor to the Grand Lodge of District Columbia in 1846. d. Sept. 29, 1867.

Thomas M. Price Engineer and Vice President of Kaiser Frazer Corp., Kaiser Engineers, Henry J. Kaiser Co.; Vice President and Director of Kaiser Co., Inc., Permanente Cement Co. and Henry J. Kaiser Contractors. b. Jan. 14, 1891 in Madison, N. Car. Graduate of U. of North Carolina in 1912 and 1915. Price was in charge of construction of Panama Canal, 3rd locks, Pacific side; Hoover, Grand Coulee and Bonneville dams. Mason, 32° AASR and Shriner.

Samuel Prichard An Englishman who published an expose of Freemasonry. Little is known of him except for this work, which was entitled, Masonry Dissected (with various subtitles). It contained a great deal of fact, but was mingled with an equal amount of falsehood. It passed through some 40 editions in 100 years, and was printed in many languages. Published at London in 1730, it was the first of such exposes, on which subsequent ones were founded. The same year, another volume was published entitled, Defence of Masonry, which was in answer to the former. It has been credited to Dr. Anderson, q.v., but subsequent research has discovered its author to be Bro. Martin Clare. The Abbe Larudan (French) issued a publication entitled Freemasons Crushed, in which he manufactured a wild tale about the death of Prichard. In short, he said Prichard was carried by force—at night—into the Grand Lodge at London, put to death, his body burned to ashes, and all the lodges in the world informed of the execution. Copies of the early editions are very rare; of some there are none. Only three copies of the first edition exist, so far as known, and only four or five of the second edition. The only thing known about his membership is given on the title page of his work, in which he describes himself as a “late member of a constituted lodge.” This is undoubtedly true.

Vernon E. Prichard (1892–1949) Major General, U.S. Army. b. Jan. 25, 1892 in Smithland, Iowa. Graduate of U.S. Military Academy in 1915, advancing through grades to major general (temp.) in 1942. Member of Vesper Lodge No. 223, Onawa, Iowa; 32° AASR (SJ) in T. S. Parvin Consistory (La.) on Sept. 1, 1915. d. July 10, 1949.

Served pastorates in Mo., Ill., Texas, and La. until 1944. Was president of Hannibal LaGrange Coll. from 1944–50. From 1951–52 he was pastor in Auckland, New Zealand, and in 1953 founded and was president of the Honolulu Christian Coll., Honolulu, Hawaii. Raised in Charleston Lodge No. 35 in 1915; 32° AASR (NJ), 1920 in East St. Louis, Ill. Exalted in Marion (Ill.) Chapter No. 100 in 1924. Member of Ainad Shrine Temple, East St. Louis, Ill. since 1920.

John Prince (1751–1836) Clergyman and inventor. b. July 11, 1751 in Boston, Mass. He was apprenticed to a tinsmith, but prepared himself for college, and graduated from Harvard in 1776. He then studied theology, and from 1779–1836 was pastor of the First Unitarian Church in Salem, Mass. He was a friend of Count Rumford, and joined him in perfecting many inventions. He constructed and improved an air-pump which gave him a wide reputation. Member of Massachusetts Lodge of Boston, Jan. 11, 1779. d. June 7, 1836.

L. Bradford Prince (1840–1922) Governor of New Mexico, 1889–93; Chief Justice, Supreme Court of New Mexico, 1879–82. b. in Flushing, N.Y. Graduate of Columbia U. in 1866. In New York he was a member of the state assembly from 1871–75; chairman of judiciary committee, having charge of impeachment of judges, in 1872; father of constitutional amendments of 1874; a member of senate, 1876–77. In 1878 he declined the governorship of Idaho. In N. Mex., in 1911, he was chairman of the first state constitutional convention. A prominent Protestant Episcopal layman, he was the originator of the American Church Building Fund, in 1880. An amateur archaeologist, he had one of the largest collections of American stone idols in existence. Raised Nov. 8, 1865 in Cornucopia Lodge No. 563, Flushing, N.Y. Was district deputy grand master of the Grand Lodge of New York from 1868–77 and grand representative from 1889–93. Master of his lodge in 1868 and 1870. d. Dec. 7, 1922.

Thomas Proctor (1739–1806) Colonel in American Revolution. b. in Ireland, he emigrated to Philadelphia with his father; was a carpenter by trade. Was commissioned a captain by the committee of safety, Oct. 27, 1775, to raise a company of artillery, and the following year his command was raised to a battalion, and he was made a major. In 1777 he was made a colonel, and ordered to raise an entire regiment of artillery. He fought at Brandywine; had part of his command captured at Bound Brook. He was appointed colonel in the Continental Army in 1779, and marched to Wyoming, N.Y. He was at the Battle of Newtown and made a foray against Bergens Neck that netted only a few head of livestock as “prisoners.” Andre satirized him in the poem “Cow Chase”.

. . Sons of distant Delaware, And Still remoter Hannon, And Major Lee with horses rare, and Proctor with his cannon.” At the Battle of Trenton on Christmas night, 1776, he captured an entire British band (musical). He resigned from the army in 1781, after an argument with the president of Pa. In later years he became a brigadier general of Pa. troops and a major general of the Philadelphia militia. He applied to the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania for a warrant to hold a lodge in the 1st regiment of artillery. It was granted, and on May 18, 1779 he became the first master of Lodge No. 19, A.Y.M. (now Montgomery Lodge No. 19). He had previously been a member of Lodge No. 2, Philadelphia. In 1783–84 he sat as senior grand warden, and as such, assisted in the institution of Alexandria Lodge in Virginia. He was grand marshal from 1796 until his death ten years later. In Dec. 1799 he was master of ceremonies at the Philadelphia ceremony commemorating Washington's death. He was buried with military and Masonic honors. d. March 16, 1806.

Winston L. Prouty U.S. Congressman from Vermont to 83rd through 85th Congresses. b. Sept. 1, 1906 in Newport, Vt. He is a partner in Prouty & Miller Lumber Co. and a director of the National Bank of Newport. Member of Memphremagog Lodge No. 65, Newport.

Henry Louis Frederick, Prince of Prussia (see under Frederick).

Arthur Pryor (1870–1942) Band leader and composer. b. Sept. 22, 1870 in St. Joseph, Mo. He studied music under his father, who was also a band leader. He became widely known as a trombone soloist, and joined Sousa's, q.v., Band at the Chicago World's Fair in 1893. He made three world tours with Sousa, as premier trombone soloist, and also assistant conductor. He gave the first concert with his own band in N.Y.C. in 1903. He composed band music, as well as three light operas—Uncle Tom's Cabin; Jingaboo; and On the Eve of Her Wedding Night. Mason, 33° AASR, and Shriner. d. June 18, 1942.

Count Casimir Pulaski (1748–1779) Polish soldier who rendered valuable aid—and his life—to the cause of the American colonies. b. March 4, 1748 in Dodolia. He became involved in the Polish rebellion in 1768, and was elected commander-in-chief of the Polish forces. This eventually led to the intervention of Prussia and Austria, and ultimately to the partition of Poland in 1773. Pulaski's estates were confiscated, and he escaped to Turkey, and later to France, where in 1775, he met Benjamin Franklin and became interested in the American struggle for independence. He came to America in March, 1777 with a recommendation from Franklin, and was immediately attached to the staff of Washington. He fought at Brandywine, was commissioned brigadier general, and placed in charge of the cavalry. He took part in the Battle of Germantown, and fought at Haddonfield, N.J. under Wayne. He organized a corps of lancers in which even deserters and prisoners of war might enlist, and it became famous as "Pulaski's Legion." He foiled a British attack on Charleston, and while investing Savannah, was wounded in the thigh and taken aboard the U.S. brig Wasp, where he died. He was buried at sea, but a ceremony took place afterward in Charleston. A monument donated by the citizens of Savannah was erected to his memory, the corner stone being laid by Lafayette on his visit to the U.S. in 1924. The monument was not completed until 1855. There is no proof of Pulaski's Masonic membership. All references to it stem from after 1824, when the corner stone of the monument was laid with Masonic ceremonies, and Richard T. Turner, high priest of Georgia Chapter at Savannah, reported to his chapter that they had laid the corner stone of the monument to "Brother Count Pulaski." Other sources say he was affiliated with the Army Lodge in the Maryland Line. Casimir Pulaski Lodge No. 1167, meeting in Logan Square Masonic Temple, Chicago, is named in his honor, and a brochure issued by them, states in part, "Casimir Pulaski was raised to the sublime degree of Master Mason in Gould Lodge of Georgia on June 19, 1779 . . . was buried with Masonic honors." d. Oct. 11, 1779.

He began as a reporter on the Kansas City Star in 1910. He was subsequently editor of the Atchison (Kan.) Champion; Franklin (Ind.) Star; and Lebanon (Ind.) Reporter. He is president of the Central Newspapers, Inc., Lebanon Newspapers, Inc., Vincennes Newspapers, Inc., Radio Station WAOV, Indianapolis Broadcasting Co. (Station WIRE), Star Publishing Co., Muncie Newspapers, Inc. (all of Indiana); and the Phoenix Newspapers, Inc. (Ariz). Received degrees in 1916 in Franklin Lodge No. 107, Franklin, Ind., affiliating with Boone Lodge No. 9, Lebanon, Ind., in 1924.

John Pulling, Jr. A boyhood friend of Paul Revere, q.v., and vestryman of the Old North Church of Boston. Some authors credit Pulling with hanging the lantern in the church steeple on the night of April 18, 1775, which started Revere on his ride. Others say it was Robert Newman, q.v., the sexton. Pulling was made a Mason in Philanthropic Lodge of Marblehead, Mass., but in 1761 affiliated with Revere's lodge, St. Andrew of Boston. Died in poverty.

George M. Pullman (1831–1897) Inventor and founder of the Pullman Palace Car Co. b. March 3, 1831 in Chautauqua

Co., N.Y. When 17 he joined an elder brother in the cabinet making business in Albion, N.Y. In' 1859 he moved to Chicago, and there built entire blocks of brick and stone buildings. In 1858 his attention was first directed to the discomfort of long distance railway traveling, and the following year, he remodeled two old day coaches of the Chicago and Alton into sleeping cars. In 1863 he built the prototype of the present Pullman car, at the cost of $18,000. It was named the Pioneer. The Pullman Palace Car Co. was organized in 1867. He also devised dining cars in 1868; chair cars in 1875; and vestibule cars in 1887. In 1880 he founded the industrial town of Pullman, near Chicago, where he built the company's shops. Member of Renovation Lodge No. 97, Albion, N.Y. d. Oct. 19, 1897.

Clare Purcell Methodist Bishop, 1938–56. b. Nov. 17, 1884 in Columbia, Ala. Graduate of Birmingham–Southern Coll., 1916, and Vanderbilt U., 1910. He served as pastor in the following Alabama cities: Wedowee, Madison, Owenton, Sylacauga, Hartselle, Talladaga, Tuscaloosa, and Jasper (1906–38). He served as chaplain with the 131st Inf. in the AEF in WWI. Presently president of Carraway Methodist Hospital, Birmingham, Ala. Received degrees in Talladega Lodge No. 261, Talledega, Ala. in 1916 and life member since 1948; Life member of Talledega Chapter No. 23, R.A.M. Member of Talladega Commandery No. 17, K.T and Alcazar Shrine Temple, Montgomery, Ala.

William E. Purcell (1856–1928) U.S. Senator from North Dakota, 1907–11. b. Aug. 3, 1856 in Flemington, N.J. Admitted to the bar in 1880, and practiced in Flemington until he moved to Wahpeton, Dakota Territory, in 1881, where he continued law practice. Was appointed U.S. attorney for the territory in 1888, and served one year, having been elected a member of the constitutional convention to divide property and indebtedness between North and South Dakota. At one time was a member of Wahpeton Lodge No. 15, Wahpeton, N. Dak. d. Nov. 23, 1928.

Henry Purkitt (?–1846) One of the participants in the Boston Tea Party, Dec. 16, 1773, and a colonel of the American Revolution. Was a member of St. Andrew's Lodge, Boston. Received the Mark degree Jan. 31, 1798 and the Royal Arch degree Feb. 28, 1798, both in St. Andrews Chapter, Boston. He was made a Knight Templar in Boston Commandery, March 8, 1806, and an honorary member, Feb. 26, 1807. He was captain general in 1808–09; generalissimo, 1809–11, and treasurer, 1821–23. He was master of his lodge in 1804–06. d. March, 1846.

Aleksander S. Pushkin (1799–1837) Russian poet. b. in Moscow. His Ode to Liberty, written in 1820 caused his exile to South Russia, but he continued to hold a government office. He was finally dismissed from public service because of his liberal views. In 1825 he was reinstated in good graces to write the life of Peter the Great, q.v. Among his works are: The Captive of the Caucasus; Boris Goditnov; Ode to Napoleon; Gypsies; The Queen of Spades; and The Captain's Daughter. Telepneff in his Russian Freemasonry. During the Reign of Alexander I credits Pushkin as being a Freemason. Was killed in a duel in 1837.

Enoch Putnam Officer of American Revolution. He was a member of St. Andrews Lodge, Boston, as early as Feb. 13, 1777. He was treasurer of United States Lodge, Danvers, Mass. in 1776, and master of same between 1779 and 1782.

Israel Putnam (1718–1790) Major General, Continental Army, Revolutionary War. b. Jan. 7, 1718 in Salem, Mass. He was one of the four original major generals of the Continentals, and the only one to serve the entire length of the war. He was the most colorful character of the Revolution, and his exploits were legendary—his single handed encounter with a wolf—he ran the gantlet successfully through a double rank of Mohawk Indians—he put out the fire at the Fort Edward powder house—he was spared at the last minute from being burned at the stake—he sat out a powder keg duel until his opponent squirmed and ran away—he immobilized the French vessels on the St. Lawrence by driving wedges in their rudders—he fought the Spaniards in Cuba—he fought the wars against Pontiac—he explored bounty lands in the wilderness, and at the start of the Revolution he was to be found at Bunker Hill in his shirt sleeves. When Boston was under blockade from the sea he drove in a flock of sheep to feed the citizens, staying overnight with Grand Master Joseph Warren of Mass. No general was more popular among the soldiers. His speech and dress were both unusual. He was chief commander at New York just before Washington's arrival and during the defeat in the Battle of Long Island. He commanded at Philadelphia in 1776, and in the highlands of the Hudson in 1777. In 1779 he was partially incapacitated by a paralytic stroke, but continued in the service, walking with a limp and talking with a lisp. He was poetically memorialized as “Putnam, scored with ancient scars, The living record of his country’s wars.” He is credited with being a member of a British military lodge meeting at Crown Point, N.Y., and was made a Mason there on June 7, 1758. However no source can be located for this fact and date. He is also credited with being a member of Hiram Lodge No. 1 at New Haven, Conn., but the history of that lodge does not list him. He did, however, visit Hiram lodge on many occasions, journeying about 40 miles to attend. He was also a frequent visitor to the lodge at Hartford, Conn. While in camp at Redding, Conn. in 1778–79, he was the guest of honor on those occasions when American Union Lodge had special events planned. Many lodges throughout the U.S. have been named in his honor. d. May 19, 1790.

Israel Putnam, Jr. Son of Israel, q.v., the Major General of the Revolution, and his aide during the war. Member of Moriah Lodge No. 15, Canterbury, Conn.

James C. Putnam (1868–1956) A founder and first national commander of the Veterans of Foreign Wars. He participated in three Indian wars; the Spanish–American War; served under General Pershing, q.v., in the Fifth Cavalry (1890–91); worked on the Panama Canal; and served six years in the Missouri legislature as a representative from Howell Co. He was first national commander of the V.F.W., following its organization at Columbus, Ohio in 1899. A Mason, he was known as an excellent ritualist, and spent much time in the York Rite bodies. He was for many years prelate of Baldwin Commandery No. 4, Fayetteville, Ark. d. Oct., 1956.

Rufus Putnam (1738–1824) Brigadier General, American Revolution, and “Father of Ohio.” b. April 9, 1738 in Sutton, Mass., a cousin of Israel Putnam, q.v., the Revolutionary major general. Orphaned at an early age, he was almost self educated. Served an apprenticeship as a millwright. After service in the Indian Wars of 1757–60, he settled down to farming in New Braintree, Mass. In 1773, with his cousin Israel he explored and surveyed the Yazoo bounty lands on the Miss. During the Revolution he proved to be a resourceful engineer, constructing the siege works at Boston, Newport, New York City, and rebuilding the defenses at West Point. After the war he organized the Ohio Company of Associates, leading them into the Northwest Territory in 1788, and founded the city of Marietta, the first permanent city of the territory. He was appointed judge of the territory in 1790, and was general of militia. He was named surveyor general of the United States in 1796, holding that position until 1803. In 1793 he negotiated a peace treaty with the Indians, where others had failed. In 1802 he presided at the Ohio constitutional convention. He received his degrees in American Union Lodge at West Point, N.Y., July 26, Aug. 26, and Sept. 6, 1879. When this famous traveling military lodge brought its altar to rest at Marietta, Ohio in 1790, and reorganized, he was junior warden, and later served as master seven different terms. During a visit to Philadelphia in 1792, he was made a Royal Arch Mason, and from 1797–99 was high priest of American Union Chapter. In 1808 he was unanimously elected as the first grand master of the Grand Lodge of Ohio, but declined the honor due to his advanced age. d. May 1, 1824.

U.S., 1909–16. He was president of the Philippine senate in 1916–35 and a leading figure in the movement which led to the gradual independence of the islands. Upon the Japanese invasion, he escaped by U.S. submarine to the U.S. on Feb. 20, 1942; he died in Saranac Lake, N.Y., August 1, 1944. Quezon was a Freemason most of his adult life, being grand master of the Grand Lodge of the Philippines, 1918–19. Due to the influence of his wife he resigned from Freemasonry, Sept. 17, 1930. After his death, the Catholic church claimed he had renounced Freemasonry. Seven years after he left Masonry, he made this statement: "I didn't actually resign from the Masonic order until several months later, and I never denounced Masonry. There is a formal form which those returning to the church from the Masonic lodge are supposed to sign. but I refused to sign it. Instead, I wrote the Archbishop a personal note saying that I understood that I could not be readmitted to the Catholic Church so long as I remained a Mason, and for that reason I was resigning from Masonry." During his entire term as president, he fought for the separation of church and state.

Aristide Ambroise Quillet (1880–1955) French publicist and editor. Was orphaned at an early age and had to educate himself. At the age of 18 he opened the publishing house which still bears his name. A short time before WWI, he founded l'Editorial Labor in Spain. It still exists. He was co-director of the Dernieres Nouvelles de Strasbourg, a daily newspaper printed in two languages. In 1938 he founded the Editorial Argentina Aristide Quillet in Buenos Aires. In WWII he took an active part in the French resistance movement and in 1949 was promoted to grand commander of the Legion of Honor. He was initiated in 1903 in the lodge, Temple de l'Honneur et l'Union of the Grand Orient of France. In 1936 he founded a new lodge, La Marseillaise, and was its master for many years. He was an honorary member of Goethe Lodge No. 379. Shortly before his death the Grand Lodge of France presented him with the 50-year service medal. d. 1955.

Henry B. Quinby (1846–1924) Governor of New Hampshire, 1909–11. b. June 10, 1846 in Biddleford, Maine. Graduate of Bowdoin Coll. in 1869 and 1872; M.D. from Nat. Med. Coll. (Washington) in 1870. Graduate of Harvard in 1790; began law practice in Boston in 1793. Served in both branches of the state legislature, and was mayor of Boston, 1823–29, during which time the erection of the Bunker Hill monument was begun. Raised in St. John's Lodge of Boston, March 28, 1795. d. July 1, 1864.

Edgar Quinet (1803–1875) French writer and politician. Studied philosophy in Germany and made French translations of Herder's books. Traveled widely in Europe and wrote of his observations. Author of two epic poems, Napoleon (1836) and Promethee (1838). Involved in revolutionary activities in 1848 and banished from France. After his return in 1870 was elected to the national convention. A Freemason, but his lodge is not known.

James H. Quinn First man to raise the American flag on the pueblo at Taos, New Mexico in 1847. He was a nephew of Stephen A. Douglas, q.v. Member of Montezuma Lodge No. 109 (now No. 1 of Santa Fe) in 1853.

Vidkun Quisling (1887–1945) Norwegian Anti-Mason whose name has become a synonym for traitor. During WWI he was in the diplomatic and intelligence service, mainly in Russia. From 1931–32 he was the Norwegian minister of defense, resigning to found his own political party, the National Union, with a platform calling for the suppression of Communism and the freeing of Norwegian labor from unionism. He was chief collaborator in the German conquest of Norway in 1940. The Nazis proclaimed him sole political head of Norway as head of the state council of 13 Nazi-dominated commissioners. In this capacity he took over the beautiful Masonic Temple in Oslo and converted it into an officers quarters, ruining it for Masonic use. He ordered all the library and belongings shipped to Germany (but thanks to Norwegian patriots, they failed to arrive). He was tried by the Norwegian courts following the war. Ironically, the trial was held in a former Masonic lodge room, in order to seat more spectators. He was convicted and shot in 1945.

John A. Quitman (1799–1858) Governor of Mississippi, 1835–36 and 1850–51; Major General, U.S.A. in Mexican War, 1846–48; U.S. Congressman from Mississippi, 1855–58, and “Father of Mississippi Masonry.” b. Sept. 1, 1799 in Rhinebeck, N.Y. He was early in-dined towards the ministry, but taught school and studied law in Philadelphia, then moved to Ohio, where he was admitted to the bar in 1821. In 1882 he went to Memphis, Tenn., and later to Natchez, Miss. He served as president of the state senate. In 1836 he raised a body of men to aid the Texans against the incursions of Santa Anna, q.v.; returning home to Natchez, he became a major general of the state militia. In Federal service in the Mexican War, he distinguished himself at Monterrey, Fort Tenerice, Vera Cruz, Pueblo and Chapultepec. He was appointed governor of the City of Mexico. In 1848 and again in 1856 he was suggested as Democratic nominee for vice president, but was not nominated. He was an avowed advocate of states rights, and as leader of the extreme Southern party, supported the right of secession for states. He was raised in Hiram Lodge No. 18, Delaware, Ohio, in 1820, and affiliated with Harmony Lodge No. 1, Natchez, Miss. in 1822, serving as master two years later. He was grand master of the Grand Lodge of Mississippi from 1826–37 and 1845–46, declining further terms. He was a 32° AASR (SJ) and intimate friend of Albert Pike, who conducted a lodge of sorrow in his memory in 1860. He was also an honorary member of the grand lodges of South Carolina and New York. d. July 17, 1858 at his Natchez home “Monmouth,” which is now famous as one of the outstanding anti-bellum homes of Natchez. It is thought he died of poisoning at a banquet in Washington, D.C., during the inauguration of Buchanan.

R

Fritz Rackhorst (1870–1930) German physician and Masonic editor. He practiced medicine in Lennep, Germany from 1896, but his heart was more often in Masonry. He served as master of the lodge Theodor zum Belgischen Loewen at Duesseldorf for almost 20 years. At the same time he was editor of the Masonic magazine The Light, which at that time was the only independent Masonic publication. After WWI he attempted to cement ties between former enemies, but ran into much resistance among his own brethren. He resigned from his mother lodge and affiliated with the Lodge Plato at Wiesbaden, and finally with the Lodge Labor at Vienna. His opinion was that Masonry was a world brotherhood. His beliefs earned him many enemies among his brethren.

Milton R. Rackmil President of Decca Records, Inc., N.Y.C. since 1949, and President and Director of Universal Pictures Co., Inc. since 1952. b. Feb. 12, 1903 in N.Y.C. Graduate of New York U. in 1924. Was with Brunswick Radio Corp. from 1929 as comptroller; secretary of Brunswick Records, 1932–34. Treasurer of Decca Records, 1934–37; vice president 1937–46, and executive vice president, 1946–49. Director of Decca since 1946. Member of Civic Lodge No. 853, N.Y.C., receiving degrees on Oct. 27, Nov. 24, 1936 and Jan. 12, 1937.

George L. Radcliffe U.S. Senator from Maryland, 1935–47. b. Aug. 22, 1877 in Lloyds, Md. Received A.B. and Ph.D. from Johns Hopkins, and honorary degrees from several universities. Practiced law from 1903. President of American Bonding Co., 1914–30, and now first vice president and director of Fidelity & Deposit Co., and director of Fidelity–Baltimore National Bank and Trust Co. Was secretary of state of Maryland, 1919–20. Member of Oriental Lodge No. 158, Baltimore, and 32° AASR (SJ) in Chesapeake Consistory.

John Rae (1813–1893) Scottish Arctic explorer. b. Sept. 30, 1813 in the Orkney Islands. Received medical degree from U. of Edinburgh and was a doctor with Hudson's Bay Co. He joined the expedition of Sir John Richardson in search of Sir John Franklin, q.v., in 1847, and was on several exploring expeditions between 1846–64. He proved King William's Land to be an island, and on an expedition in 1853–54, learned the fate of Franklin from natives on the West coast of Boothia. He was known for his amazing endurance and vigor, traveling 23,000 miles on snowshoes and dragging a loaded sled. He received the Royal Geographical Society's "Founders Medal" and also the "Arctic Medal." He once covered 100 miles a day on snowshoes. He lived like the Eskimos, in contrast to other English "gentlemen" who needed great amounts of supplies and natives to carry them. His exploration method is known as the “Rae Method.” d. July 22, 1893, and although his lodge membership is not known, Kilwinning Masonic Lodge attended the funeral. Buried in St. Magnus Cathedral in the Orkneys.

Sir Thomas Stamford Raffles (1781–1826) English administrator; founder of the city of Singapore and of the London zoo. He joined the East India Co. as a clerk, at the age of 13 and became a brilliant administrator, scholar, traveler, and naturalist. In 1805 he was sent to Penang as assistant secretary to the first governor. He persuaded Lord Minto of the necessity of taking Java from the French, and accompanied the expedition. He was lieutenant governor of Java from 1811–1816, and introduced a new system of land tenure, removing fetters imposed on trade. He was appalled at the selfish and cruel trade monopolies, forced labor, slavery, piracy, and general lawlessness, and hoped to end this by spreading British protection over the area. Cheated of his ambitions for the whole Eastern Archipelago, he did, however, obtain the pirate island of Singapore from the rulers of Johore. He justly referred to “my city of Singapore,” saying “I have declared that the port of Singapore is a free port and the trade thereof open to ships and vessels of every nation.” He was initiated in Lodge Vertutis et Ards Aminci, established on the Pondo–Gedeh coffee estate near Buitenzorg, Java, only two months after his conquest of the Dutch. The master was a former governor of Java, and a second candidate was a member of the Dutch council. Both of these brethren were markedly hostile to the British in public life, but such was the character of Raffles that he was welcomed into their midst. He was passed in this lodge, but raised on July 5, 1813 in the Lodge of Friendship at Surabaja, Java, and subsequently made past master by his Dutch brethren. He received the 18th degree in the Rose Croix chapter, La Vertueuse in Batavia. On his re-turn to England, he founded the London zoo. d. 1826.

Idris Ragheb (?–1923) Egyptian Boy of a noble and wealthy family. He was grand master of the Egyptian Grand Lodge for 32 years, 1891–1923, and grand commander of the Supreme Council, AASR of Egypt, for nearly 20 years. He devoted his life to the study of languages, sciences, and the invention of a machine which writes Arabic characters. His public spiritedness and philanthropy found expression in the founding of the Assistance Publique, of which he was several times elected president, the Oeuvre d’Instruction Laique et Gratuite, and the Societe d’Alitnentation.

John Rolls (1807–1882) Colonel in Mexican War, during which time he was grand master of the Grand Lodge of Missouri and thus became the father of Freemasonry in New Mexico. b. Nov. 18, 1807 in Sharpsburg, Ky. His father was a prominent resident of St. Louis, and it was his vote in the legislature that sent Thomas H. Benton, q.v., to the U.S. Senate. The family moved to Rails Co. (named for his father) and John was orphaned at an early age. He returned to Ky., where he was an apprentice in a court of record. Returning to Mo., he was a clerk in the state house of representatives, and in 1850 was admitted to the bar. He served in the state militia in the Black Hawk War in 1832, and was a lieutenant colonel in 1837. In 1847 he was named colonel of the 3rd regiment of Mo. volunteers, which assembled at Independence, Mo. and marched over the Santa Fe Trail to Santa Fe, where they were assigned to the forces of Gen. Sterling Price, q.v. Having been elected grand master of the Grand Lodge of Missouri in 1846, he issued a dispensation to Missouri Military Lodge No. 86, on June 12, 1847. It accompanied his regiment on its expedition, and while in the Territory of New Mexico, Ralls assumed Masonic jurisdiction of that territory for the Grand Lodge of Missouri, a charge maintained until the organization of the Grand Lodge of New Mexico in 1877. He also issued a charter to Multnomah Lodge No. 84, Oregon City, Oregon Territory. Ralls also issued another charter to some Illinois Masons for a lodge to be known as Hardin Lodge No. 87, but the formation of this lodge was never reported to the grand lodge. It was Ralls who had the honor of receiving the sabers of the captured Mexican officers at the fall of Santa Cruz. The last recorded minutes of Military Lodge No. 86 were dated July 5, 1848 in Santa Cruz. The regiment marched back to Mo. and was mustered out on Oct. 25, 1848. Ralls probably received his degrees in Palmyra Lodge No. 18, Palmyra, Mo. and was later a charter member of New London Lodge No. 21, New London, Mo. In 1853 he dimitted to become charter member of Ralls Lodge No. 33, serving as master in 1859. He was a trustee of the Masonic College in 1842, and curator of same in 1845. He was exalted in Palmyra Chapter No. 2, R.A.M., Palmyra, Mo., May 6, 1842; became a charter member of Hannibal Chapter No. 7, Hannibal, Mo.; and later a charter member of Ralls Chapter No. 55, now located at Center, Mo. Andrew Michael Ramsay (1668–1743) Better known as the Chevalier Ramsay. b. at Ayr, Scotland, the son of a baker, he was given a liberal education and attended the U. of Edinburgh. In 1709 he became tutor for the two sons of the Earl of Weymss. He left Britain and fought in the army of the Duke of Marlborough. In 1710 he visited Fenelon,

Archbishop of Cambrai, who converted him to Catholicism and secured him the preceptorship of the Duc de Chateau-Thierry and the Prince de Turenne. He was made a knight of the Order of Saint Lazarus, thus receiving the title Chevalier. He next tutored the two sons of the Pretender, James, III. It is thought he became a Freemason on a visit to England between 1728–30. In 1737 as chancellor, or orator of the Paris Grand Lodge, he delivered his celebrated oration in which he attributed the origin of Freemasonry to the crusaders rather than to operative Masons. He addressed it to the Pope and the King—the Pope, incidentally, ordered it burned. He is sometimes credited with the development of several Masonic degrees and rites. d. May 6, 1743.

Red Jacket (1751–1830) Seneca Indian Chief. A contemporary of Joseph Brant, q.v., and after Brant’s death, the most important chief of the Six Nations. Before his elevation to chieftainship of the Wolf clan his name was Otetiani, meaning “prepared.” On his advancement he was named Sagoyewatha, or “he who keeps them awake.” He was famed as an orator and was champion of the Indian tribal customs, language, dress, and religion. He was particularly antagonistic to missionaries and the Christian religion. Chief Brant had only contempt for Red Jacket, and named him “cow killer.” Chief Corn-planter called him a coward. In the Revolutionary War, he sided with the British who gave him a red coat, from which was derived his English name. In the War of 1812 he sided with the United States. Washington presented him with a medal. His Masonic membership has never been established, but it is thought he was an Entered Apprentice, being initiated in an army lodge—possibly British. This is the opinion held by the late Dr. Arthur C. Parker, q.v., whose grandfather, Nicholson H. Parker was a grandnephew of Red Jacket. Red Jacket owned a silver Masonic medal which passed down through his family. General Ely S. Parker, q.v., grandnephew of Red Jacket, who inherited his tribal honors as chief, also believed that his illustrious ancestor was a Freemason. d. Jan. 30, 1830 at Seneca Village, N.Y.

James Frazier Reed (1800–1874) Organizer of the ill-fated Reed–Donner Party. b. Nov. 14, 1800 in Armagh, Ireland. Brought to America as a small boy, living first in Va., and in 1831 moving to Illinois. First settled at Galena but later moved to Springfield, where he became a leading citizen, merchant, furniture manufacturer and farmer. He became interested in Fremont's exploration of Calif. and joined with his neighbors, George and Jacob Donner, to form a party to migrate to Calif. They left Springfield April 15, 1846 and joined a larger party at Independence, Mo., leaving there on May 11. His party, with others, attempted a short cut across the salt desert, but lost a full month and nearly died of thirst. Here Reed killed a desert-maddened teamster, John Snyder, in self defense. For this he was banished from the party without weapons and with very little food. His stepdaughter, Virginia, slipped out of camp at night and took his rifle to him, or otherwise he would have perished. He forged on with a Walter Herron, whom he picked up from one of the wagons which had gone ahead, and made his way through the Sierra Nevada mountains to Sutter's Fort to obtain relief for the rest of the party. By the time the Donner Party reached the mountains, the last semblance of organization was gone. They were trapped at 6,000 feet with deep snow, and half of their 80 members were dead of cold and starvation. A relief party broke through to them, and another party, headed by Reed, arrived a few days later. The Reed family first lived in Napa, but when they recovered from their ordeal, moved to San Jose in 1848, where he became an influential citizen. Reed was a member of Springfield Lodge No. 4 and Springfield Chapter No. 4, R.A.M., of Illinois. On July 11, 1850 he was one of 15 Masons of San Jose to petition the Grand Lodge of Calif. for dispensation to open a lodge in that city. However, when San Jose Lodge, U.D., received its charter four months later, he was not listed as a charter member, though a page was set aside for his name in the dues book. He did, however, become first treasurer of Howard Chapter No. 14, R.A.M. when it was organized in 1856. He remained a member of the lodge and chapter at Springfield until his death. d. July 24, 1874.

Joseph Reed (1741–1785) Revolutionary War patriot; Governor of Pennsylvania. b. Aug. 27, 1741 in Trenton, N.J.

On the readmission of Miss. to representation, he was elected to the U.S. Senate. Was secretary of state ad interim of Miss. in 1873. A Prince Hall Freemason, he served as grand chaplain of the Prince Hall Grand Lodge of Ohio. d. Jan. 16, 1901.

Joseph Warren Revere (1812–1880) Brigadier General, and grandson of Paul Revere, q.v., and Joseph Warren, q.v. b. May 17, 1812 in Boston. He was made a midshipman in the U.S. Navy in April, 1828, and a lieutenant in 1841. He took part in the Mexican War, and in 1850 resigned from the service and entered the Mexican army. For saving the lives of several Spaniards, he was knighted by Queen Isabella of Spain. He served in the conquest of Calif., 1846–48, and was given the honor raising the American flag at Sonoma; remained in command of the army in the Northern district of Calif. for several months. He was sent to Fort Sutter to repel the invasion of Walla Walla Chief Yellow Serpent and succeeded in settling with the chief personally, thus preventing the invasion. He was made colonel of the 7th regiment, N.J. volunteers, in 1861, and promoted to brigadier general, U.S. volunteers, in Oct., 1862. He led a brigade at Fredericksburg and was then transferred to the command of the Excelsior brigade of the 2nd Division. 1863 he was tried by courtmartial after the engagement, fell under the censure of his superior officer for a withdrawal without orders. In May, 1863 he was tried by courtmartial and dismissed from the service. He defended his conduct with great earnestness, and Lincoln revoked the order, accepting his resignation from the service. Member of St. John's Lodge, Boston. d. April 20, 1880.

Paul Revere (1735–1818) Metal-smith and Revolutionary patriot. b. Jan. 1, 1735 in Boston, the son of a French Huguenot refugee and silversmith. His father died when Paul was 19, but he had already learned the trade as an apprentice and continued his father's business. Served in French and Indian Wars as a lieutenant of artillery. In 1776 when the British evacuated Boston, he joined a regiment of artillery raised to protect that city. He took part in the famous Boston Tea Party of 1773, which seemed to have been promulgated by his own lodge, St. Andrews of Boston. He was appointed official courier for the Mass. Provincial Assembly in 1774, and on April 18, 1775 made his famous ride from Boston to Lexington, to warn the countryside that the British were on the march. His ride was immortalized by Longfellow in his poem, The Midnight Ride of Paul Revere. As a cartoonist and pamphleteer, his series of political cartoons, printed from plates etched on copper, did much to hasten the final break with England. In 1778 he was in command of the forts in Boston harbor as a lieutenant colonel of artillery, when, ill-advisedly, he accepted a command and a responsible place in the disastrous expedition to the Penobscot. This defeat deprived him of any glory as a military leader, but as a cannon founder and powder manufacturer he continued to perform invaluable service to the colonies. He was the first to roll sheet copper in America, and he contracted for and furnished the bolts, spikes, pumps, sheathing, and anchors for U.S.S. Constitution. and other vessels. At times he did fine sliver work and engraving, among other things, making seals and jewels for several Masonic lodges. He designed and printed the first Continental bills; designed and engraved the first official seal for the colonies, and the state seal for Mass.

He made a denture for his friend, Joseph Warren, q.v., grand master of Mass., who was killed at Bunker Hill, and this very metal work was the key to positive identification of the body when it was recovered a year later and reburied. Revere was raised in St. Andrews Lodge, Boston, Sept. 24, 1760, becoming secretary of the lodge in 1769, and master in 1770, succeeding Joseph Warren in that office. He served as master again from 1777–79, and from 1780–82. This lodge met at the “Green Dragon Tavern” and plans for the famous tea party were undoubtedly made in this lodge. In 1783 he was a founding member of Rising States Lodge, and was its first master. He was grand master of the Grand Lodge of Massachusetts from 1794–97. A Royal Arch Mason, he received the degrees, Dec. 11, 1769, in St. Andrews Royal Arch Chapter. In 1795, as grand master, he laid the cornerstone of the State House in Boston. Many lodges have charters or certificates signed by Revere while he was grand master. The Grand Lodge of Massachusetts has an urn designed by him, in which is a lock of Washington’s hair, secured by Revere for this purpose from Mrs. Washington. d. May 10, 1818 at Boston.

Thomas Reynolds (1796–1844) Governor of Missouri, 1840–44. b. March 12, 1796 in Bracken Co., Ky. He was admitted to the Kentucky bar; about 1818 moved to Illinois, where he took an active part in politics. He became clerk of the Illinois house of representatives, speaker of the same, attorney general, and finally justice of the supreme court. In 1826 he moved to Mo., locating at Fayette. He represented Howard Co. in the state legislature, and became speaker of the house. He was then appointed circuit judge, and was elected governor in 1840. He was initiated Nov. 7, 1818 in the historic Western Star Lodge No. 107 of Kaskaskia, Ill., at that time the westernmost lodge in the U.S. He was passed, Dec. 5, 1818, at which meeting Shadrach Bond, q.v. (later to be governor of Ill.), was elected master. Reynolds was raised Dec. 23, and four days later elected secretary. Both Reynolds and Bond from Western Star were present at the convention held Dec. 9, 1822 to organize the Grand Lodge of Illinois. Reynolds was named to formulate a constitution at that time. On Dec. 6–9, 1824 he was again at grand lodge and was named to examine the books of the grand secretary. He was also acting grand senior deacon and was elected grand sword bearer at this communication. He was also present at grand lodge, Dec. 3, 1826, Dec. 20, 1826, and Jan. 1, 1827. At the latter meeting it appears that he was installed as deputy grand master of the grand lodge. In June, 1828, as deputy grand master, he constituted Western Star Lodge as a subordinate lodge of the Grand Lodge of Illinois, it having given up its Pa. charter. At this same time he installed Shadrach Bond as master, and Reynolds was elected secretary. Shortly thereafter he moved to Mo., where on May 2, 1833 he was a petitioner for a lodge at Fayette. The loss of early records makes it impossible to find if he was a member at the time of his death. He shot himself, Feb. 9, 1844, while still governor.

He moved to the Orange Free State on the discovery of diamonds there, and worked a prosperous claim with his brother. He acquired a fortune in the Kimberley diamond fields. He entered the Cape House of Assembly in 1881; was energetic in establishing cordial relations between the British and the Dutch and in bringing about the annexation of Bechuanaland in 1884. The territory north of Bechuanaland, obtained by Rhodes from the Matabele tribe, was named Rhodesia in his honor, and he was made sole manager of the company incorporated with the rights of sovereignty over it. He amalgamated the diamond mines about Kimberley under the name of the De Beers Consolidated Mines, in 1888. Was prime minister of Cape Colony, 1890–96, and advanced the project for a Cape-to-Cairo R.R. He aimed for the establishment of a federal South African dominion under the British flag. He ran into trouble when he plotted the overthrow of the South African Republic by encouraging the Uitlanders in Transvaal to armed insurrection, and was forced to resign the premiership in 1896. He then devoted himself to the development of Rhodesia, established permanent peace with the Matabeles, and reentered Parliament in 1898. During the Boer War he was besieged at Kimberley. In his will, he left ≈Å6,000,– 000 to public service, and endowed 170 Oxford scholarships for the education of youths from Great Britain, the United States, and Germany. He was raised in Apollo University Lodge No. 357 at Oxford, England, April 17, 1877, and was a member of Prince Rose Croix No. 30, AASR at Oxford. Bates, and also General William Clark, q.v., appointed him justice of the peace. In 1817 he became one of the first directors of the Territorial Bank of Missouri, and president of same in 1820. At the first session of the territorial legislature in 1812 he was elected clerk pro tem, and in 1818 he represented St. Louis in the fourth and last territorial legislature. He served in the Black Hawk War under Colonel Alexander McNair, q.v. He was the prime mover in the establishment of the first Episcopal church of St. Louis—Christ Church—in 1819. He was also an auctioneer. When congress passed an act in 1812 confirming land titles in the Missouri Territory, it became apparent that much land would not be claimed, because of errors, fraud, etc. Riddick rode on horseback to Washington, D.C., at his own expense, for the express purpose of ensuring that Representative Hempstead would insert a section into this law, giving these lands to the public schools. Riddick was originally a member of Solomon Lodge No. 30, Suffolk, Va. He twice visited Western Star Lodge No. 107, Kaskaskia, Ill.

in 1806 (March 24, Dec. 27). It was 60 miles from St. Louis and the only lodge in the area. He registered as a visitor from Solomon Lodge. On Dec. 27, 1806 he signed a petition for a new lodge at Ste. Genevieve, Mo., to be known as Louisiana Lodge No. 109 (first Mo. lodge); but when it was constituted, he was not a member, so must have signed only to assist his Ste. Genevieve brethren. He signed an application for a dispensation for St. Louis Lodge No. 111, his name being second and directly following that of Meriwether Lewis, governor of the territory. Sidney Rigdon (1793–1876) Mormon leader. b. Feb. 19, 1793 in Allegheny Co., Pa. Worked on farm until 1817 and after some experience as a printer, studied for the ministry and licensed to preach by the Baptist church in 1819. In Jan., 1822 he became pastor of the first church in Pittsburgh, Pa. Following the example of Alexander Campbell and Walter Scott, he withdrew from the church and assisted in establishing the Disciples or Campbell denomination (now Disciples of Christ). Began preaching at Bainbridge, Ohio in 1828 and the following year at Mentor. Here the Mormon and gentile versions differ. Detractors of Mormonism state that he came into possession of a manuscript written by Solomon Spauling, former Presbyterian minister which gave a romantic and fanciful account on the nations inhabiting Canaan. This, they claim, he gave to Joseph Smith, who copied it, with alterations, into the Book of Mormon. The other version is that the Mormon elders Pratt, Peterson, Cowdery and Whitmer stopped in Mentor on their way to Missouri and Pratt, a former Baptist preacher obtained permission to speak in Rigdon's church. He then joined them. In a short time Rigdon, Frederick G. Williams and Smith were elected presidents of the church and styled "the first presidency." Smith and Rigdon fled to Missouri in 1838 to avoid arrest. In Far West, Mo. both were found guilty of "treason, murder and felony," allowed to escape and join the others at Nauvoo. When Joseph and Hyrum Smith were murdered at Carthage, Ill. in 1844, Rigdon aspired to the church leadership, but Brigham Young and the 12 apostles declared him "cutt off from the communion of the faithful, and delivered to the devil, to be buffeted in the flesh for a thousand years." He went to Pittsburgh, Pa. and thence to Friendship, N.Y. where he died July 14, 1876, still declaring firm belief in the truthfulness of the Book of Mormon. Both Rigdon and Smith were made Masons "at sight" by the grand master of Illinois in Smith's office at Nauvoo on March 15, 1842. This was one of the acts that precipitated closing of all Mormon lodges.

Samuel Ringgold (1770–1829) U.S. Congressman to 12th–13th and 15th–16th Congresses, 1810–15 and 1817–21, from Maryland; Brigadier General of Maryland militia in War of 1812. b. Jan. 15, 1770 in Chestertown, Md. He received a limited education. Settled at Fountain Rock, near Hagerstown, Md., where he engaged in farming and became a large land-owner. He was a member of the state house of delegates in 1794–95, and of the state senate in 1801–06. He was the father of Samuel Ringgold, Jr., q.v., the artillerist. The senior Ringgold was a member and past master of Mt. Moriah Lodge No. 33, Hagerstown. In 1811 he served as junior grand warden of the Grand Lodge of Maryland. d. Oct. 18, 1829.

Samuel Ringgold, Jr. (1800–1846) American artillerist. b. in Washington Co., Md. in 1800, the son of Samuel Ringgold, q.v., U.S. congressman from Md. and brigadier general of the War of 1812. Graduate of the U.S. Military Academy in 1818, he served for several years as aide-de-camp to General Winfield Scott. Was brevetted captain in 1836, and later major. He participated in the Florida War. In the Mexican War he organized a corps of “flying artillery” and was mortally wounded at Palo Alto, the first battle of that war. In addition to his introduction of “flying artillery,” he invented a saddle-tree, which was subsequently known as the McClelland saddle; also originated a rebounding hammer of brass for ex-ploding primers of field pieces, that prevented the blowing away of the hammer. He was a member of Comfort Lodge No. 143, Old Point Comfort, Fort Monroe, Va. in 1826. The lodge is now defunct. d. May 11, 1846 at Point Isabel, Texas.

The Ringling Brothers Kings of the Circus. Alfred T. (1861–1919); John Nicholas (?–1936); Albert Charles (1852–1916); Charles Edward (1866–1926); William Henry Otto (1858–1911); August George (1854–1907); and Henry William George (1868–1918). In the middle 1800's an Alsatian named Juliar had three daughters whose descendants were to make circus history. One married August Ringling, father of the Ringling Brothers; one married Gottlieb G. Gollmar, father of the Gollmar Brothers; and the third married Henry Moeller, father of the Moeller Brothers. The Ringlings and, in a more modest degree, the Gollmars were to acquire fame as circus owners and operators. The Moellers likewise became famous as manufacturers of circus wagons and materials. All of the branches of this family had early and strong connections with Masonry. This is most remarkable in view of the fact that these people were German in ancestry, members of a Lutheran Church in a synod in bitter opposition to Masonry. Membership in the fraternity terminated these church ties. Of the seven Ring-ling brothers, five were with the circus originally: Otto, Albert C., Alfred T., Charles E., and John. August G. was associated with them, but never a member of the firm. Upon the death of Otto in 1911, Henry, the youngest brother, became a member of the firm. Albert was the showman and the brother who sparked and encouraged the enterprise; later, John, who outlived the others, became the best known of the brothers. The circus had its first showing in Baraboo, Wis., the family home, on May 19, 1884, and then embarked as a "wagon show." In 1890, it became a "railroad show" and went on to become the "Greatest Show on Earth." After 1918 the circus no longer wintered in Baraboo, although descendants of the family are still there. Prior to the opening in 1884, Albert realized that their name might not be sufficient to "sell" the circus. He had met an old showman, "Yankee" Robinson, who was in his sixties, ill and feeble, but at one time the owner of his own circus of considerable size. Al brought him into the group, and the first circus was called "Yankee Robinson and Ringling Brothers Great Double Shows, Circus and Caravan." "Yankee" died that August in Jefferson, Iowa, a stranger and without friends. He wore a Masonic pin, and the brethren of Jefferson gave him a Masonic burial at lodge expense. When Al came back to check on his friend, he found him dead and buried. The Ringling Brothers then provided a monument. Previous to the organization of the circus, the brothers had operated the "Classic Concert Co.," in which each took a part, and later the "Ringling Bros. Comedy Concert Co." They played in small town halls. John, who survived the rest, became head of Ringling Bros., Barnum & Bailey Circus; was subsequently head of the American Circus Corp., which included Sells-Floto Circus, Hagenbach Animal Show (his second wife was Emily Haag Buck), and the John Robinson, Sparks, and Al G. Barnes shows. He financially aided Tex Rickard in building Madison Square Garden in N.Y.C., engaged in oil production in Oklahoma, and was noted for his philanthropies. August Ringling, the father of the seven brothers, was raised in Baraboo Lodge No. 34, Baraboo, Wis., on August 19, 1891, and held membership until his death in 1898. The seven brothers were all members of the same bodies: Baraboo Lodge No. 34, Baraboo Valley Chapter No. 49, R.A.M., St. John Commandery No. 21, K.T., all of Baraboo, Wis., and 32° AASR at Milwaukee. The brothers actually preceded their father into Masonry. First to petition was Alfred T., known as Alf T., who was raised Jan. 22, 1890, and died Oct. 21, 1919; John was raised March 1, 1890 and died Dec. 1, 1936; Albert C., known as Al, was raised March 29, 1890 and died Jan. 1, 1916; Charles E. was raised April 9, 1890 and died Dec. 3, 1926; Otto was raised April 9, 1890 and died March 31, 1911; August G. was raised Feb. 4, 1891 and died Dec. 18, 1907. Henry was raised March 18, 1891 and died Oct. 9, 1918. A picture of the Scottish Rite class of Nov. 17–20, 1891, in the Valley of Milwaukee, shows Alfred T., Charles E., Albert C., and William H. O. as members of the class. The minutes of the meeting of Baraboo Lodge on April 8, 1891 are of interest. This was a special meeting called to hear a report of a committee relative to the purchase of a lot where the temple now stands. The meeting was opened by the regular officers, after which the following assumed the chairs; W.M., Alf T. Ringling; S.W., August Ringling; J.W., Al Ringling; S.D., Charles Ringling; J.D., Otto Ringling; and S.S., Henry Ringling.

Duke of Rio Branco Brazilian statesman. b. in 1845. He formerly was Chancellor Jose Maria da Silva Parnahos. Was at one time president of the council of ministers of Brazil, and grand commander of the Scottish Rite in Brazil. In 1873 the Bishop of Pernambuco, Brazil, sought to enforce in his diocese the pontifical bull of excommunication against Freemasons issued by Pope Pius, q.v. A number of bishops joined a concentrated movement to have Masonic lodges banned, although the government had announced the right of Freemasonry to exist. The subject was debated before the senate of Brazil. Rio Branco, answering the attacks, gave a splendid explanation of Freemasonry which ended with the following plea: "God preserve us, indeed, from a principle of faith which denies to us the right to appreciate the character and tendencies of a Brazilian civil association upon the grounds that the spiritual power has declared it anti-religious. If today the principle is admitted in relation to Masonry, tomorrow the same power will say that another civil institution comes within its anathemas, will proscribe its members, leaving to them no other recourse than to be silent, obey and suffer."

Ezra Ripley (1751–1841) Clergyman. b. May 1, 1751 in Woodstock, Conn. Graduate of Harvard in 1776, taught, and subsequently studied theology; in 1778 was ordained to the ministry in Concord, Mass., where he continued for 63 years, preaching his last sermon the day after his 90th birthday. He was a leader in the temperance cause. His step-son was Ralph Waldo Emerson, the poet, who wrote of him, "In him perished more personal and local anecdote of Concord and its vicinity than is possessed by any survivor, and in his constitutional leaning to their religion he was one of the rear-guard of the great camp and army of the Puritans." In 1836 he gave the land upon which is built the monument that commemorates the Battle of Concord. Member of Corinthian Lodge, Concord, Mass. d. Sept. 21, 1841.

Jose Rizal (1861–1896) National hero of the Philippines. b. June 19, 1861 in Calamba, Laguna. Was educated in the U. of Madrid, Spain. A teacher and writer, he preached unity among the Filipinos. He was willing to live under the Spanish flag, but advocated reforms that gave the natives greater participation in the management of their internal affairs. He was exiled by the Spanish government for his political tale, Noli me Tangere (Touch Me Not), written in 1886. While in exile, he published a second political novel, El Filibusterismo (1891). On his return from exile he was arrested, and was shot on the field of Bagumbayam on Dec. 30, 1896. He was made a Mason in Acacia Lodge No. 9, Spain, in 1884, and the following year joined a French lodge in Paris. He is credited with the establishment of the lodge Filipino, in the Philippines, and was venerable master of Lakandola Lodge of Perfection, Scottish Rite. On Dec. 12, 1912 the remains of Rizal were removed from the home of his sfater to Solomon's Temple in Tondo. The lodges under the Gran Logia Regional de Filipinas, with Sinukuan Lodge No. 305 (now 16) in charge, participated in the Masonic services over the remains. On the next morning, again with Sinukuan Lodge in charge, the Masons marched in procession with full Masonic regalia to the sister's home, where the remains were turned over to the government's representatives. The remains were then taken to the legislative building where the government also held funeral services. A request that the remains be taken to the Roman Catholic cathedral for religious services was turned down. The Catholic Church claimed that Rizal had renounced Freemasonry on the eve of his execution and had reembraced the church. Every evidence refutes the reported "conversion," which was not claimed until many years after the execution, and after Rizal became the "George Washington of the Philippines."

and 1766–76. He was closely associated with Franklin and Alexander Hamilton. Was an early member of the “associators,” fitted out two ships as privateers, and was chosen a member of the council of safety. Elected brigadier general of the Pa. troops on July 4, 1776, he was called to the aid of Washington in New Jersey in 1777. Was active in supporting the Articles of Confederation, and affixed his name to that document on the part of Pa. He was three times elected to congress, and served until 1779. In 1778, there being a scarcity of lead for the army, he opened a lead mine in Bedford Co., where he was obliged to erect a stockade for protection from the Indians. Most of the expense of this operation was paid from his own pocket. After the war he moved to Alexandria, Va., where he often entertained General Washington. He was a member of the “first” lodge in Philadelphia; is recorded at one time as a visitor to Lodge No. 3 of that city, and was a contributor to the Masonic Hall erected there. d. Jan. 5, 1795.

William G. Roberds Judge, Supreme Court of Mississippi, 1941–50; now justice. b. March 8, 1884 in Prairie, Miss. Graduate of Miss. Robert I (1274–1329) Known as Robert the Bruce, king and liberator of Scotland. Was originally Robert VIII, but in 1306 he was crowned as Robert I at Scone. He was defeated by the English that year and took refuge on the coast of Ireland. He was excommunicated and outlawed. He returned in 1307, and in two years wrested most of Scotland from the English, routing Edward II's army at Bannockburn in 1314. He repulsed the English again and again, until finally Edward III recognized the independence of Scotland by the Treaty of Northampton in 1328. There is a legend that Robert the Bruce founded the Royal Order of Scotland. It is said that at the dissolution of the Order of the Temple, some of those persecuted individuals took refuge in Scotland, placed themselves under the protection of Robert the Bruce, and assisted him at the Battle of Bannockburn, which was fought on St. John's Day, 1314. After the battle the Royal Order was founded, and from the fact that the Templars had contributed to the victory, and because of subsequent grants to their order by King Robert, for which they were formally excommunicated by the church, it has by some been identified with that ancient military order. It was originally the Order of Saint Andrew of the Thistle, to which he afterwards united that of Heredom and Rosy Cross, for the sake of the Scottish Freemasons who made a part of the 30,000 men who fought with him. He reserved forever to himself and his successors the title of Grand Master. His titles have descended through the Elgin family to this date, Edward James Bruce, 10th Earl of Elgin, q.v., being the head of the Royal Order of Scotland, and possessor of the great sword of Robert the Bruce that has been handed down through the family. d. July 9, 1329.

James Robertson (1742–1814) American pioneer and brigadier general. b. June 28, 1742 in Brunswick Co., Va. The family moved to Wake Co., N. Car. about 1750, where he worked on a farm and received no education. In 1759 he accompanied Daniel Boone on his third expedition beyond the Alleghenies. Here he found a valley, watered by the Watauga River, which he explored while Boone went to Ky. The following spring

Robertson led 16 families to the West. He was the first settler of Nashville. For many years this small group fought the Indians for the land. In 1776 Robertson and John Sevier, q.v., built a fort at Watauga, and with 40 men withstood a siege of 20 days. In 1779 he emigrated to the Cumberland region, leaving Sevier in charge at Watauga. Here they had a long conflict with the Cherokees, who outnumbered them 100-to-1. At the close of the Revolutionary War he was able to bring 500 trained Indian fighters into the field. Through his diplomacy, he made friends with the Choctaws and Chickasaws who severed their alliance with Great Britain, and in 1790 Washington appointed him brigadier general and Indian commissioner for the area. He fought the half-breed Creek chief, Alexander McGillivray, q.v., on many occasions after peace had been secured with the other Indians, and had great difficulty with Spain, who supported McGillivray. He was a member of Harmony Lodge No. 1 of Tenn. and was buried Masonically upon his death, Sept. 1, 1814.

Fayette L. "Yankee" Robinson (1818–1884) Early circus showman. b. May 2, 1818 in Avon, N.Y. Was apprenticed to a shoemaker, learning tent-making as well. He spent his evenings studying the Bible and dramatics; gave dancing lessons. In 1845 he commissioned an artist to do a 12 by 15 foot oil painting of "The Raising of Lazarus and the Baptism of Christ." He prepared a Biblical lecture on the subject, built a small stage, loaded it in a wagon, and left for Chicago. Here he lectured at Judge Fuller's Museum at the corner of Randolph and Dearborn streets. He then traveled with theatrical companies and owned the first "Uncle Tom's Cabin" company to play under a tent. He bought two circuses, consolidating them into a "175-horse circus." In that day the size of a circus was determined by the number of horses it took to pull the wagons. He lost this circus, but soon had a 225-horse circus which was the largest of the day. This too, he lost, and then found employment with W. W. Cole circus, and later with Sells Bros. On May 19, 1884 he combined with the Ringling Brothers, q.q.v., to form The Yankee Robinson Ringling Bros. Great Double Show at Baraboo, Wis. On Aug. 27 of that year, he became sick at Bayard, Iowa, and Al Ringling put him on the train to make the trip to Lake City, Iowa. He became so ill that the conductor put him off at Jefferson, Iowa, where he died in the Charlie Dean Hotel, unknown. Inasmuch as he wore a Masonic ring, the funeral was conducted by Morning Star Lodge No. 159. When Al Ringling returned to search for him, he had already been buried. The Ringling Brothers erected a monument with Masonic emblems over his grave. His lodge has never been determined, but it might have been almost any place, as he showed in 4,000 cities and towns scattered throughout the U.S. and Canada. d. Sept. 4, 1884.

John Robison (1739–1805) Professor of natural history at the University of Edinburgh and secretary of the Royal Society in that city. He is said to have been initiated at Liege early in life, and for some time was a working Freemason. His importance to Masonry, however, stems from an anti-Masonic book published in 1797, entitled Proofs of a Conspiracy Against All the Religions and Governments of Europe Carried on in the Secret Meetings of the Freemasons, Illuminati, and Reading Societies Collected From Good Authorities. It created a great sensation, and Lord Moira, q.v., called for a defense on the part of Freemasonry. In his second edition, however, he admitted that Freemasonry had “retained in Britain its original form, simple and unadorned, and the lodges have remained the scenes of innocent merriment, or meetings of charity and beneficence.” The book was used in the U.S. by the anti-Masons of the Morgan period to bolster their claims.

Jean Baptiste Comte de Rochambeau (1725–1807) French General of American Revolution, and later Marshal of France. His father, who was governor of Vendome, sent his son to a Jesuit college to be educated for the priesthood. On the death of his older brother, however, his plans were changed. He entered the army in 1742, serving in central Europe and the Lowlands, receiving several wounds in action. Became a colonel in 1747, succeeding his father as Governor of Vendome, and after service in the Mediterranean and German campaigns, was made a brigadier general and decorated as a Knight of the Order of St. Louis. As a lieutenant general, he was given command of the expeditionary force sent by France to help the American colonies, and he landed at Newport, R.I. in Sept., 1780, where his troops went into winter quarters. The names of many Frenchmen appear on the old lodge records of Newport and Providence during 1780–83. He joined Washington's Continentals at White Plains, N.Y. in July, 1781. The joint forces marched southward, besieged Cornwallis at Yorktown, and with the French fleet preventing an escape by sea, forced Cornwallis to capitulate on Oct. 19, 1781. After a tour of the states, Rochambeau returned to France, where he received many honors from the king. He was made Marshal of France and head of the army. During the French Revolution, he was arrested, imprisoned, and narrowly escaped the guillotine. With the rise of power of Napoleon, however, Rochambeau was accorded recognition as a famous soldier of France, and was pensioned by the emperor. His membership has not been established, but he and Lafayette and nearly 100 others, were listed as visiting brothers at the institution of the Lodge of Saint John de Candeur at Paris on Oct. 25, 1775.

Moses Rogers Captain of the Savannah, first ship equipped with a steam engine to cross the ocean in 1819. The ship was "a failure by almost every standard," and yet today she is reckoned one of the world's most illustrious ships because of her history-making voyage, begun May 22, 1819 from Savannah, Ga. Built in New York, it used steam for only 3½ days out of the 29-day voyage. It was sent to Europe in the hope that it could be sold for a fancy price to the Czar of Russia, but found no buyer. Restored to a sailing craft, she blew ashore off Long Island when only three years old. Moses Rogers is traditionally believed to have been a Freemason, but it is not verified. His cousin and brother-in-law, Stevens Rogers, was the navigator and a member of Union Lodge No. 31, New London, Conn.

Robert Rogers (1731–1800) Leader of “Rogers’ Rangers” in French–Indian Wars, and controversial character in American Revolution. b. 1731 in Methuen, Mass. He raised a company of rangers in 1756, which saw much service in the region of Lake George. In 1758 he was promoted to major by Gen. Abercromby. His rangers became famous for their raids. In March, 1758 he defeated 750 French–Indian troops with 170 men, losing all but 70 of his command. In 1759 he was sent by Sir Jeffrey Amherst from Crown Point to destroy the Indian village of St. Francis, which he did, killing 200 Indians. In 1760 he was ordered to take possession of Detroit and other western posts that were ceded by the French to the English after the fall of Quebec. He was appointed governor of Mackinaw, Mich. in 1765, but while holding this office was accused of plotting to plunder his own fort. Was sent in irons to Montreal, and tried. In 1769 he visited England the second time, and while there was imprisoned for debt. At the start of the American Revolution, he dealt with both sides. He was imprisoned by Washington on suspicion of espionage, even though he wrote him “I love America; it is my native country, and that of my family, and I intend to spend the evening of my days in it.” He was paroled by congress to the provincial congress of New Hampshire, and while on parole, accepted a colonel’s commission in the British Army and organized the “Queen’s Rangers.” He went to England in 1778, and was banished from this country. He was a member of St. Johns Lodge No. 1, Portsmouth, N.H., receiving his degrees in April, 1756. d. in England between 1795–1800.

Will Rogers (1879–1935) Full name was William Penn Adair Rogers. American humorist. b. Nov. 4, 1879 at Oologah, Indian Territory (now Okla.). His great grandmother on his father's side was a Cherokee. His father, Clem, served as a captain in the Confederate Army under the Cherokee General Standwaite, q.v. His father, who was a rancher of some means, attempted to give Will the best education possible, but young Will did not like being tied down to anything so formal as education. He attended Willie Halsell Coll. at Vinita, Okla., Scarritt Coll., at Neosho, Mo., and Kemper Military Academy at Boonville, Mo. He ran away from Kemper to punch cattle in Texas, but returned to his father's ranch for a time before setting off for the cattle country of Argentina. From there he went to Africa, where he joined Texas Jack's Wild West Circus. Next he joined Wirth Brothers Circus in Australia, and returned to America to join the Cummins Wild West Show. In St. Louis he turned to burlesque, and made his first appearance on the New York stage, June 11, 1905. He then played in England and Europe, and just before the outbreak of WWI, was in the Empire Theater of London in the musical show, The Merry-GoRound. He entered the Ziegfeld Follies in 1916, where he perfected his monologue technique, and stayed with Ziegfeld until his death, with the exception of the years out for motion pictures. His best remembered pictures were In the Land of Jubilo; Al- most a Husband; The Strange Border; Jes' Call Me Jim. His first talking picture was They Had to See Paris, followed by State Fair; A Connecticut Yankee; David Harurn; In Old Kentucky; and Steamboat Round the Bend. His writings included What We Laugh. At; Illiterate Digest; Letters of a Self-Made Diplomat to His President; There's Not a Bathing Suit in Russia; The Cowboy Philosopher on the Peace Conference; The Cowboy Philosopher on Prohibition. His first weekly article as a columnist appeared in the New York Times in 1922, and later was syndicated and appeared as a Sunday feature in many U.S. newspapers. He petitioned Claremore Lodge No. 53, Jan. 21, 1905, at the age of 25, listing his occupation as that of a fanner. He received the degrees, Feb. 18, 1905; March 10, and 13, 1906. On April 16, 1908 he received the Scottish Rite degrees in the Webber Memorial Class in the Valley of McAlester, Okla. He was twice suspended from the Scottish Rite (1918 and 1921), but each time reinstated (1918 and 1927). Joined Akdar Shrine Temple at Tulsa, Nov. 20, 1914. He had applied for, and was scheduled to receive, the York Rite degrees, but for various reasons was never able to make satisfactory arrangements. He was an honorary member of the Bedouin Shrine Temple at Muskogee, and had attended a Shrine ceremonial in Fairbanks, Alaska, just prior to his death. The Rogers Memorial in Claremore, Okla. exhibits his Masonic petition, and the Bible on which he took his obligation. He was killed in an airplane accident near Point Barrow, Alaska on Aug. 15, 1935, in a plane piloted by his friend Wiley Post.

Nicholas Roosevelt (1767–1854) American inventor. Invented the vertical paddle wheel, and was associated with Robert Fulton in introducing steamboats on Western rivers. b. Dec. 27, 1767 in New York City, he was a great grand-uncle of Theodore Roosevelt, q.v. His efforts in the steamboat field were mentioned by John H. B. Latrobe, q.v., in his Lost Chapter in the History of the Steamboat (1871). He moved to N.Y.C. shortly after the withdrawal of British troops. Here he made a small wooden boat, across which was an axle projecting over the sides, with paddles at the ends. He became interested in the Schuylers copper mines in New Jersey on the Passaic river. He built engines for various purposes, including the water works of Philadelphia. He erected a rolling-mill, and held the government contract for copper drawn and rolled guns, for six 74-gun ships. In 1797, with Robert R. Livingston, q.v., and John Stevens, he agreed to build a boat for which the engines were to be constructed by Roosevelt, and the propelling agency by Livingston. The experiment failed, but the following year, Roosevelt described his vertical wheel to Livingston, and the latter strongly recommended it. Robert Fulton rejected it as being “out of the question.” It later proved one of the principles that made steam navigation a success. In 1802 Livingston and Fulton adopted Roosevelt’s vertical wheels. In 1809 Roosevelt and Fulton associated themselves to introduce steamboats on Western waters, and in 1811, Roosevelt built the New Orleans, the pioneer boat that descended the Ohio and Mississippi Rivers from Pittsburgh to New Orleans in 14 days. Member of Holland Lodge No. 8, N.Y.C. d. July 30, 1854.

became a shipping merchant. He early espoused the cause of the colonies. In 1775 he was appointed muster-master of the Pennsylvania navy, serving until Feb. 23, 1776. In May, 1776 he was employed by the committee of commerce of the Continental Congress to purchase clothes, arms and powder for the use of the army. He established agencies in Nantes and Paris, and made several visits there during the war. He pledged his credit for ≈$20,000 more than was supplied by congress and lost heavily from his personal fortune. Washington's diary makes several references to dining at the home of Ross during the constitutional convention. Member of the Tun Tavern Lodge of Philadelphia.

John Ross (1790–1866) Cherokee Indian Chief. b. Oct. 3, 1790 in Ross-vine, Ga. His father was a Scotchman, and his Cherokee mother was three-quarters white. His boyhood name was Tsanusdi (Little John) and this was exchanged when he reached manhood for that of Guwisguwi or Cooweescoowee. He was an uncle of William P. Ross, q.v., another Cherokee chief and Freemason, whom he educated. John, himself, received a good education at Kingston, Tenn. In 1809 he was sent on a mission to the Cherokees in Arkansas by the Indian agent, and from this time on he remained in the public service of his nation. He was adjutant of the Cherokee regiment in their war with the Creeks (1813–14). He resisted Georgia's attempt to secure their removal West of the Mississippi, and fought his tribe's rights to the Supreme Court. Nevertheless in 1835 a treaty was made with the Cherokees, and 15,000 under the leadership of Ross, migrated into Indian Territory (later Oklahoma) ; 1,200 remained in Georgia and other states, becoming known as the “Eastern Band.” From 1828 until the removal to Indian Territory in 1839, he was principal chief of the Cherokee nation, and headed the various national delegations that visited Washington to defend the right of the Cherokees to their territory. After the arrival in Indian Territory, he was chosen chief of the united Cherokee nation, and held that office until his death, with the exception of a short time during the Civil War, when he was deposed by Federal authorities, due to the dissensions over slavery within the tribe. The Indian artist, George Catlin described Ross as “civilized, highly educated, accomplished, devoted, urbane and temperate.” He was, without question, a Freemason, but his initiation dates and lodge are not known. He is named in the proceedings of the Grand Lodge of Arkansas for 1850 as a member of Cherokee Lodge No. 21, Tahlequah, Cherokee Nation, Indian Territory. However the minutes of that lodge in 1850 list him under the title of “names of brethren, not members.” In his capacity as chief, he approved the action of the Cherokee National Council when it gave the ground for the first Masonic temple at Tahlaquah. It consisted of lots 5 and 6 in square 10, the title to be held by the board of trustees. He was given Masonic burial at his death on Aug. 1, 1866 in Washington, D.C.

In 1844 he became editor of the Cherokee Advocate and was frequently sent to Washington on official business for the tribe. He participated in the grand council of Indian tribes at Okmulgee, Indian Territory, in 1871, and in 1874, became chief of the Cherokee. He was editor of the Indian Journal at Muskogee, the Indian Chieftain at Vinita, and the Indian Arrow at Fort Gibson. An active Freemason throughout his life, he was elected in Federal Lodge No. 1, Washington, D.C. on April 4, 1848, and received his degrees

April 4, 18, 25, 1848. He was also a member of Columbia Chapter No. 15, R.A.M. of Washington, but is listed as withdrawn in the 1850 proceedings. He was a charter member of Cherokee Lodge No. 21 at Tahlequah, the first lodge in the Indian Territory, and served as its first secretary in 1849. In 1851 he was master of the lodge. Ross and Federal lodge played an important part in uniting the Cherokee nation, which was split over the removal from Georgia to the newly created Indian Territory. Ross, and the other headmen of the Cherokee nation, were at the capital to arrange a treaty and they were arrayed in two hostile factions with negotiations at a standstill. But at one of the meetings of Federal lodge, the rival leaders, all Freemasons, were brought together by the exertions of St. Yorke Atlee, the master, and other members, and the treaty was then successfully concluded. d. In 1876 he joined the Lodge Les Amis du Commerce et la Perseverance Reunis and was its master from 1899–1902. Later he was grand master of the Grand Orient of Belgium, presiding as such at the opening of the port of Antwerp. On this occasion he used a silver gavel for the three symbolic raps, which he explained as “wisdom, strength and beauty.” For this he was attacked by the Catholic press of Belgium.

Pascual Ortiz Rubio President of Mexico, 1930–32. b. in 1877. He was minister to Germany in 1923, and ambassador to Brazil in 1926. He was elected to succeed the provisional president Emilio Portes Gil, q.v., in 1929, and to fill out the unexpired term of Alvaro Obregon. He resigned in Sept., 1932. At the time he became president, he had been a Mason for 30 years. He received the 32° AASR at Chapultepec Castle on Feb. 6, 1931, and was also invested with membership in the Anezeh Shrine and Royal Order of Jesters.

Friedrich Ruckert (1788–1866) German poet. He was a professor of Oriental languages at the University of Erlangen and later the University of Berlin. He was particularly famous for his Love Poems and the Wisdom of the Bramas, as well as his translations of famous Eastern literature. In his lyrics, we find many allusions to Freemasonry, one being: “Do you accept that we are building you within our house; we shall make of you a perfect ashlar, fitting well in the invisible building of our dreams.” In 1861 he became a member of the Lodge Zum Rautenkranz at Hildesburghausen.

Herbert B. Rudolph (1894–1957) Judge, Supreme Court of South Dakota since 1931. b. May 22, 1894 in Canton, S. Dak. Graduate of U. of South Dakota in 1916, and U. of Michigan in 1918. Benjamin Rush (1745–1813) Signer of the Declaration of Independence and probably the outstanding physician of the American Revolution. b. Dec. 24, 1745 in Byberry, Pa., he was educated at Princeton and studied medicine in Philadelphia, Edinburgh, London, and Paris. Began practice in Philadelphia in 1769. Appointed treasurer of the U.S. mint in 1779, and served in that office until his death on April 19, 1813. Although referred to as a Freemason many times, there is no documentary proof of his membership. He joined with Washington in the burial of Captain William Leslie (of the British forces) with Masonic honors. Vandever says his membership is unknown, but is said to have “recanted his Masonry.” In a dispute with Joseph Reed, of Philadelphia, he referred to the “leather apron majority in Pennsylvania.” His son, Richard, q.v., was anti-Mason.

Richard Rush (1780–1859) Anti-Mason; U.S. Attorney

General, 1814–17; U.S. Secretary of State, 1817; U.S. Secretary of Treasury, 1825–28; Minister to Great Britain, 1817–25 and to France, 1847–49. b. Aug. 29, 1780 in Philadelphia. Graduate of Princeton in 1797. Was sent to England by President Jackson to obtain the legacy of James Smithson, left to found the Smithsonian Institution. He was an intimate friend of John Quincy Adams, q.v., another anti-Mason, and undoubtedly was greatly influenced in his beliefs by Adams. Rush was initiated in Union Lodge No. 121, Philadelphia on Sept. 19, 1811, and withdrew in Jan., 1827. In a letter to the Anti-Masonic Almanac for 1832, Rush wrote Editor Edward Giddens: "Many years ago I became an entered apprentice, went to a lodge once—and but once. On my return from England, after an absence in the service of the United States, I voluntarily withdrew from the body, by a letter to that effect. My separation from it was in 1826." He was a son of Benjamin Rush, q.v., Declaration Signer.

Was special assistant to U.S. attorney general from 1907–22, and again after 1923. He successfully represented the government in cases arising from unlawful enclosure of public lands in Neb., Wyo., Colo.; in the prosecution of fraudulent sales of swamp lands in Fla.; fraudulent entry of coal lands in Alaska; in Mabray foot and horse race swindling scheme; in the case against Dr. Cook, alleged discoverer of the North Pole. Mason. d. March, 1932.

John Rushworth (see Earl of Jellicoe).

Jeremiah M. Rusk (1830–1893) Governor of Wisconsin, 1882–89; U.S. Secretary of Agriculture, 1889–93; U.S. Congressman, 1871–72. b. June 17, 1830 in Morgan Co., Ohio. His varied career saw him as a stage driver, railroad construction foreman, tavern keeper, sheriff, coroner, and farmer. He moved to Wis. in 1853, and in 1862 was commissioned major in the 25th Wis. regiment. He served under General Sherman from the siege of Vicksburg until the close of the war, receiving the brevet of brigadier general of volunteers in 1865 for meritorious service at the Battle of Salkehatchie. As governor he ordered troops out to halt the mob violence of strikers at Bay View, Wis. in 1886. Five strikers were killed. It was on this occasion that Rusk made the now-famous utterance: “I seen my duty and I done it!” Previously, in 1882, he had sided with labor in the case of the bankrupt Chicago, Portage and Lake Superior Railroad. He was mentioned several times as a candidate for president and vice president of the U.S. He was known nationally as “Uncle Jerry.” He was initiated in 1855 in Frontier Lodge No. 45 at La Crosse, Wis., and became a charter member of La Belle Lodge No. 85, Viroqua, Wis. This lodge’s dispensation was issued Dec. 20, 1856 and its charter dated June 10, 1857. He was one of the six charter members. He was master of the lodge in 1859, 1860, and 1866. Was exalted in Smith Chapter No. 13, R.A.M., La Crosse, and knighted in Robert Macoy Cornmandery No. 3, K.T., at Madison. Received the Scottish Rite at Milwaukee in April, 1886. Seven months after his death (June 13, 1894), Jeremiah M. Rusk Lodge No. 259, South Milwaukee, was chartered.

Also member of Tripoli Shrine Temple at Milwaukee. d. Nov. 21, 1893.

Thomas J. Rusk (1803–1857) U.S. Senator from Texas (first), 1846–57. b. Dec. 5, 1803 in Pendleton Dist., S. Car. Admitted to the bar and began practice in Georgia, moving to Nacogdoches, Texas in 1835. He was a delegate to the convention which declared for the independence of Texas on March 21, 1836, and was the first secretary of war under the new republic. At the Battle of San Jacinto, he took command of the forces after General Houston was wounded, retaining command until Oct., 1836, when he resumed his duties as secretary of war. Was thief justice of the supreme court of Texas, 1838–42. In 1843 he was appointed brigadier general of militia of the Republic of Texas. He was president of the convention that confirmed the annexation of Texas to the U.S. in 1845. He was a member of Milan Lodge No. 40, Nacogdoches, Texas, and at one time was grand orator of the Grand Lodge of Texas. d. July 29, 1857.

Chevalier Bartholomew Ruspini (1728–1813) Early English surgeon–dentist. b. near Bergamo, Italy in 1728, he studied surgery under Monsieur Copran, dentist to the King of France. In 1766 he settled in London under the patronage of Dowager Princess of Wales, and became surgeon–dentist to the Prince of Wales, afterward King George IV, q.v. Was initiated in the Mourning Bush Tavern Lodge No. 116, Bristol, England, April 7, 1762, and over a period of 51 years he held membership in several lodges, and was most active in the Craft. In 1777 he was a founder of the Lodge of the Nine Muses No. 235, London, and in 1787, it was at his instigation that the Prince of Wales founded Prince of Wales Lodge No. 259. He served the Grand Lodge of England as grand steward and grand sword bearer and was active in Royal Arch Masonry. His greatest contribution, however was the foundation, in 1788, of the Royal Cumberland Freemasons School, which has now become the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls. Strangely, although of modest wealth, his property was wasted by his children, and two of his grandchildren became recipients of the benefits of the institution he had founded. He was probably the leading dental surgeon of his day in England and Europe, and was known for his generosity and benevolences. Although a noted Freemason, the Pope conferred on him the title Chevalier and made him a Knight of the Golden Spur, in return for his concern and hospitality towards foreigners in England. d. Dec. 14, 1813.

Archibald D. Russell (1811–1871) Philanthropist b. at Edinburgh, Scotland in 1811, his father, James, was president of the Royal Society of Edinburgh for many years. Benjamin Russell (1761–1845) Early American journalist. b. Sept. 13, 1761 in Boston, Mass. Was apprenticed to Isaiah Thomas, q.v., printer, at Worcester, Mass., but before completing his term, enlisted in the Revolutionary Army and contributed war news to the Spy, Thomas's paper. He began the publication of the Columbian Centinel about 1784. It was a semiweekly journal which had no equal at the time. In 1788 he attended the Mass. convention for ratifying the constitution of the U.S. and made the first attempt at reporting for any Boston newspaper. His paper was conspicuous in collecting foreign intelligence, and he visited all ships that came into the Boston harbor. When congress was holding its first session, Russell offered to publish gratuitously all the laws and other official documents; and the treasury being almost bankrupt, his offer was accepted. After several years he was called on for his bill, which he sent marked "paid." Washington, however, said: "This must not be. When Mr. Russell offered to publish the laws without pay we were poor. It was a generous offer. We are now able to pay our debts." A few days later Russell was paid $7,000. From 1795–1830 he published a paper called the Gazette. He retired from the Centinel in 1829. Member of Rising States Lodge, Boston and St. John's Lodge, Boston. Was grand sword bearer in 1792–95; grand marshal 1796–1810; junior grand warden, 1811–12; senior grand warden, 1813 and grand master of the Grand Lodge of Mass., 1814–16. d. Jan. 4, 1845.

William H. Russell (1812–1872) Partner in the pioneer Western freighting firm of Russell, Majors & Waddell. b. Jan. 31, 1812 in Burlington, Vt. His father was a veteran of the War of 1812, and on his death, the mother remarried and moved to Missouri. Russell served in the Black Hawk War of 1832 and the Seminole War of 1837. In the Mexican War he served as a colonel under General Fremont, on the West coast. He was a principal witness at the trial of Fremont in 1848. In 1854 he formed a partnership with Wm. B. Waddell, owner of a general store in Lexington, with branches along the Missouri River. Waddell had freight lines operating in 1850. By 1855 the partnership had expanded to include Alex Majors, q.v., and in two years they had cleared $300,000. In 1859, Horace Greeley, visiting their depot near Ft. Leavenworth, Kans. said they had two million dollars invested, employed 6,000 teamsters, and worked 45,000 oxen. It was their firm that opened up the West to the pioneer, and hauled the supplies that enabled the settler to exist. It was also the forerunner of the famous Pony Express. They established a fast pony express from St. Joseph, Mo. to Placerville, Calif., the first rider leaving St. Joseph on April 3, 1860. Previous to this, they had express riders on a line from the Missouri River to Pike's Peak region of Colo., and a semi-monthly line from St. Joseph to Salt Lake City. All these lines were failures. The St. Joseph-Placerville line was facing ruin in its first summer, and it was sold to Ben Holliday, a member of Weston Lodge No. 53, Weston, Mo., who in turn sold it to Wells, Fargo & Co. Initiated in Lafayette Lodge No. 32, Lexington, Mo., in 1848, Russell served as master in 1852. In 1856 he transferred membership to Lexington Lodge No. 149. He was active in the Lexington bodies for many years, being exalted in Lexington Chapter No. 10, R.A.M., Nov. 14, 1849, and a member of DeMolay Commandery No. 3, K.T., both of Lexington. d. Comfort Sage (1731–1799) Brigadier General of Connecticut militia in Revolution; merchant and West Indian trader of Middletown, Conn. A man of wealth and influence, he answered the Lexington alarm as a captain of a light horse troop. He rose to command a militia regiment, and was later brigadier general. He participated in the fighting at Long Island, New York, Harlem Heights, White Plains, Fort Washington, Danbury, New Haven and elsewhere. He gave asylum to the children of Benedict Arnold. He was often in the general assembly, and frequently a local office holder. Was made a Mason June 12, 1754 in St. John's Lodge No. 2 at Middletown. He was once fined a shilling for "coming to lodge in a check shirt." Nevertheless he served as master in 1768–83. He was exalted Oct. 8, 1783 in the "grand" chapter at Middletown (now Washington Chapter No. 6). His mark was the "Bible." He was high priest of the chapter from 1785–95. In 1783 he was moderator of a convention to consider a grand lodge in Conn. A cousin of Nathan Sage, q.v.

Nathan Sage (1752–1833) Privateer commander in Revolutionary War. Shipbuilder, merchant, and West Indian trader, he was a cousin of Comfort Sage, q.v. He brought in many prizes during the war, including an English vessel loaded with powder, which was sorely needed by the Americans. He succeeded in bringing this prize safely into the New London harbor, although closely pursued by the British. For this he was publicly honored by Congress. He invested in Western New York lands; was county judge at Redfield; and served as collector of customs at Oswego, where he died in 1833. On Jan. 16, 1786 he was made a Mason in St. John's Lodge No. 2, Middletown, Conn., and became a Royal Arch Mason soon after, in what is now Washington Chapter No. 6. His mark was a “ship.”

Russell Sage (1816–1906) Capitalist. b. Aug. 4, 1816 in Oneida Co., N.Y. Brought up on a farm, he attended school in winter and began business career as an errand boy in his brother’s grocery at Troy, N.Y. Became a retail grocer from 1837–39 and wholesale grocer, 1837–57, at Troy. He served in the U.S. Congress from 1853–57, and was the first to advocate the purchase of Mount Vernon by the government. Moving to New York City, he began his financial rise by investing in small Western railroads and disposing of them to trunk lines. He was president of the Milwaukee & St. Paul for 12 years and was closely associated with Jay Gould in the management of many interests, including the Wabash, St. Louis and Pacific, Missouri Pacific, M.K.&T., D.L.&W. railroads, the American Cable Co., and Western Union. Received degrees in King Solomon’s Primitive Lodge No. 91, Troy, N.Y. on May 20, June 17, 25, 1852, withdrawing on June 30, 1853 to become a charter member of Mount Zion Lodge No. 311, Troy, N.Y. Withdrew from latter on June 14, 1858. d. 1906.

Saint Alban Early English Christian martyr. b. at Verulam (now St. Albans) in Hertfordshire. In his youth he visited Rome and served seven years as a soldier under the Emperor Diocletian. On his return to Britain, he embraced Christianity, and was the first to suffer martyrdom in the great persecution which raged during that time. Anderson, in his Constitutions of 1738, says this appeared in the old constitutions: “Saint Alban loved Masons well and cherished them much, and he made their pay right good: viz two shillings per week and three pence to their cheer; whereas before that time, through all the land, a Mason had but a penny a day and his meat, until Saint Alban amended it. He also obtained of the King a Charter for the Free Masons, for to hold a general council, and gave it the name of Assembly, and was thereat himself as Grand Master and helped to make Masons and gave them good charges.” Anderson’s Constitutions contain much that is tradition.

1st Earl of St. Albans (?–1684) Henry Jermyn, English courtier and statesman. Was vice–chamberlain to Queen Henrietta Maria in 1628, and her master of the horse in 1639. Fought in Royalist army, and accompanied queen to France in 1644. After execution of Charles I, in 1649, Jermyn remained in France with Charles II, and after the Restoration was created earl in 1660 and lord chamberlain in 1674. In his constitutions of 1738, Dr. Anderson, q.v., recorded that the Earl of St. Albans was grand master in 1663, with Sir John Denham as his deputy grand master, and Sir Christopher Wren, q.v., and John Webb as his grand wardens. Anderson stated that: “According to a copy of the old constitutions this grand mason held a general assembly and feast on St. John’s Day, 27th December, 1663.”

Saint Augustine Was sent to England with 40 monks, near the end of the sixth century, to evangelize the country. No reference is made to him in the Old Charges, but Lenning, vv., states that according to a tradition, Augustine placed himself at the head of the corporations of the builders and was recognized as their grand master.

William St. Clair of Roslin (1700–1778) By both tradition and fact, the St. Clair family of Roslin, Scotland, held an intimate connection with the history of Freemasonry in that country for more than 300 years. By tradition, King James II appointed William St. Clair, Earl of Orkney and Caithness, the protector of Freemasonry in Scotland in 1441. The family connection was passed from generation to generation until Nov. 30, 1736 when the above William St. Clair, who was childless, gathered the members of the Edinburg and nearby lodges and tendered a resignation of his hereditary office. At that meeting he was elected grand master, thus becoming the first grand master of Scotland (1736–37). He had been made a Mason in the Lodge Canon-gate Kilwinning only the previous year, and it is thought by several Masonic historians that he was made a Mason in order that he might dramatically resign these family powers (which had ceased to be of practical value) in order to gain election as first grand master over the Earl of Home, supported by another faction.

Arthur St. Clair (1734–1818) Major General in American Revolution and first Governor of the Northwest Territory, 1789–1802. b. March 23, 1734 in Thurso, Scotland, a member of the St. Clair of Roslyn, q.v., family so prominent in Freemasonry of that country. He inherited a fortune from his mother. Joined the 60th Foot on May 13, 1757, and came to America with Admiral Boscawen's fleet. Was under General Wolfe at Quebec in 1758. Resigned his British commission on April 16, 1762, and settled in Ligonier Valley, Pa., where he became prominent in all political and cultural affairs of that area, building a residence and erecting mills. Became a colonel of militia in July, 1775, joining General John Sullivan in Canada, where, by his counsel, he aided that officer in saving his command at Three Rivers. Made brigadier general on Aug. 9, 1776, organized the New Jersey militia, participating in the Battles of Trenton and Princeton. Appointed major general, Feb. 19, 1777; succeeded Horatio Gates in command at Ticonderoga. Here he was overwhelmed by the superior forces of Burgoyne. For this he was tried by courtmartial in 1778, but "acquitted with the highest honor." He assisted General Sullivan in preparation for his expedition against the Six Nations; was a member of the courtmartial that tried Major Andre at West Point, which he commanded in Oct., 1780. He was a member of the Pa. council of censors in 1783, and a delegate to the Continental Congress, 1785–87, from Pa. While governor of the Northwest Territory, he fixed the seat of justice at Cincinnati, Ohio, which he named in honor of the Society of the Cincinnati, of which he was president for Pa. in 1783–89. Was appointed commander-in-chief of the army operating against the Indians in 1791. When this army suffered a defeat, he resigned his commission as major general. He died in poverty at Greensburg, Pa. on Aug. 31, 1818, attempting to settle his claims against the government. His original lodge is not known, but presumed to be a British military lodge. On Sept. 8, 1791, he was one of those signing a request to the Grand Lodge of New Jersey for a lodge at Cincinnati (Nova Caesarea Harmony Lodge No. 2). He is recorded at many meetings of this lodge, and in 1798, the anniversary oration of that lodge was dedicated to him. At his burial, Masonic services were first conducted and the ceremonies then turned over to the ex-soldiers of the town. After several years of neglect, the lodge at Greensburg, Pa. erected a sandstone monument over his grave, but wind and weather obliterated all inscriptions on the stone. The local lodge must have had the help of several Pa. lodges in erecting this first monument, as the minutes of Washington Lodge No. 164, Washington, Pa., for April 5, 1830 record a subscription of ten dollars "to assist the Greensburg lodge in erecting a suitable monument to the memory of our distinguished brother, Gen. Arthur St. Clair." In 1913 Westmoreland Lodge erected a second granite monument over the grave.

Comte de Saint Germain (?-1784) Masonic charlatan. An unusual scamp, who is best described by Frederick II of Prussia, q.v., as "a man no one has ever been able to make out." He claimed to be more than 500 years of age, and to have achieved the highest rank of Freemasonry. He said that he was born in Chaldea, and claimed to possess the secrets of the ancient Egyptians, including the ability to transmute metals and to produce pure diamonds by carbon. He was handsome, an able musician, expert magician, linguist, and a gambler. He was known as Count de Bellamura in Venice; Chevalier de Schoning at Pisa; Chevalier Welldone at Milan; and Count Soltikow at Genoa. He became an intimate of Frederick the Great, q.v., and remained at his court for some time.

C. F. St. John Major General, U.S. Army. Became commanding

general of Walter Reed Medical Center, Nov. 2, 1959, succeeding Lt. General Leonard D. Heaton, q.v. A member of Jamestown Lodge No. 352, Jamestown, Ohio, receiving the degrees at the age of 21. Also member of the National Sojourners and Heroes of '76.

Elizabeth St. Leger (1693–1773) probably the only “Lady Freemason” whose membership is now generally accepted as authentic. Her initiation occurred in Cork Co., Ireland about 1710, when she was 17. She was the daughter of the 1st Viscount Doneraile, who, as was the custom in that day of the nobility, held lodges in his house. When it was discovered that she had been listening to the ceremonies through a wall that was being repaired, it seemed to her father and brothers that the only course was to complete her knowledge by making her a Mason. After her marriage to Richard Aldworth in 1713, Elizabeth became a patroness of the Craft. After her death the memory of “our sister Aldworth” was toasted by the Freemasons of Ireland. Her Masonic jewel and apron exist to this day. d. April, 1773, at the advanced age of 80.

Louis Claude de Saint Martin (1743–1803) French mystic philosopher and member of the Illuminati. b. Jan. 18, 1743 at Amboise, France. After six years of army service, he traveled throughout Europe, and at one time studied three years in a state of almost absolute seclusion. He fell under the influence of Martinez Pasqualis early in his Masonic career, but later attempted to reform the Pasqualis system into what he called a “Rectified Rite” of ten degrees; this has since taken his own name, and is known as Martinism. He later devoted himself to the philosophical speculations of Jakob Bohme, q.v., His concepts were introduced into the Masonic lodges of Russia and Germany.

Joseph Remi Valliere de St. Real (1787–1847) First French–Canadian to receive an important political appointment under the British regime. The son of a blacksmith, he became one of the best educated men of his day in Canada. Attended the Quebec Seminary studied law, and served as a British officer in the War of 1812. A political rival of Louis Papineau, leader of the Canadian rebellion of 1837–38, St. Real served as speaker of the provincial parliament, 1823–25, and chief justice of the Queen’s Bench for the district of Montreal, 1842–47. He was named to the executive council of Lower Canada by the Earl of Durham in 1838, but that same year was suspended from the bench for granting a writ of habeas corpus to a prisoner of the rebellion (two other judges had been suspended previously for the same thing). He is believed to have received his degrees in the lodge known as Les Freres du Canada, under warrant from the Provincial Grand Lodge of Lower Canada (Ancients). He was senior grand warden of the provincial grand lodge in 1820; junior grand warden of the District Grand Lodge of Quebec and Three Rivers in 1821, and senior grand warden of the same in 1822. He was buried from the Roman Catholic church, Sacre Nom de Marie in Montreal.

Louis Guillemain de Saint Victor French Masonic writer, either established Adonhiramite Masonry, or modified it into a working system. In 1781 he published Choice Collection of Adonhiramite Masonry, which contained instructions of the first four degrees. This was followed by another in 1787, which contained the higher degrees of the rite. His Origins of Adonhiramite Masonry sought to trace the source of Masonic initiation to the mysteries of the Egyptian priesthood.

Ceran St. Vrain (1797–1870) Pioneer trader and Indian fighter. b. in St. Louis in 1797. He was closely associated with Charles, q.v., and William Bent, and Kit Carson, q.v. In fact he was a partner of Charles Bent in a chain of early day trading posts and forts. His headquarters in the New Mexico Territory was at Taos and Santa Fe. When the Civil War broke out, he organized the First New Mexico Cavalry and became its colonel, with Kit Carson as a lieutenant colonel. Following the war he moved to Mora near Fort Union, then the principal military base in the Southwest. Here it was more convenient for him to conduct his business of furnishing supplies to the government. He was raised in Montezuma Lodge No. 109 (now No. 1) of Missouri charter, Jan. 25, 1855. In 1860 he dimitted and secured a warrant from the grand master of the Grand Lodge of Missouri to constitute Bent Lodge No. 204 at Taos on Aug. 4, 1860. He was the first treasurer, and Kit Carson the first junior warden. War conditions forced the surrender of this charter in 1864. d. at Mora, Oct. 28, 1870, and his funeral on Oct. 30 was attended by General Gregg and nearly all officers of Fort Union. The 8th Cavalry acted as an escort and the general and his staff as pallbearers. Masonic services were held. The Daily New Mexican (Oct. 29) said: "Col. St. Vrain came to New Mexico 40 years ago and has been one of its most highly respected and influential citizens.

Possessed of good education, fine natural abilities, the highest style of courtesy, and very good energy and enterprise, he at once engaged in merchandising and manufacturing, by the legitimate profits of which he has accumulated a handsome property. His upright dealing, fairness and courteous treatment of all with whom he came in contact, win him hosts of friends who will sincerely sorrow at his death.”

Marquis de Saisseval French nobleman. On March 11, 1775, the marquis, assisted by several distinguished brethren, formed the Lodge of Candour, under the constitution of the Grand Orient of France. The Duke of Chartres was then grand master. Fourteen days later (March 25) this lodge gave a fete d’ adoption for the female counterpart of Freemasonry known as adoptive Freemasonry. It was a gala affair attended by 1,000 of the elite of French society. The Duchess of Bourbon was at this time installed as the first grand mistress of adoptive Masonry.

George A. H. Sala (1828–1895) English writer. b. in London; his father was an Italian and his mother a native of the West Indies. He was educated for an artist, but became a journalist, contributing to several London magazines. During the Civil War, he was the American correspondent of the London Daily Telegraph. From 1870–71 he was in France, and later in Russia and Australia. He authored a number of books on travel, social satire, and novels. Among his volumes were America in the Midst of War; America Revisited; Quite Alone (a novel); and Life and Adventures. He was a member of Drury Lane Lodge No. 2127, London, for many years. d. 1895.

Duke of Saldanha (1791–1876) Portuguese soldier and statesman. Name in full was Duque de Joao Carlos de Oliveira e Daun. He held military and diplomatic posts in Brazil between 1810–22, and was Portuguese minister of foreign affairs in 1825. In 1826–27 he was governor of Oporto. Was appointed marshal in 1834, and minister of war and president of the council in 1835. After instigating a counter-revolution against the Septembrists, he was exiled from 1836–46. Returning to Portugal, he was premier in the years 1846–49; 1851–56 and 1870. After the Peninsular War, he was head of Freemasonry in Portugal.

Charles P. “Chic” Sale (1885–1936) American humorist and actor. b. in Huron, S. Dak. in 1885, he was educated in the public schools of Urbana, Ill. He became a character actor in vaudeville in 1908. He appeared in motion pictures, including The Star Witness; The Expert; and When a Fellow Needs a Friend. His greatest fame, however, came from his publication of a small book entitled The Specialist, an humorous account concerning outdoor toilets, which sold over 200,000 copies in three months. Raised Aug. 29, 1918 in Urbana (Ill.) Lodge No. 157. d. Nov. 7, 1936.

Francesco Salvi (1759–1832) Italian philosopher and author. b. Jan. 1, 1759 at Cozenza in Calabria. He was a professor of history and philosophy at Milan. A prolific writer, he wrote many works on history and political economy. He also published several poems and dramas. In 1811 he received the prize given by the lodge at Leghorn for a Masonic essay on the utility of the Craft and its relation to philanthropy and morals. d. Sept., 1832.

Manuel Ferraz de Campos Salles (1846–1913) Fourth President of Brazil. A lawyer and politician, he was born in Campinas, Sao Paulo. Was a deputy, 1884–89; minister of justice 1889; governor of Sao Paulo, 1896–98. He had a part in bringing about the dethroning of Dom Pedro II, the last emperor of Brazil. He served as president of Brazil from 1898–1902, and during his administration made many reforms in finance, peaceful settlement of boundary questions, and friendly relations with Argentina and European nations. Mason.

Jose de San Martin (1778–1850) South American soldier and liberator. b. Feb. 25, 1778 in Yapeyu, now in Argentine, on the Uruguay River. Educated in Spain from the age of eight, he entered the Spanish Army in 1791 and rose to lieutenant colonel. Left army to offer his services in the cause of South American independence, arriving in March, 1812, in Buenos Aires. He defeated the Spaniards in 1813, and succeeded Belgrano as commander-in-chief the next year. Organized an army in Cuyo province of Argentina, 1814–16, crossed the Andes, and with General O'Higgins, q.v., defeated the Spanish at Chacabuco in 1817, and at Maipo in 1818. He established the independence of Chile, and with the aid of Lord Cochrane, developed a Chilean fleet and left with it for Peru in 1820. In July, 1821, as the Spanish withdrew, he entered Lima, Peru and proclaimed the independence of that country, assuming the title of "Protector." In this capacity he freed all slaves and revoked the taxes levied on the Indians. After a short reign, he resigned on Sept. 20, 1822. His work made possible the victories of the liberator, Bolivar, to whose assistance he sent his famed mounted grenadiers. He then went to Brussels, where he established himself, returning in 1828 to Buenos Aires. Finding the country plagued with internal troubles, he returned to Brussels, vowing never again to draw his sword in civil war. He died Aug. 17, 1850 at Boulogne, France in comparative poverty. He received his degrees in the Logia Legalidad of Cadiz, Spain, in 1808. Later he joined the Lautaro lodge in Spain, Joseph Bonaparte, q.v., being grand master of that group. He went to England and there joined Miranda's, q.v., Lautaro Lodge before leaving for Buenos Aires. Shortly after his arrival in that city he formed Lautaro Lodge No. 3, followed by No. 4 in Mendoza, and No. 5 in Santiago. These lodges had five degrees. San Martin was "Gran Presidente" of the grand lodge at Buenos Aires. In 1825, after his return to Europe, he was presented a medal by Parfaite Amitie Lodge of Brussels. This medal is on exhibit in the Mitre Museum, Buenos Aires.

Antonio Lopez de Santa Anna (1795–1867) Mexican general, revolutionist, president and dictator. b. Feb. 21, 1795 in Jalapa. He led revolts against Iturbide in 1822; Guerrore in 1828; and Bustamante in 1832. Was president of Mexico, 1841–45. He attempted to crush the Texas revolution; seized the Alamo in 1836, but was defeated and captured by Sam Houston at San Jacinto, April 21, 1836. Forced to sign articles of independence for Texas, he was released in eight months. Was in control of Mexico from 1839–42, and made dictator in 1844 by the constitution. In 1845 he was deposed and exiled, but recalled and made provisional president in 1847. He commanded the Mexican Army against the U.S. in 1846–47, but was defeated at Buena Vista, Cerro Gordo, Puebla, and Mexico City by General Scott. Exiled again in 1848, but recalled and made president in 1853–55. Again exiled in 1855. He returned to Mexico City in 1874, where he died June 20, 1876, in poverty and neglect. In a political fight, he favored the Scottish Rite faction (the Escoseses), which demanded the recall of U.S. Ambassador Poinsett, q.v. Later he appeared to become a Yorkist. Andrew Jackson once wrote Sam Houston that “He is the pride of the Mexican soldiers and the favorite of the priesthood.” At age 80, writing his memoirs, he stated, “I wish to record also that I defended the Apostolic Roman Catholic religion (the only one in which I believe and in which I must die).” It is said that Santa Anna owed his life at San Jacinto to the giving of a Masonic distress sign, first to James A. Sylvester, one of his captors; secondly, to Sam Houston, when he was brought before the general; and thirdly, to a group of Texas soldiers, among whom were John A. Wharton, George W. Hockley, Richard Bache, Dr. J. E. Phelps and others. These Masons are said to have worked together to save the Mexican general’s life. Certainly after his slaughter at the Alamo, something unusual must have saved him. John Stiles of Red River, a soldier, was one of those guarding Santa Anna following his capture and while he was held prisoner at “Orizimbo”, the plantation home of Dr. Phelps. Wishing to show his appreciation of the treatment received, Santa Anna presented his Masonic apron to Stiles.

This apron was displayed at a meeting of Friendship Lodge No. 16, Clarksville, Texas, and reported in the Texas Grand Lodge Magazine in Oct., 1938. At that time it was the property of Robert Stiles of Broken Bow, Okla.

Francisco de Paula Santander (1792–1840) Regarded as the founder of Colombia (New Granada). A general and statesman of New Granada, he served in the revolutionary war and was promoted to general of division at the Battle of Boyaca, Aug. 7, 1819. He cooperated with Paez and Bolivar, qq.v., both Masons, and later opposed them. He was vice president from 1821–28, and acting president in Bolivar's absence, 1821–27. In the latter year he led an unsuccessful revolt against Bolivar and was sentenced to death. Bolivar commuted the sentence to exile. While living in the United States, he was elected president of Nueva Granada (now Colombia) in 1832. Returning, he served in that capacity until 1837, his term being noted for the advancement of education. He was a past master and sovereign grand inspector general, 33° ASK Prince Kasimir–Nestor Sapieha Polish general and marshal of the Polish Diet, widely known for his patriotism. Was elected grand master of Poland in 1789. The anti-Russian movement, then spreading in Poland, penetrated also into Polish Freemasonry, and the Lodge of "Catherine under the Northern Star” (named for Catherine the Great of Russia) changed its name to Lodge of “Stanislaus Augustus under the Northern Star.”

Anthony Sayer (1672–1742) First Grand Master of the United Grand Lodge of England in 1717, holding the office one year. Very little is known of his Masonic history or private life. He was a member of the Old Lodge No. 3, which met at the "Apple Tree" Tavern in Charles Street, Covent Garden, now the Fortitude and Old Cumberland Lodge No. 12. He served as its warden in 1723, in which year he was one of the brethren who signed their approbation of Anderson's Constitutions. In 1718 he proclaimed George Payne his successor as grand master, and in 1719 was appointed senior grand warden by Dr. Desaguliers, q.v. All else that is known of Sayer from official records is unfortunate. He was thrice an applicant for grand lodge relief—in 1724, 1730, and 1741. In 1730 he had to appear to answer charges to a complaint of irregularity, the nature of which is unknown. He was acquitted, but told to do "nothing so irregular in the future." From 1733 until his death, he was tyler of what is now the Old King's Arms Lodge

No. 28. At his funeral, says the London Evening Express of Jan. 16, 1742, "his corpse was followed by a great number of Gentlemen of that Honourable Society of the best quality" to Covent Garden, where he was buried. d. Hjlmар Schacht German financier, who was probably one of the greatest financial wizards of his time. From 1908–15 he was director of the Duetsche Bank and later a partner of the Darmstaedter and National Bank. During the Weimar Republic in 1923, he was appointed commissioner of currency. As president of the Reichsbank, he stopped the German inflation. He was president of the Reichsbank until 1930 and again appointed to the same position by Hitler from 1933–40. It is certainly true that at this time he helped Germany to arm, but in 1940 he was put under house arrest by the Nazis. At the end of the war he was brought into court at the Nurnberg trials as a war criminal, but acquitted in 1946. His own defense in this trial is remarkable. He belonged to the Lodge Zur Freundschaft under the Grand Lodge of Prussia. This is the grand lodge which hoped to continue under Hitler by virtue of its strong national feeling. As late as January of this year (1960) he wrote an article concerning some Masonic subjects which came up during the time of Hitler.

In 1901–04 he commanded an Antarctic expedition in the Discovery, surveying South Victoria Land and interior of Antarctic continent; discovered King Edward VII Land and sounded Ross Sea. He left the navy in 1909, and the following year commanded an Antarctic expedition in the Terra Nova. In Nov., 1911, with four companions, he began a sledge journey and reached the South Pole on Jan. 18, 1912—just five weeks after it was discovered by Amundson. He perished, with his companions, on the return trip, as a result of bad weather and insufficient food. His records and diaries were found by a search party in Nov., 1912. He was a member of Drury Lane Lodge No. 2127, London, in 1901. Also member of St. Alban's Lodge No. 2597, Christ Church, New Zealand, and Navy Lodge No. 2613, of England.

Sir Walter Scott (1771–1832) Scottish poet, novelist, historian and biographer. Known as “The Border Minstrel,” “The Wizard of the North,” and “the Great Magician.” His father, of the same name, was a medical professor at Edinburgh U. In his early years he published under various pseudonyms. His literary output was vast, including The Lay of the Last Minstrel; Marmion; Lady of the Lake; Life and Works of Swift;

Waverly; Lord of the Isles; Guy Mannering; The Black Dwarf; Rob Roy; The Bride of Lammermoor; Ivanhoe; Tales of the Crusaders; The Talisman and many others. He was called to the bar in 1792, and was sheriff of Selkirk in 1799. Became a principal clerk to court of session, but withdrew from bar to devote himself to writing and publishing. An unfortunate publishing partnership left him with debts amounting to ≈£130,000, which he paid in full before his death. He was initiated, passed, and raised at an emergency meeting of Lodge Saint David No. 36 of Edinburgh on Monday, March 2, 1801. His father had been initiated in the same lodge in Jan., 1754, and his elder brother was also a member of this lodge. Later his son was initiated in Lodge Canongate Kilwinning No. 2, on Nov. 29, 1826. On June 4, 1816, he laid the foundation stone of a new lodgeroom at Selkirk in the presence of the provincial grand master, the Marquis of Lothian, and was elected an honorary member of that lodge on the occasion (now Saint John No. 32). He was created a baronet in 1820. In 1823 he was offered the grandmastership of the Royal Grand Conclave of Knights Templar of Scotland, but declined because of "age and health not permitting me to undertake the duties which whether convivial or charitable, a person undertaking such an office ought to be in readiness to perform when called upon." He attended lodge frequently, as was attested by the secretary in 1841, when proposing that the name of Saint David Lodge be altered to "Sir Walter Scott's Lodge." The proposal, however, was defeated. St. David Lodge subscribed to the monument to Sir Walter in Princess St., Edinburgh, and attended the laying of the cornerstone with Masonic honors by the grand master in 1840.

John Sevier (1745–1815) Pioneer, frontiersman, Revolutionary soldier, Indian fighter, first governor of Tennessee, and first and only governor of the briefly historic “State of Franklin.” b. Sept. 23, 1745 in Rockingham Co., Va. Educated until the age of 16 at the academy in Fredericksburg, Va. He married the next year, and founded the village of Newmarket in the Shenandoah Valley. Here he became celebrated as an Indian fighter, and was victor in many battles with neighboring tribes. Was appointed captain in the Virginia line in 1772, moving then to Watauga on the Western slope of the Alleghenies. Took part in the Indian battle of Point Pleasant in 1774. He petitioned the N. Car. legislature, asking them to annex his colony so they might help in the Revolution under official state authority. The petition was granted, and the whole of what is now Tennessee was organized into a county of N. Car., then known as "Washington district." Sevier was then chosen as a delegate to the state convention. He organized every able-bodied man between 16 and 50 years in the militia and became their colonel. This group fought many successful conflicts with the border Indians, burning their towns and raiding their camps. They won the Battle of Boyd's Creek, and with Col. Isaac Shelby, won the Battle of King's Mountain. At the end of the war, N. Car. felt that they could not afford the large territory which Sevier had organized, as it increased their portion of the Federal debt. Therefore they ceded it to the Federal government. When the news of this reached the settlers, they formed their own government, called a convention on Aug. 23, 1784, organized a constitution and state government, elected Sevier governor, and named their state "Franklin." N. Car. then reversed its decision to cede the "state" and set up a militia with Sevier as its general, and a Superior court. The natives did not like this, and were determined to have their own state. Sevier advised them against this independent action, but went along with them. Gov. Richard Caswell, q.v., declared a revolt existed in the territory and sent troops into "Franklin," capturing and imprisoning Sevier, who was later rescued. Finally the territory was ceded by N. Car., and Sevier then took an oath of allegiance to the U.S., was commissioned brigadier general in 1789, and the following year chosen to Congress as the first representative from the valley of the Mississippi. He continued his campaigns against the Creeks and Cherokees, and broke their will to fight in the Etowah campaign of 1793. When Tennessee was admitted to the Union in 1796, he became the first governor, serving until 1801, and again from 1803 to 1809. Was elected to congress in 1811 and again in 1815, but died in the latter year before he could take his seat. His original lodge is not known, but he was first master of Tennessee Lodge No. 41 (under N. Car, jurisdiction) in 1800, while governor. This lodge later became Tennessee Lodge No. 2, under the Grand Lodge of Tennessee. The charter was arrested in Oct., 1827. His name also appears as a member of Greenville Lodge No. 3 (No. 43 under N. Car.) in 1805. d. Sept. 24, 1815.

Jan (Jean) Sibelius (1865–1957) Finland's greatest composer. b. Dec. 8, 1865 in Hämeenlinna (Tavastahus). His full name was Johan Julius Christian Sibelius, but he later took the christian name of his uncle. At the age of ten he composed two pieces of music, Drops of Water and Aunt Evelina's Life. He thought of studying law, but gave it up in favor of music. He first studied violin under Gustav Levander. In 1888 Gunnar Wennerberg's tale, The Watersprite, was performed in Helsingfors, the 23-yearold Sibelius writing its central theme. He composed seven symphonies, a violin concerto, and much chamber music and piano music. Best known are his two great orchestral tone poems: En Sage, 1892, and Finlandia, 1900. Sibelius was the greatest Masonic composer since Mozart, q.v. On Aug. 1, 1822 the Czar of Russia issued an order closing all lodges in what is now Finland. Nearly 100 years later, Finland gained its independence, and in 1918 certain Finnish Masons who had been initiated in the U.S.

returned to Finland and petitioned the Grand Lodge of New York for a lodge at Helsinki. It was granted, and in 1922 Grand Master Arthur S. Tompkins visited Finland, where on August 18th, in the old Parliament House, the three degrees were conferred on 27 leading citizens of Finland, including Sibelius. The Finnish lodges now work under the ritual of the Grand Lodge of New York, translated verbatim into Finnish. Almost immediately, Sibelius and others formed Suomi Lodge No. 1 at Helsinki. Sibelius was the grand organist of the Grand Lodge of Finland, and in 1927 he composed a series of nine vocal and instrumental numbers, titled Masonic Ritual Music. It included a brief adagio for piano, five vocal solos with piano accompaniment, as march for piano with two trios, one of which has an additional voice part, an a cappella choral for male quartet, and a funeral march for organ. This work virtually escaped notice for the next seven years. In 1935 the music, in the form of a highly prized manuscript copy, was presented to the Grand Lodge of New York by the Grand Lodge of Finland, in token of friendship and brotherly love. It was signed by Sibelius. It also bore the request that the music be used for Masonic purposes only. It was first performed in the U.S. on Sept. 30, 1935 in the American Lodge of Research. In the same year, Sibelius received the annual Distinguished Achievement award from the Grand Lodge of New York. The first edition of the Masonic Ritual Music was published (for Masons only) in 1936. The second edition, in 1950, contained extensive revisions by the composer and was enlarged by three additional pieces, including the theme of the famous Finlandia, with Masonic words. Sibelius died September 20, 1957 at the age of 92. He had been blind several years preceding his death.

George Smith British Army captain who was inspector of the Royal Military Academy at Woolwich. His fame rests on his work, The Use and Abuse of Freemasonry, published in 1783. He had requested the sanction of the grand lodge for its publication, but on its refusal printed it anyway. It was very popular and all copies were soon sold. Although born in England, he had entered the military service of Prussia at an early age, being connected with a noble family in that country. It appears that he was initiated in one of the German lodges. On his return to England he became master of the Royal Military Lodge at Woolwich, serving four years. During his mastership, he opened the lodge in the King's Bench Prison and initiated some persons confined there. This brought the censorship of the grand lodge on both Smith and the lodge. In 1778 the Duke of Manchester appointed him provincial grand master of Kent, and in 1780 he was appointed junior grand warden of the Grand Lodge of England. Grand Secretary Heseltine, unfriendly to Smith, objected to it as illegal for a person to hold two offices in the grand lodge, and Smith resigned at the next quarterly communication. (Actually it was legal at that time, but was not written into the law until 1784.) In 1785 he was expelled from the Craft “for uttering an instrument purporting to be a certificate of the Grand Lodge recommending two distressed Brethren.”

Was the last of the Puritan–Federalist governors, being defeated for reelection by Oliver Wolcott, who headed the reform of Toleration ticket, and was concurrently governor and grand master. Smith retired to his extensive farm in Sharon. Made a Mason in St. Paul’s Lodge No. 11, Litchfield, Conn. in 1796. d. 1845.

John Eugene Smith (1816–1897) Major General (brevet) of Civil War in both volunteers and U.S. Army. b. Aug. 3, 1816 in Berne, Switzerland. His father was an officer under Napoleon, and after the latter’s downfall, emigrated to Philadelphia. As a young man Smith learned watchmaking, then the jeweler’s business. After living in St. Louis for several years he moved to Galena, Ill, in 1836, living there until the outbreak of the Civil War. He entered service on April 15, 1861 as a colonel of the 45th Ill. Inf. Was at the capture of Fort Henry and Fort Donelson, the Battle of Shiloh, and siege of Corinth. Became brigadier general of volunteers on Nov. 29, 1862, and commanded the 8th Division of the 16th Corps. At Vicksburg he led the 3rd Division of the 17th Corps, and in Sept., 1863 was transferred to the 15th Corps, taking part in the capture of Missionary Ridge (for which Grant mentioned him in his memoirs), and in the Atlanta and Carolina campaigns of 1864–65. Received brevet of major general of volunteers on Jan. 12, 1865, and mustered out of volunteer service in April, 1866. He then became a colonel of the 14th Inf. Received brevets of brigadier general and major general, U.S. Army, March 2, 1867, for his conduct at the siege of Vicksburg and action at Savannah. Retired in May, 1881. His original membership must have been in St. Louis, for on Dec. 27, 1838 we find him as a charter member of Far West Lodge U.D., chartered in Galena, Ill, by the Grand Lodge of Missouri. At the first meeting of Far West Lodge No. 29, March 23, 1839, he was secretary, and was ordered “to procure the jewels for the Lodge.” In 1845 this lodge requested to be released from the Grand Lodge of Missouri, and on May 15, 1858 we find Smith as an honorary member of Miners’ Lodge No. 273, Galena. Smith was one of the five generals this lodge furnished in the Civil War. He later became a regular member, served as master, and then became a life member of this lodge. He was exalted in Jo Daviess Chapter No. 51, R.A.M. of Galena, June 22, 1859. In 1888 he was present at the Masonic Veteran Association’s meeting at the home of General John C. Smith, q.v., a member of the same lodge and venerable chief of the organization. The home was at 65 Sibley Road, and as the annual meeting place, was designated “Smith’s Inn.” d. In state senate, 1846–50. Was U.S. district attorney for Ky., 1828–32. Member of Richmond Lodge No. 25 as early as 1813, and served as its master. Member of Danville Chapter No. 4, R.A.M., Danville, Ky. in 1825, and also a Knight Templar. d. June 6, 1854.

John Stafford Smith (1750–1836) English composer who wrote the music for the anthem that later became Key's Star-Spangled Banner. Its original use is in doubt, but at an early date it was used by an Irish Masonic orphans home as its song. It was also known as To Anacreon in Heaven, a drinking song popular in the English pubs. Although Francis Scott

Key's words were written in the War in 1812, it was not until March 3, 1931 that congress passed the bill and President Hoover signed it, making The Star-Spangled Banner our national anthem. Smith was a member of Royal Somerset House & Inverness Lodge No. 4 of London.

John W. Smith (1845–1925) U.S. Congressman to 56th Congress, 1899–1900, from Maryland; Governor of Maryland, 1900–04; U.S. Senator, 1908–1921. b. Feb. 5, 1845 in Snow Hill, Md. Joseph Smith (1790–1877) Rear Admiral, U.S. Navy. b.

March 30, 1790 in Boston, Mass. Entered navy as a midshipman in 1809. Was a first lieutenant on the brig Eagle in the victory on Lake Champlain on Sept. 11, 1814, where he was severely wounded. Received a medal from Congress for this. He then served with the Mediterranean fleet, 1815–45, commanding that fleet in 1844–45, with the frigate Cumberland as his flagship. Was chief of bureau of yards and docks, 1846–69, and then president of the examining board for promotion of officers, until 1871. He had been retired in 1861 and promoted to rear admiral in 1862. After his service with the examining board, he resided in Washington until his death, at which time he was the senior officer of the Navy on the retired list. His son, Joseph B. Smith, q.v., an officer on the Congress, was killed March 8, 1862, in its encounter with the Merrimac. d. Jan. 17, 1877.

Joseph Smith (1805–1844) Founder of the Mormon Church (The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints). b. Dec. 23, 1805 in Sharon, Vt. of a poor family which migrated to Palmyra, N.Y. in 1815, and then to nearby Manchester. The angel Moroni is said to have revealed the Book of Mormon to him, written on golden plates, which he was able to transcribe by the use of “Urim and Thummim,” instruments of magical power. His detractors say that the Book of Mormon is based on an imaginative tale written in Biblical style by a former Presbyterian minister, Samuel Spaulding, but never published. The manuscript was delivered to Smith by Sidney Rigdon, q.v., who helped revise it and shortly afterwards became one of the presidents of the church. It was printed in Palmyra, N.Y. in 1830, and the church was founded at the home of Peter

Whitmer in Fayette, N.Y., on April 6 of that year. Smith moved to Kirtland, Ohio in 1831 and to Missouri in 1838. Here the Mormons ran into trouble at Independence and Far West and were removed in a body from the state by the militia. Smith, Rigdon, and others were arrested for “murder, treason, burglary, arson and larceny,” but allowed to escape and join the others at Commerce, Ill., which they renamed Nauvoo. Here Smith governed despotically with the aid of a small group of advisors. When he claimed the revelation of polygamy in 1843 the church was split by a schism. Arrested and jailed at Carthage, Ill., he was shot and killed by a mob on June 27, 1844. It is claimed that many of the symbols and ceremonies used by the Mormon Church are of Masonic origin. In Smith’s journal under the date of March 15, 1842 he said: “I officiated as Grand Chaplain at the installation of the Nauvoo Lodge of Freemasons at the Grove near the Temple. Grand Master Jonas, of Columbus, being present, a large number of people assembled for the occasion. The day was exceedingly fine; all things were done in order. In the evening I received the first degree in Freemasonry in Nauvoo Lodge, assembled in my general business office.” The following day he added: “I was with the Masonic Lodge and rose to the sublime degree.” Thus it was that Smith officiated as grand chaplain of the Grand Lodge of Illinois before he was a Mason. It also happened that Sidney Rigdon received his degrees “at sight” with Smith. This, plus the fact that in nearly five months that lodge initiated 256 candidates and raised 243, caused Bodley Lodge No. 1 to prefer charges against Nauvoo Lodge on July 15, 1842, asking the grand lodge to “make inquiry into the manner the officers of Nauvoo Lodge, U.D., were installed by the Grand Master of this State, and by what authority the Grand Master initiated, passed and raised Messers Smith and Rigdon to the degree of Entered Apprentice, Fellow Craft and Master, at one and the same time." A special committee visited Nauvoo, inspected the records and work and recommended that the lodge be permitted to resume labor. Then they did so much work that two more lodges were established in Nauvoo—Nye and Helm; Rising Sun Lodge at Montrose, Iowa, and a dispensation requested for still another at Keokuk, Iowa. Again the grand lodge ordered an investigation, and this time the committee was refused access to the minutes. The grand lodge then struck all the Mormon lodges from its rolls. However, the Mormon lodges refused to recognize this, and continued their work. On Friday, April 5, 1844 they dedicated the Masonic Hall at Nauvoo. In the History of the Church, Smith wrote that he attended the ceremonies; that about 550 Masons from various parts of the world were present and took part in a procession that was formed, accompanied by the Nauvoo brass band; that the ceremonies were in charge of Hyrum Smith, worshipful master; that the principal address of the occasion was delivered by Apostle Erastus Snow; and that he, Joseph Smith and Dr. Goforth also addressed the assembly; and that all visiting Masons were given dinner in the Masonic Hall at the expense of Nauvoo Lodge. If the above dedication is the same ceremony and date as the cornerstone laying, there is a discrepancy somewhere. Recently the Mormon Church purchased the old hall for restoration as an historic shrine. The cornerstone box was removed in 1954, and sent to Salt Lake City, where in the presence of President David O. McKay and the twelve apostles, it was opened; the original documents were retained in Utah, and photostatic copies returned, to be redeposited in two new boxes in the cornerstone at Nauvoo. This ceremony took place, June 24, 1954, being reported in the newspapers as “exactly 111 years after the first ceremony.” A document in the cornerstone states that Smith was not present in the procession or ceremony, as he was then being sought on an extradition warrant issued by “Governor Ford of Missouri” (Missouri never had a man named Ford as governor; Gov. Reynolds had recently died and Lt. Gov. Marmaduke had taken his place). Although Smith’s signature is among the 50 or more names of the prominent Mormons on the document, it was noted therein that it was added later. It also asked that “peace and harmony be restored and that the chain that holds mankind together and has done so since the dawn of mankind, be retained.” Both Joseph and his brother Hyrum were killed by a mob at the Carthage, Ill. jail on June 27, 1844.

Joseph B. Smith (?–1862) U.S. Naval officer. He was killed on board the Union ship Congress when it was attacked by the Merrimac on March 8, 1862. His father, Joseph Smith, q.v., a rear admiral then on the retired list, when he heard the Congress had surrendered, exclaimed, “Then Joe is dead.” The younger Smith was raised Jan. 24, 1852 in National Lodge No. 12 and was knighted in Washington Commandery No. 1, K.T., D.C., on March 5, 1853. d. March 8, 1862.

Joined the church when 16, and the following year traveled with a presiding elder as a “boy preacher.” When 23, he was placed in charge of the church organization in Maine, as a presiding elder. Helped draft the constitution of the general conference of 1813, which remained church law for several decades. At the conference of 1816 he was elected editor of the Methodist Magazine. In 1820 he was elected bishop, and declined, but accepted the office in 1824. In 1844, at the general conference held in New York, when Bishop James O. Andrew, who had become involved in the complications of the slavery question, was asked to desist. Soule sided with him, causing the church to split into Northern and Southern groups—a break unhealed for almost 100 years. He became the senior bishop of the Southern group. d. March 6, 1867 in Nashville, Tenn. Mason.

Pierre Soule (1801–1870) U.S. Senator from Louisiana, 1847 and 1849–53; U.S. Minister to Spain, 1853–55. b. Aug. 28, 1801 in Castillon, near Bordeaux, France. Attended a Jesuit College at Toulouse, but rebelled and quit after a year, going to an academy in Bordeaux. He took part in a plot against Louis XIV, was detected, and fled to the Pyrenees, where he worked as a shepherd for a year. Went to Paris, where he engaged in journalism, supporting the extreme liberal faction. He was imprisoned for publishing revolutionary articles in 1825, but escaped and made his way to England, Haiti, and then to the U.S. He first settled in Baltimore, Md. and later in New Orleans, La., where he studied law and began practice there. Was a member of the state senate in 1845 and elected to fill vacancy in U.S. Senate in 1847. He was elected the next year, but resigned to become U.S. minister to Spain, with instructions to attempt to settle the Cuban situation. In Spain, his son fought a duel with the Duke of Alva, and a resulting duel followed between the elder Soule and the French ambassador, Marquis de Turgot. Soule crippled de Turgot for life. While in the senate he favored secession, but when Louisiana eventually did secede, he had reversed himself, although he abided by his state's action. When New Orleans was captured, he was arrested and imprisoned in Fort Lafayette for several months. He later served on the staff of General Beauregard and was made brigadier general for special service. He moved to Havana, Cuba, but eventually returned to New Orleans. He was master of Polar Star Lodge No. 5 (L'Etoile Polaire) of New Orleans in 1833, and served as grand orator of the Grand Lodge of Louisiana. He was a Royal Arch Mason and 33° AASR (SJ). d. March 26, 1870.

Mary Sproule Said to be Canada’s only “woman Freemason.” It is told that in 1783, when 10,000 refugee Loyalists from the U.S. settled in New Brunswick, they did their best to pick up their old way of life. Many of the men, who were granted land around Sussex in the Kennebecasis River Valley, were Masons in the U.S. It was not long before they formed Zion Lodge at Sussex. Scattered over a 40–mile area, they traveled to meetings by horse in the summer and snowshoe in the winter. They had no hall but met in private homes, “on the first Monday after the full moon in the calendar month,” with each member taking a turn as host. Early in the 1800’s they met in the two–room log house of young James Sproule. As the first brethren arrived, Mary Sproule, James’ wife, picked up her candle and knitting and withdrew to the bedroom, which was separated from the main room by a curtain. It was not until the meeting was over and the candidate had been initiated, that the Rev. Oliver Arnold, Anglican rector of the parish, realized that Mrs. Sproule had been able to hear all that went on—that, in fact, she couldn’t help from hearing.

“You listened to the initiation ceremony,” he thundered at her. “I didn’t listen,” she said, “but you talked so loud. . . .” The old parson turned pale, for it was prescribed that no outsider could be allowed to live after learning the secrets of initiation. It was then determined that she should be sworn in as a Freemason, and she took the oath that made her the only woman member of the Order in Canadian history. She was never to hold office, nor even to attend another meeting, but the curious incident was eventually reported in newspapers around the world, and brought fame to the little lodge in the Kennebecasis Valley. When Mary Sproule died, a stone bearing the Masonic emblem was placed over her grave. As a footnote to the story, Ralph T. Pearson, of Sussex, a direct descendant of James and Mary Sproule was grand master of the Grand Lodge of New Brunswick in 1954.

Was wounded by shrapnel at San Juan Hill in Cuba. Arrived in Manila, Philippines, in May, 1899, where he was in charge of the surgery department of the First Reserve Hospital. Then detailed to the Malacanan Palace as surgeon to General Arthur MacArthur, q.v. He engaged in civil practice for a time, and shortly before WWII, moved to Baguio, a mountain resort 165 miles north of Manila. In 1942 his stay was interrupted by the Japanese, who imprisoned Stafford and his wife. Here he underwent, from the hands of the Japanese, innumerable tortures which left him sightless and deaf—and from which he never recovered. Dr. Stafford raised General Douglas MacArthur, q.v., to the third degree, and MacArthur later said of him, “He was the noblest Mason of them all.” Raised in Roome Lodge No. 746, N.Y.C., he was master in 1895 and 1898. He later dimitted to become charter member and first master of Manila Lodge No. 342 under Calif. (now Manila No. 1). Philip Dormer Stanhope (see 4th Earl of Chesterfield).

Augustus Poniatowski Stanislas, II (1732–1798) Last king of independent Poland, 1764–95. Son of Prince Stanislaw Poniatowski. Elected to the Diet in 1752. As a representative at the Russian court in 1755, he gained the favor of Catherine II, and through her influence was made king in 1764. He was well educated and well meaning, but without strength of character. The condition of the country became anarchic, and three partitions were carried out by Russia, Austria, and Prussia. Stanislas resigned in 1795, on the third partition, and was called to St. Petersburg, where he died. He was the protector of Freemasonry, and a member of the Warsaw Lodge “Under Three Helmets” in 1777. This lodge worked under the German system of “higher” grades, and the king was knighted, assuming the name Eques Salsinatus. Nearly all his courtiers, prominent statesmen, and many aristocrats were Masons, such as Prince Kasimir Sapieha, Prince Adam Chartorysky, Ignatius Potocky, and the Priest Piatoly. Masonic ideas of tolerance and benevolence influenced the policy of the Polish government and a number of charitable institutions were organized by Polish Masons.

Edward John Stanley (see earl of Derby).

Wykeham Stanley (see Lord Cornwallis, 2nd Baron).

Edwin M. Stanton (1814–1869) Attorney General of the U.S., 1860–61; Secretary of War, 1862–68, guiding the war department through the Civil War. b. Dec. 19, 1814 in Steubenville, Ohio. Admitted to the bar in 1836, and practiced at Cadiz, Ohio, returning to Steubenville in 1839. In 1848 he moved to Pittsburgh, Pa., and in 1857, to Washington, D.C. Served as attorney general under President Buchanan. Lincoln named him secretary of war, in which position he “masterminded” the Union forces, retiring General McClellan, and placing General Grant as commander-in-chief of the three armies. After Lincoln’s death, Stanton opposed President Johnson, and intrigued with congressional groups against him. He was suspended by Johnson in Aug., 1867, but restored by act of U.S. Senate in Jan., 1868. Was dismissed by Johnson, Feb. 21, 1868, but refused to leave the office. In this the senate supported him. This led to the impeachment charges against Johnson, and when these charges failed, Stanton resigned in May, 1868. President Grant appointed him associate justice of the supreme court, but he died Dec. 24, 1869, four days after he had been confirmed by the senate. He was a member of Steubenville Lodge No. 45, Steubenville, Ohio, and upon moving to Pittsburgh, Pa., became a member of Washington Lodge No. 253 of Pittsburgh on March 25, 1851 as a charter member. He resigned on Nov. 29, 1859. d. Dec. 24, 1869.

Johann August Von Starck (1741–1816) Closely connected with the history of German Freemasonry, especially with the Rite of Strict Observance. b. Oct. 29, 1741 at Schwerin. Studied at the U. of Gottingen. Made a Freemason in 1761 in a French military lodge. In 1763 he became a teacher in a public school at St. Petersburg, and it is thought that here he was adopted into the Rite of Melesine, then flourishing in the Russian capital. After two years in Russia, he went to England, and then to Paris in 1766. In 1767 he was director of schools at Wismar, where he was junior warden of the Lodge of the Three Lions. In 1770 he went to Konigsberg to occupy the chair of theology and to be court chaplain. The following year he resigned both offices and retired to Mettau to devote himself to literary and philosophical pursuits. He formed a schism from the Strict Observance, which he gave the name Clerks of Relaxed Observance. It consisted of seven degrees. Originally a Protestant, he had been secretly connected with Romanism while in Paris, and attempted to embody Roman Catholicism into his new system. In fact, he demanded that the candidate should be a Roman Catholic as a prerequisite to admission.

Other groups grew suspicious of his intentions and linked him with the Jesuits. His rite diminished in popularity, and he finally withdrew from Freemasonry and wrote several anti-Masonic works, including A Treatise on Secret Catholicism, on Proselyte Making, on Jesuitism and on Secret Societies. In this book he says “It is true that when the so-called Strict Observance was introduced into Masonry I belonged to it.. . . But I have withdrawn from all that, and all that is called Freemasonry for more than nine years.” Whatever his secret motives, he was an active member of the Masonic order and wrote many valuable Masonic works, including Apology for the Order of Freemasonry, 1778, and On the Design of the Order of Freemasonry, 1781. d. March 3, 1816.

Benjamin Stark (1820–1898) U.S. Senator from Oregon, 1861–62. b. June 26, 1820 in New Orleans, La. Engaged in mercantile pursuits in N.Y.C., studied law and moved to San Francisco, Calif., where he was in the mercantile business from 1849–50. He then moved to Portland, Oreg. and was admitted to the bar in 1850. Was a member of the territorial house of representatives in 1852; served in the Oregon Indian hostilities in 1853 as a colonel; was a member of the house of representatives in 1860. He later moved to New London, Conn. where he was active in political affairs, and served in the Connecticut legislature in 1874. Received the degrees in Loge Le Progres de l’Océanie, Honolulu, Hawaii, and later affiliated with Willamette Lodge No. 2, Portland, which he served as secretary and master. d. Oct. 10, 1898.

John Stark (1728–1822) Major General of American

Revolution and last surviving general officer of that war. b. Aug. 28, 1728 in Londonderry, N.H. Hunting and trapping in his early years, he was captured by the Indians, but ransomed for $103—remarking that he thought he was worth more than that. Joined the famous Rogers' Rangers as a lieutenant, and served through all the campaigns around Lake George and Lake Champlain. At the close of the Indian War, he retired to his farm at Derryfield, N.H. (now Manchester) until news of the Battle of Lexington reached him. He led several hundred neighbors to join the army at Cambridge. He was famous for his saying "Look yon, men! There are the red coats! Before the night they're ours or Molly Stark's a widow." His remark at the Battle of Bunker Hill, "Boys, aim at their waistbands," has become historical. He was in the Canadian expedition of 1776 and met with defeat. Next he was at Trenton and Princeton. Having been slighted in the promotion list, he resigned his commission and retired to his farm. Congress rebuked him, but he again entered the conflict as a brigadier general of N.H. militia, and his troops completely routed the British at the Battle of Bennington on Aug. 16, 1777. This led to the surrender of Burgoyne at Saratoga. For this victory, congress made him a brigadier general, Oct. 4, 1777. He commanded the Northern Department, and was a member of the court martial that condemned Major Andre of treason. At the end of the war he was breveted major general. He became a member of Masters Lodge No. 2 (later 5) at Albany, N.Y., Jan. 9, 1778. The minutes read, "The petition of Brigadier General John Starke being presented to the body, he was balloted for, met with the unanimous consent of the members present, and was initiated accordingly. Brig. Gen. John Starke paid 5 pounds for his initiation fee, 8 shillings to the Tyler, and 4 shillings for extra lodge." d. May 8, 1822.

distinguishing himself as a mathematician. His father was a Prussian Army officer, and at the age of 14 young Frederick served under him in the War of 1744, and was present at the siege of Prague. Entered army at age of 17, and served in the Seven Years' War. Was taken prisoner by Russians at capitulation of Colberg. In 1762 was made aide to Frederick the Great, q.v., and took part in the siege of Schweidnitz, which closed the Seven Years' War. From 1762–63, he was aide-de-camp to the king. Franklin recommended him to Washington, and in 1777 he came to America, reporting to Washington at Valley Forge, Feb. 23, 1778. He was designated inspector general of the Continental Army with the rank of major general, and given the task of training the troops. He reorganized and drilled the army with marked success. He was engaged at Monmouth and Yorktown, and became a trusted adviser to Washington. It is doubtful if the American cause would have succeeded without the aid of Steuben in organizing and training. He was one of those who sat on Andre's court martial. He desired a field command, but did not receive it until late in the war, when he commanded in the Virginia campaigns. Honorably discharged in 1784, he became a naturalized American citizen of Pennsylvania and New York, making his home in New York, where he received bounty lands near Utica. A generous man he never learned the value of the American dollar, and his former army associates kept him out of deep financial embarrassment only by closely supervising his funds. At Washington's inauguration he had a seat on the platform with the favored few, and soon after became the beneficiary of liberal retired pay from the new congress. He made frequent trips to New York City where he mingled with his brethren of the Masonic fraternity. It is not known where he received the degrees and earned the title of “past master,” but it is presumed to have been in Europe. E. A. Sherman states it was in the “Military Lodge of the Blazing Star” at Berlin. He was a member of Trinity Lodge No. 10 (now 12) of New York City and an honorary member of Holland Lodge No. 8, N.Y.C. On St. John’s Day, 1788, he dined with Holland Lodge, and addressed the “Veterans of the Royal Art” in French. In the minutes of Feb. 6, 1789, “Bro. Past Master von Steuben” was appointed a member of the committee to inform Washington of his election as an honorary member of the lodge. d. Nov. 28, 1794.

Joined Washington's Army in N.J. in 1777, and checked the attack of General Howe's forces at the Battle of Brandywine, where by holding the road until nightfall, he prevented a serious disaster. Served at Germantown, and was made a brigadier general. In Aug., 1780, he joined the army of General Horatio Gates with 700 Virginia militia, fighting in the Battle of Camden and at Guilford Courthouse. He was severely wounded in the latter. He served at the siege of Yorktown. From the adoption of the state constitution until 1790 he was in the Virginia senate. Gustav Stresemann (1878–1929) Chancellor of Germany in 1923 and Minister of Foreign Affairs, 1923–29, during the difficult years following WWI. He was a member of the Reichstag from 1907. He pursued a postwar conciliatory policy. He negotiated the Locarno Pact of mutual security with France, and secured Germany's admission to the League of Nations on an equal status with the other great nations. He sponsored Germany's adoption of the Dawes plan in 1924, and the Young plan in 1929. In 1926 he shared the Nobel Peace Prize with Aristide Briand. Twenty years before he became a Freemason, he published an article entitled "The Mason's Way and the Building of our Humanity." He was initiated in the Lodge, Friedrich der Grosse, in 1923, and was an honorary member of the Grand Lodge, Zu den 3 Weltkugeln. His speech before the League of Nations, seeking German admission, began: "The divine Architect of the earth has created humanity not as a conformed unity, but as people of different blood who express their souls in their own language. But the supreme will of the divine order is not to turn against each other, but to help each other to higher development." It is claimed that at the end of the speech he gave a Masonic sign by mistake. In his lifetime and even after his death the National Socialists claimed he had misused his membership in Freemasonry for political purposes. His efforts to cooperate in the unification of German Freemasonry were frustrated owing to the dismemberment into nine grand lodges. German Freemasons, now united in the United Grand Lodge of Germany, honor Stresemann's memory. His dream of unification was accomplished following WWII.

Emanuel Swedenborg (1688–1772) Swedish scientist, philosopher and religious writer. He distinguished himself at the siege of Fredericksburg in 1718 by inventing machines for carrying boats overland from Stromstadt to Iddefjord. Was ennobled by Queen Erika Eleonora in 1719, and took his seat in the House of Peers. He devoted himself to scientific research and published many volumes. He began having visions in 1743, and resigned his political positions to devote himself to spiritual research. He began a voluminous work on the interpretation of the Scriptures as the immediate voice of God. Although he never tried to preach, or to found a religious sect, his followers, the Swedenborgians, constitute a considerable society with a regular organization known as the Church of New Jerusalem or New Church. Many writers of many nations have attempted to connect him with Freemasonry, stating that the Swedenborg Rite of Freemasonry was in effect established by him. However, there is not the slightest foundation for such a theory, although the theosophists and Hermetic philosophers probably borrowed from his teachings in setting up the rite, which is said to be still practiced in some Swedish lodges. It consists of six degrees: Apprentice, Fellow Craft, Master Neophyte, Illuminated Theosophite, Blue Brother, and Red Brother.

Leo Taxil (1854–1907) Pen name of Gabriel Antoine Jogand-Pages, a literary rogue who was both anti-Catholic and anti-Masonic. He perpetrated one of the greatest hoaxes of his age in his creation of the mythical "Diana Vaughan." b. March 21, 1854 in Marseilles, France, he was educated in a reform school by the Jesuits and his life there caused him to develop a great antagonism to the Roman Catholic Church. In Paris, he began to write against religion in 1879. He accused the clergy of fantastic acts. He was fined for his book, Private Love Affairs of Pius IX, because of the obscene material it contained. He organized a group of "freethinkers" and edited the Anti-Clerical. In 1881, in spite of some objections, he was initiated into the Lodge Le Temple de L'Honneur Francis. Before he could receive the other degrees, he was expelled for some wrongdoing. His hate now turned against Freemasonry and, on April 23, 1885, he solemnly adjured his errors and did penance under the form of a prolonged monastic retreat. It was at this time (April 20, 1884) that Pope Leo XIII, q.v., had denounced Freemasonry to ecclesiastical dignitaries as a tool of the devil. Shrewdly, Taxil began writing a number of anti-Masonic books, including Complete Revelations Upon Freemasonry and The Brothers of Three Points, the latter published in 1886. Echoing the official church pronouncements, he described the ceremonies of Masonry as being presided over by Lucifer himself, and on his admission to the first degree the candidate was required to plunge a knife into the breast of a sheep which had been shaved. Being blindfolded, the candidate was told that it was a man who had been a traitor to the Craft. Thus, claimed Taxil, all Freemasons were murderers in spirit, if not in fact. The church applauded his splendid efforts on their behalf and he received private audiences with the Pope, fraternized with the high prelates and was honored by Roman Catholics wherever he went. In April, 1895, he dedicated his work, The Devil and the Revolution, to the Pope. He now brought upon the scene his great hoax, one Miss Diana Vaughan, who from 1895 to 1897 was credited with publishing the recollections of a converted satanist. She claimed that she was an American and that her father had founded a sacrilegious body of a thousand members at Louisville, Ky. and that he had instructed Diana in satanism. She took part in the shameless travesties of the services, and said that Albert Pike, q.v., who knew her to be a "grand priestess," greeted her with profound respect. Through Taxil she even carried on correspondence with Cardinal Parocchi and the Pope's intimate secretary. The church held a grand anti-Masonic congress at Trente on Sept. 26–Oct. 1, 1896, and the Roman Catholic world held its breath in hopes that Taxil would reveal the whereabouts of Diana. She was, he claimed, hidden in a convent. When a German priest rose to ask some particular questions, Taxil silenced him by saying: “You are too curious, dear Sir. The dagger of the Freemasons is lifted at all hours above Diana Vaughan. Let, us be silent then, lest we put the saint in peril.” The Abbe Bessonies solemnly declared that in doubting the existence of Diana a Catholic would then commit an offense against the anti-Masonic cause. Seven months later, however, Taxil made a public appearance in the hall of the Geographical Society at Paris (April 17, 1897), where he shame- lessly declared that he had erected a series of gigantic hoaxes. Addressing himself to the ecclesiastics present, he said with scorn: “My Reverend Fathers, I sincerely thank my colleagues, the Roman Catholic press and our Lords, the Bishops, of having so excellently assisted me to construct a work, the finest and greatest of all my trickeries!” Taxil escaped the meeting under protection of the police.

Jan. 18, 1874 in Lyons, N.Y. Graduate (law) of Cornell U. in 1894. A corporation lawyer, he was with U.S. Steel for more than 30 years. Was chairman of finance committee, 1927–34, and chairman of board and chief executive officer, 1932–38. Participated in many national and international civic and relief movements, and was in quasi-governmental service for many years, starting with the Hoover administration's efforts to halt the depression. He was virtually unknown when, in 1927, he took the post of chairman of U.S. Steel's finance committee and proceeded to wipe out the firm's 340 million dollar funded debt by issuing common stock. It was his assignment to the Vatican, with its resultant controversy, which gained him the widest attention. He was a member of Humanity Lodge No. 406, Lyons, N.Y., from Oct. 13, 1897, and received the 50-year grand lodge medal from the Grand Lodge of New York. d. May 6, 1959.

Robert L. Taylor (1850–1912) Governor of Tennessee, 1887–91 and 1897–99; U.S. Congressman to 46th Congress, 1879–81, and U.S. Senator, 1907–12. b. July 31, 1850 in Happy Valley, Tenn., he was a brother of Alfred A. Taylor, q.v., who was also governor of Tennessee and a U.S. congressman. Robert was a life-long Democrat and Alfred a firm Republican. At one time they campaigned against each other for the governorship in 1886, Robert winning. Both were popular in the state and in this election, known as the "War of Roses." Bob wore a red rose, and Alf a white one, throughout the campaign. Near its close, Bob, in commenting upon the mutual friendliness and absence of political rancor in the campaign, recounted his long and pleasant associations with his brother and finished by saying they had played together as children, slept together, worked and hunted together, and that he loved his brother dearly, but politically he despised him! He engaged in making bar iron and in tobacco raising; studied law in Jonesboro, Term. and was admitted to the bar in 1878, practicing in Elizabethton and then Jonesboro. After his first term as governor, he resumed law practice in Chattanooga. He died in office as U.S. Senator. A member of Dashiell Lodge No. 238, Elizabethton, Term., he was a member of Cumberland Chapter No. 1, R.A.M. of Nashville, and Knight Templar and 32° AASR (SJ). d. March 31, 1912.

Served in both branches of state legislature. Mason. d. March 28, 1926.

William M. Taylor (1817–1871) Texas pioneer and “father of the Texas work” used by the Grand Lodge of Texas. b. April 17, 1817 in Fairfield Co., Ohio. Graduate of Miami U., Oxford, Ohio, in 1839. Moved to Republic of Texas in Aug., 1843, first locating in Brazoria Co., where he was admitted to the bar in 1844. Lived in Houston from fall of 1844 until 1849, when he moved to Huntsville. He was a partner of Henderson Yoakum, author of the History of Texas. Served in state senate, 1854–58; was district judge from 1862, until removal from office by military government following downfall of the Confederacy. During Civil War was appointed brigadier general, and recruited a brigade for service, but never saw actual military service. Was a delegate to the reconstruction convention of 1866. Married Isabella A. Moore, a niece of General Sam Houston, q.v., in 1850. A member of Holland Lodge No. 1, Houston, he received his degrees, March 17, April 17, May 22, 1845. Was grand master of the Grand Lodge of Texas in 1854. Was exalted in Houston Chapter No. 8, R.A.M. of the old Grand Chapter of the Republic of Texas, and later healed in Washington Chapter No. 2 of Houston. Was grand high priest of Texas in 1853. Knighted in Ruthven Commandery No. 2, K.T., Houston in 1849, he presided over the conventions organizing the Grand Commandery, K.T. of Texas in Jan., 1854, serving as grand commander in 1856. He also presided over the convention organizing the Grand Council, R. & S.M., of Texas in June, 1856, and was grand master in 1857. Was chairman of the committee on work of the grand lodge from its formation in 1853 until his death, and "Taylor's Work" is the esoteric work of Texas lodges even until today. In 1849 "Taylor's Monitor" was published as the official Texas monitor and continued in use until the adoption of Lightfoot's Manual in 1934. He died Sept. 23, 1871 in Baltimore, Md., where he was attending the Grand Encampment, K.T., as a delegate, and also the General Convention of the Protestant Episcopal "Church. On Sept. 24 he was buried there with Masonic rites by Fidelity Lodge of that city with Grand Master John H. B. Latrobe, q.v., presiding.

Zachary Taylor (1784–1850) Twelfth president of the United States. b. in Orange Co., Va., he entered the Army as a first lieutenant in 1808. After years of Indian fighting and routine frontier duty, he took command of the Army in Texas (1845), defeated the Mexicans at Palo Alto and Resaca de la Palma, and occupied Matamoros on May 18, 1846. He was breveted major general and made commander of the army of the Rio Grande. He defeated Santa Anna at Buena Vista in Feb., 1847, ending the war in the Northern part of Mexico. He was definitely not a Mason, saying so himself soon after his inauguration as president, when the direct question was asked of him. He stated that he had always entertained a favorable opinion of the institution; that many of his personal friends and officers of the Army with whom he had been associated were Masons, and that he should have probably been one himself, had not so much of his time been occupied in camp duties, or had he been more favorably circumstanced to avail himself of the opportunity of joining a lodge, and added "I would do so now, but have got to be too old." Rob Morris, q.v., who knew him personally, said he was not a Mason. However, there were many Freemasons in lodges throughout the country who believed him to be a member. Zachary Taylor Lodge No. 166, Kiddville, Ky., was named after him under this misconception. The history of Marsh Lodge No. 188, N.Y., refers to him as a "brother." On Aug. 2, 1850 the two lodges of Portland, Maine, joined in funeral ceremonies for him. Santa Rosa Lodge No. 16, Milton, Fla., passed a set of resolutions on "the death of Brother Taylor." The Grand Lodge of New York and many of its subordinate lodges participated in the military and civic funeral honors in N.Y. on July 23, 1850, 450 brethren turning out. At Troy, N.Y., on July 31, 1850 King Solomon's Primitive Lodge held a Masonic service for "brother Zachary Taylor." The nearest Taylor came to a Masonic ceremony was probably at the Masonic cornerstone laying of the equestrian statue of George Washington at Richmond, Va., Feb. 22, 1850, by the Grand Lodge of Virginia.

Henry Tazewell (1753–1799) U.S. Senator from Virginia, 1794–99. b. Nov. 15, 1753 in Brunswick Co., Va. A graduate of William and Mary Coll. in 1772, he studied law and began practice in 1773. Was a member of the provincial house of burgesses in 1775 and a delegate to the state constitutional convention of 1775–76. Was judge of state supreme court, 1785–93, and chief justice from 1789–93. He was the father of Littleton W. Tazewell, q.v., who was also U.S. Senator from Va. and governor of the state. A member of Williamsburg Lodge No. 6, Williamsburg, Va., he received his degrees, Feb. 7, April 2, and May 28, 1774. He seems to have been “admitted” again on Aug. 4, 1778. The original records of the lodge are in the Library of Congress. d. Jan. 24, 1799.

Littleton W. Tazewell (1774–1860) Governor of Virginia, 1834–36; U.S. Congressman, 6th Congress, 1800–10, and U.S. Senator, 1824–32. b. Dec. 17, 1774 in Williamsburg, Va., the son of Henry Tazewell, q.v., who was also U.S. Senator. Graduate of William and Mary Coll. in 1792, he studied law and was admitted to the bar in 1796. He was elected to congress to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of John Marshall. He was one of the commissioners of claims under the treaty with Spain ceding Florida in 1820. He declined an appointment as U.S. minister to Great Britain. A member of Naphtali Lodge No. 56, Norfolk, Va., he represented his lodge at the grand lodge meeting in 1837, and became junior grand warden of the Grand Lodge of Virginia. d. May 6, 1860.

Tecumseh (1768?–1813) American Indian; Chief of Shawnee tribe. He joined with his brother, Tenskwatawa, in an effort to unite the Western Indians against the whites. During his temporary absence his brother was maneuvered into battle with the Americans under William H. Harrison, q.v., and was utterly defeated at Tippecanoe on Nov. 7, 1811. He then threw his lot with the British in the War of 1812 and was killed in action at the Battle of the Thames, Oct. 5, 1813. Many have claimed that he was “made a Mason while in Philadelphia on a visit.” The Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania says there is no record of this. Tecumseh Lodge of New York was named for him. Sadowski has found where another Indian by the name of Tecumseh (a Chippewa, not Shawnee) was initiated Feb. 22, 1851, in Valley Lodge No. 109 at Rochester, N.Y. He and his family were traveling and giving exhibitions of Indian customs. Both he and his brother, Peewauk, were initiated. They were the sons of Maungdwais, who is also said to have been a Mason.

James Thomson (1700–1748) Scottish poet. He went to London in 1725 as tutor to Thomas Hamilton, who became the 7th Earl of Haddington. Was introduced to Pope, Arbuthnot and Gay. He published the blank-verse poems Winter, Summer, Spring; Autumn and then brought them together as The Seasons (1726–30). This was the first time that description of nature had been given the leading place and it paved the way for the emotional treatment of nature by the romantic poets. He was author of the dramas Sophonisba, Agamemnon, and Edward and Eleanora. Pensioned in 1738 by the Prince of Wales after dedicating his poem, Liberty, to the prince. He joined David Mallet in writing The Masque of Alfred in 1740, which contained the song Rule Britannia, with music by T. A. Arne. In 1745 he produced Tancred and Sigismunda., the most successful of his dramas. His allegorical poem, The Castle of Indolence (1748) is generally considered to be his masterpiece. He was initiated at a lodge held at Old Man's Coffee House, Charing Cross Road, London in 1737. He is also recorded as a member of Caledonian Lodge, Scotland. On June 24, 1819, Kelso Lodge, with deputations from other adjacent lodges, laid the foundation stone of a monument to be erected to the memory of Thomson at Fernyhill, in the parish of Ednam, Scotland.

Matthew McBlain Thomson Masonic charlatan. b. in Ayr, Scotland, he was a paperhanger, painter, and saloon-keeper. In the early 1870's he became a member of a clandestine body and was active in the propagation of spurious Masonry, and, while a member, succeeded in visiting a lodge in Ayr under the jurisdiction of the Grand Lodge of Scotland. For this, the lodge's charter was taken up. Later, Thomson was given permission to apply for membership in a regular lodge. He then joined Newton-on-Ayr St. James No. 125, and later affiliated with Patna Bonnie Doon No. 565. In 1881 he came to America as a convert to the Mormon Church, and settled at Montpelier, Idaho, where he pursued his vocation of painting and paper-hanging. He returned to Scotland under strange conditions, but was back in Montpelier in 1898, bringing with him a dimit from a Scottish lodge and a patent from the "Scottish Grand Council of Rites.” He then built up his “American Masonic Federation” which later became more expansive under the title of “International Masonic Federation.” He then began to sell degrees of all types, from Blue Lodge to Shrine. In Scotland, one Robert Jamieson of Kilmarnock signed documents, diplomas and charters which proved the “validity” of Thomson’s claims. He obtained his followers by solicitation among the humbler classes and sent out paid organizers to peddle the degrees and issue certificates. Reduced rates were offered to those who would get a number of friends to join. Thomson and two others were finally brought to trial in a Federal court and convicted of using the mails to defraud, sentenced to two years, and fined $5,000each. Sentence was pronounced May 15, 1922.

York City, July 22, 1907. I received the 32° of the Consistory in New York, July 10, 1910. I sometimes think that the traveling Masons have more opportunities of being both proud and glad of the social distinction designated by the square and compass than those who remain home most of the time. This is certainly true of a public entertainer, and especially of a magician. I see now on the walls of my den, about a score of Masonic emblems, fezzes, banners, Shrine pins, canes, ribbons—from baskets of flowers, parchments of honorary membership, etc., all telling me again of the many kindly acts of brother Masons during my annual tours. What a wonderful thing for a stranger to be able to meet the best men of the community as a brother and friend!” He was also a member of Mecca Shrine Temple, N.Y.C. d. 1936.

Served with army in the Caucasus and in Crimean War of 1854–56, commanding a battery at Sevastopol in 1855. He then retired to devote himself to study and writing. He emancipated the serfs on his country estate of Yasnaya Polyana. After 1876 he underwent a spiritual transformation which led him to renounce the Russian Orthodox Church and evolve a new Christianity whose central creed was non-resistance to evil. “Tolstoyism” became an organized sect about 1884. Although his greatest work was War and Peace, published in 1866, he wrote many other novels and plays including: Childhood, The Cossacks; Two Hussars; Three Deaths; Anna Karenina; A Confession; The Death of Ivan Ilyich; and others. Many have thought him to have been a Freemason, for in his War and Peace he describes a Masonic initiation with great accuracy, and several of his characters are mentioned as being Freemasons. However, he was born at a time when Freemasonry was forbidden and extinct in Russia and when it returned, he was too old and feeble to attend a meeting and never left his estate. d. Nov. 8, 1910.

Daniel D. Tompkins (1774–1825) Sixth Vice President of the United States, 1817–25. b. June 21, 1774 in Fox Meadows (now Scarsdale), N.Y. His father was a farmer. Graduate of Columbia U. in 1795, studied law, and admitted to the bar in N.Y.C. in 1797. Was elected U.S. congressman, but resigned before taking seat in order to become associate justice of the supreme court of N.Y. in 1804. He served on the bench until 1807, when he resigned to become governor of New York from 1807–17, a term of ten years. Before resigning the governorship and entering the office of vice president, he sent a message to the legislature on Jan. 28, 1817, recommending that a day be fixed for the abolition of slavery within the bounds of the state. The assembly acted, setting the date as July 4, 1827. He served two terms as vice president (1817–25), and while holding that office was elected twice as grand master of the Grand Lodge of New York (1820–21). He was made a Mason in Hiram Lodge No. 72, Mt. Pleasant, Westchester Co., N.Y. on Feb. 3, 1800. This lodge did not long survive and on Oct. 7, 1802 he was “admitted” a member of Salem Lodge No. 74, Salem, Westchester Co., N.Y. He had been a Mason only four months, when, on June 4, 1800 he was elected deputy grand secretary of the grand lodge. He served in this capacity until June 15, 1801. On June 25, 1801, he became grand secretary and held this office until June 13, 1805. He is known to have been a Royal Arch Mason and Knight Templar. In 1824 he was made an honorary member of Morton Commandery No. 4, K.T. of N.Y.C. In his first election as grand master on June 2, 1819, his opponent was DeWitt Clinton, q.v., who had succeeded him, and was then governor of New York. Although he was not able to be present at all the grand lodge meetings, he did attend on July 5 and Sept. 12, 1820; March 14 and June 9, 1821 and June 5, 1822. On June 6, 1822, he declined another term as grand master. On June 11, 1822 the grand lodge passed the following resolution: "Resolved, unanimously, that the thanks of this Grand Lodge be presented to the R.W. Daniel D. Tompkins, for the services rendered by him to the fraternity, in officiating as their presiding officer for the last two years." Tompkins received the 32° AASR on Nov. 8, 1808 at the hands of John G. Tardy 33°. On Aug. 5, 1813 he received the 33° at the hands of a provisional supreme council and was immediately elected sovereign grand commander of the newly formed Supreme Council, Northern Jurisdiction. He was grand commander up to the time of his death in 1825. On Nov. 8, 1820 he attended a meeting of Independent Royal Arch Lodge No. 2, N.Y.C. and the same evening was initiated into the "Mystery of the Union" or "Union Degree" at a meeting of the grand officers of the Grand Lodge of New York and masters of lodges in N.Y.C. On April 2, 1821 he is recorded as a visitor to Hiram Lodge No. 449. He was present at the grand lodge sessions on June 5, 1823, the year after he relinquished the grandmastership.

When General Lafayette visited America in 1824, Tompkins, as vice president, entertained the French Freemason at his residence in Staten Island, N.Y. on Sept. 15–16. The apron he wore while grand master is now in possession of that grand lodge. The grand lodge also possess another historic relic identified with Tompkins. When the affairs of the old United States Bank at Washington, D.C. were wound up, a small gold trowel used by Benjamin Franklin in his lodge, was found in the safe. Tompkins presented it to Franklin Lodge No. 447, N.Y.C. and the lodge later presented it to the grand lodge. d. June 11, 1825.

In the AASR (SJ) he received KCCH on May 8, 1872, honorary 33° on May 7, 1874 and was made active member of the Southern Supreme Council. Became emeritus inspector general on Oct. 19, 1880. d. Dec. 15, 1885.

Thomas Topham English strongman of the 18th century. About 1730, the attention of Dr. Desaguliers, q.v., was attracted to the strength of Topham, who kept the “Red Lion” public house near the old St. Luke Hospital of London. Desaguliers saw Topham brace his feet against the remnant of a stone wall, and holding the traces in his hands, outpull a horse on the other side. Later he outpulled two horses and Desaguliers was so impressed that he ventured Topham could do the same with four horses! Although mighty of muscle, Topham was meek as a lamb and a perfect slave at home. His strength was no match for his wife’s tongue and she finally drove him from home. At this time, his friend Desaguliers placed him in another public house at the Hermitage, identified by the “Sign of the Ship” and after making him a Freemason, established a lodge at his pub as a means of increasing business. Desaguliers was master, and it attracted many respectable members. In honor of Topham it was called The Strong Man Lodge No. 68, and the identifying sign on the pub was Topham with his feet braced on a wall, matching his strength against a horse. The lodge was established about 1734 and was carried on the rolls for a number of years.

In WWI he served from first lieutenant to major with Battery F, and later Battery D, of the 129th Field Artillery, 35th Division, participating in the Vosges operations, St. Mihiel and Meuse–Argonne offensives of the A.E.F. He was discharged as a major in May, 1919. Since 1927 he has been a colonel of Field Artillery in the reserves. Following the war he was a judge of the Jackson Co. Court (1922–24), and presiding judge, 1926–34. He was elected U.S. senator from Missouri in 1934, and reelected in 1940. In the senate he distinguished himself as chairman of a special committee to investigate the national defense program. On Nov. 7, 1944 he was elected vice president of the United States on the ticket with Franklin D. Roosevelt, q.v., taking office on Jan. 20, 1945. On the death of Roosevelt, he succeeded him to the presidency on April 12, 1945. He was elected president in 1948, and served the term of 1949–53. Thus, he served two terms in that office, less approximately three months. He is the author of Years of Decisions, Vol. I in 1955, and the companion volume, Years of Trial and Hope, Vol. II, 1956. Truman petitioned Belton Lodge No. 450, Grandview, Mo. on Dec. 21, 1908 when 24 years old. He was elected on Feb. 9, 1909, and received his first degree that evening. He was passed March 9, and raised March 18, 1909. The following year he accepted the station of junior warden, but in 1911, several members of Belton Lodge separated to establish a new lodge—Grandview Lodge No.

618, and Truman was honored by being made the first master. Later, he served as secretary of the lodge, and in 1917, when leaving for WWI, he was again master of the lodge. After the war he was appointed district deputy grand lecturer, and district deputy grand master of the 59th Masonic district. He remained in these stations from 1925 until his appointment in the grand lodge line in 1930. In that year he became grand pursuivant through the appointment of Grand Master William R. Gentry of St. Louis. In Sept., 1940 when the grand lodge met, Truman was running for U.S. senator and the political situation was heated. Notwithstanding, he was elected grand master, and a few weeks later, U.S. senator. During his year as grand master, Congress was in session most of the time, yet he found time to make individual visits to 19 Mo. lodges; six district associations; both conferences of district deputies; presented several 50-year buttons; visited the grand lodges of Texas and District of Columbia; attended an anniversary gathering of Philadelphia Lodge, and in Jefferson City attended a Masonic dinner at which Gov. Forrest C. Donnell, grand senior warden, was present and 128 lodges were represented by 394 Master Masons, including 80 members of the Missouri legislature. Representing Mo. at the Washington conference of Grand Masters in Feb., 1941, he presented Missouri's check for $1,900 to the Washington Memorial at Alexandria. It was also during his year that the Missouri Lodge of Research was established and both the dispensation and charter were signed by him. Long interested in the research lodge, he served as its master in 1950, while president of the United States. In this capacity he secured the offices of the Library of Congress, and furnished the research lodge with copies of the vast amount of reference cards on Freemasonry that are on file in that institution. He again aided the Missouri Lodge of Research by writing the foreword for Volume I of 10,000 Famous Freemasons, published in 1957. While president, he was never too busy to go out of his way to render a Masonic service. During this period he raised more than 30 candidates with the strict injunction that no publicity was to come from his participation. His capitular degrees were received in Orient Chapter No. 102 of Kansas City on Nov. 11 and 15, 1919; the cryptic degrees in Shekinah Council No. 24, Kansas City on Dec. 18, 1919; the orders of knighthood in Palestine Commandery No. 17 of Independence on June 7 and 15, 1923. His Scottish Rite degrees were received in Kansas City, Jan. 24, March 27, 30 and 31, 1917. On Oct. 19, 1945, he received the 33° (SJ) at Washington, D.C. while president. Became a member of Ararat Shrine Temple, Kansas City, April 2, 1917. He was orator of that body in 1932, marshal in 1933, and second ceremonial master in 1934. Became member of Royal Order of Jesters, Kansas City Court No. 54 on Dec. 18, 1931. He is also a member of Mary Conclave, Red Cross of Constantine, Kansas City. He is the grand representative of the Grand Lodge of Scotland near the Grand Lodge of Missouri. Mrs. Truman, the former Bess Wallace, is the daughter of David W. Wallace, who was grand commander of the Grand Commandery, K.T. of Missouri in 1892. His sister, Mary Jane Truman, is past grand matron of the Order of Eastern Star of Missouri.

John H. Trumbull Governor of Connecticut, 1925–31. b. March 4, 1873 in Ashford, Conn. Began manufacturing electric machinery in 1899. Was an organizer of the Trumbull Electric Mfg. Co. and president of same from 1900–45. Director of other companies. Served two terms in state senate and was elected lieutenant governor in 1924. He was raised March 31, 1903 in Frederick Lodge No. 14, Plainville, Conn. and was master of same in 1909. Member of both York and Scottish Rites; he belongs to the Tall Cedars of Lebanon, and is past potentate of Sphinx Shrine Temple of Hartford. In 1944 he raised his son-in-law, John Coolidge (son of President Coolidge) in Wyllys Lodge No. 99, West Hartford, Conn.

William T. Truxtun (1824–1887) Commodore, U.S. Navy. b. March 11, 1824 in Philadelphia. Entered Navy as a midshipman in 1841. Attended the Naval Academy for one year and was graduated as a “passed midshipman” in 1847. Served first on the Brazil station and later the Pacific station. Was on special service in connection with the laying of the trans-Atlantic cable, and in 1854, with the Strain expedition to survey a route for a ship-canal across the Isthmus of Darien. Served in North Atlantic squadron in Civil War. Commanded the steamers Alabama, Chocura, and Tacony. Participated in engagements in sounds of N. Car. and the capture of Plymouth, N. Car. and attacks on Fort Fisher. Promoted to commander in 1866, captain in 1873, and commodore in 1882. He was promoted to rear admiral by seniority in 1886, but action on his nomination was delayed, and he was retired by law as a commodore on March 11, 1886. Member of Owen’s Lodge No. 164, near Norfolk, Va. d. Feb. 25, 1887.

Oscar Tschirky (1866–1950) Famous chef known as “Oscar of the Waldorf.” b. Sept. 28, 1866 in canton of Neuchtel, Switzerland. He came to the U.S. in 1883 and was naturalized in 1888. He began with the old Hoffman House, N.Y.C. and was later with Delmonico’s. When the Waldorf–Astoria opened in 1893, he became chef, and thus began an association that was not only to make him famous, but the hotel as well. It is said that he knew more people from all over the world than any other person in America. He was the owner of a model 1,000 acre farm near New Paltz, N.Y. He had received royal decorations from Belgium, Rumania, and France. Was a member of Metropolitan Lodge No. 273, N.Y.C. d. Nov. 6, 1950.

Louis Theodore Tschoudy (1720–1769) French Counselor of State and member of the Parliament of Metz who wrote much on Freemasonry and against its detractors. b. in Metz. He was descended from a family originally of the Swiss canton of Glaris. He was an active apostle of the school of Ramsay, q.v., adopting the theory of the Templar origin of Freemasonry. In 1752 he angered the Papal court by the publication at The Hague of A New Year’s Gift for the Pope, or the Free Masons Avenged. It was a caustic commentary on the Bull of Benedict XIV, excommunicating Freemasons. He followed it in the same year by The Vatican Avenged, an ironical apology intended as a sequence to the former book. The two works subjected him to such persecution by the church that he was compelled to flee to Russia. On his return to France, he was imprisoned in the Bastille, but Grand Duke Peter of Russia was successful in securing his liberty. He also wrote The Blazing Star, or the Society of Freemasons Considered

Under Every Point of View; Scottish Knight of Saint Andrew, Containing the Entire Development of the Royal Arch of Freemasonry. It was his opinion that the so-called advanced degrees of Freemasonry were a waste of time and merely an expense to the candidate. He did concede that in addition to the three basic degrees, the Scottish Knight of Saint Andrew (which he composed) and Knight of Palestine contained the essence of Freemasonry. d. May 28, 1769.

William M. Tuck Governor of Virginia, 1946–50; U.S. Congressman to 83rd–86th Congresses from 5th Va. dist. b. Sept 28, 1896 in Halifax Co., Va. Graduate of Washington and Lee U. in 1921. Nathaniel Beverley Tucker (1784–1851) Jurist, Author, and second Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of Missouri. b. Sept. 6, 1784 in Williamsburg, Va., of a distinguished family. Graduate of William and Mary Coll. in 1801, studied law, and practiced in Va. until 1815 when he moved to Missouri, where he was a circuit judge for St. Louis Co. He later resided in Saline Co., where he acquired more than 800 acres of land, and married a daughter of General Thomas A. Smith. In St. Louis he served as Federal judge of the Northern district of Mo., was on the board of directors of the Bank of St. Louis, and was one of the organizers of the Grand Lodge of Missouri. Returning to Va., he was elected professor of law at William and Mary and filled that post until his death. His most remarkable work was The Partisan Leader; a Tale of the Future. Published in 1836 in two volumes, it was printed secretly, bearing the fictitious date of "1856," and purported to be an historical novel of the events between 1836 and 1856. Its accurate delineation of events is quite prophetic. Other works include George Balcombe, a novel, in 1836, and several political and legal volumes. He was second grand master of the Grand Lodge of Missouri from 1921–24. While living in central Mo. he was summoned by the Presbyterian Church to appear at the schoolhouse at Boonville on Oct. 22, 1831 at 10:00 a.m. to answer the charge of "Unchristian Conduct in the following acts. 1stly That at a party in the house of Mr. Shackelford of Saline Co. on or about Dec. 25, 1830, you partook of the amusement of dancing. 2ndly—that at a party at the house of Dr. Sappington soon afterwards you again danced. 3rdly—That at the wedding of C. F. Jackson and Miss Sappington at the house of Dr. Sappington on the 17th of February, 1831, a time when you were apprised that such conduct was disapproved by the officers of the church, you again danced.” Witnesses to the charges were C. F. Jackson (Confederate governor of Mo.), Dr. Sappington, Dr. Penn and the Rev. Justinian Williams (one time grand chaplain of the Grand Lodge of Missouri). It is not known whether any action was taken—or if Tucker ever appeared at Boonville, but when he moved to Virginia, he became an Episcopalian! He had received his degrees in Virginia, but became a charter member of Missouri Lodge No. 1. He was the second son of St. George Tucker, q.v. d. Aug. 26, 1851.

Samuel Tucker (1747–1833) American Naval Commodore in Revolutionary War. b. Nov. 1, 1747 in Marblehead, Mass. Ran away at age of 11 and shipped in the English sloop Royal George. Finished a law course, and began to practice in the colonial courts. In June 1775 he went to Bermuda, but returned to Va. in Jan. 1777 to serve as a lieutenant colonel at the siege of Yorktown. In 1778 he married Frances Bland, mother of John Randolph, q.v. After the war he resumed the practice of law, and was made a judge of the general court of Va. in 1787, and a professor of law in the College of William and Mary in 1789. Was appointed presiding judge of the Va. court of appeals in 1804, and Federal judge of the U.S. district of Va. in 1813. He wrote many poems and satires. His son, Nathaniel B. Tucker, q.v., became the second grand master of the Grand Lodge of Missouri, and later returned to Va. where he took his father's chair of professor of law at William and Mary. St. George Tucker signed the by-laws of Williamsburg Lodge No. 6, Williamsburg, Va. on July 6, 1773. On Sept. 7 and Oct. 5, same year, he was fined one shilling and three pence for absence. On Dec. 10, 1773, he received the third degree. The original minutes of the above are in the Library of Congress. d. Nov. 10, 1828.

Paul J. S. Vogel (1753–?) German Masonic writer. Published Letters Concerning Freemasonry in 1785 at Nuremberg, in three volumes. The first treated the Knights Templar; the second of the Ancient Mysteries, and third of Freemasonry. It was the earliest attempt made in Germany to trace the Craft from the operatives or stonemasons of the Middle Ages. The research in recent years indicates that his approach was the most logical in Freemasonry's family tree. He was a professor of theology.

Theodore Vogel. German industrialist and first Grand Master of the United Grand Lodge of Germany, 1949–55. b. July 31, 1901 in Schweinfurt, Bavaria. Attended the universities at Frankfurt and Wurzburg, receiving his first degree in 1925, and his doctorate in engineering in 1933 at Darmstadt. He was an engineer and later chief engineer in Nurnberg and Schweinfurt in a factory for steel constructions. Because of Nazi persecution, he was forced to retire from his positions and took up work as a private consulting engineer. In 1945 he returned to Schweinfurt and is now the owner of two factories for steel doors and windows (in Schweinfurt and Sontra).

Active in civic and public affairs, he served as vice president of the Wurzburg chamber of commerce and was president of the Union of Bavarian Industries. Member of various boards of directors in Berlin, Schweinfurt, etc. Became a Mason at same time as his father in 1927 in the lodge Brudertreue ant Main No. 422 at Schweinfurt, and served the lodge as chaplain until 1933 when Hitler forbade Masonic activity. After the war, when the American service men assisted in the reconstitution of German Freemasonry, he became master of the lodge, and was elected district deputy grand master for Bavaria in 1947. At the founding of the United Grand Lodge of Germany in St. Paul's Cathedral in Frankfurt, he was unanimously elected grand master, serving in the difficult times when Freemasonry was gradually rebuilt. A successor was elected grand master in 1955, but soon died, and Vogel was again reelected in 1956. He became one of the first Royal Arch Masons in Germany, having the degrees communicated to him in the U.S. Became a member of Living Arch Chapter No. 1 of Frankfurt, Europe Council, R. & S.M., and Hermann von Salza Commandery, K.T. He served as the first grand high priest of the Grand Chapter, R.A.M. of Germany for two years. Is one of the founders of the Order of High Priesthood in Germany. Is a member of the German Supreme Council of the Scottish Rite and a 33° since 1949. Is a frequent visitor to the annual Conference of Grand Masters in the U.S.

Voltaire (1694–1778) Full name was Francois Marie Arouet de Voltaire. French writer and philosopher. He gained fame as the defender of victims of religious intolerance and as a master of satire. This won him the condemnation of the established church, who labeled him an “atheist,” and who still ban his books until this day. He was educated under the Jesuits and began writing at an early age. He was confined to the Bastille in 1717–18 and again in 1726, but made good use of his time by writing. Banished to England, he wrote his observations on English social and political institutions, which caused such an uproar that he was forced to seek seclusion in Lorraine from 1734–49. In 1750 he accepted an invitation to visit Frederick the Great, q.v., at the Prussian court, where he produced his greatest historical work, Le Siecle de Louis XIV. He quarreled with Frederick, left Prussia in 1753, and spent his last 20 years at Ferney, near Geneva. He was initiated into Freemasonry on April 7, 1778, less than two months before his death. The event took place at Paris in the lodge of Les Neuf Soeurs. The ceremony was conducted by the celebrated French astronomer, Joseph Lalande, q.v., who had as his wardens the Comte de Stroganoff, court chamberlain to Empress Catherine of Russia, and Colonel de Laroche. He entered the lodge escorted by Benjamin Franklin, the American ambassador, and Count de Gebelin. It is recorded that the scene was one of unusual brilliance. Owing to Voltaire’s age, distinction and debility, the usual preparations were dispensed with. The apron with which the candidate was invested was one which belonged to the philosopher Claude Helvetius, q.v. Despite the charges of the established church, Voltaire was a Diest rather than an Athiest. At his own expense he erected a church on his estate and dedicated it to God. One of his most quoted statements is: “If God did not exist, it would be necessary to invent Him.” The fact that he became a Freemason is conclusive proof to all members of the Craft that he believed in Diety. His last words were "I die adoring God, loving my friends, not hating my enemies, and detesting superstition." d. May 30, 1778.

Became minister of foreign affairs in 1938–45 and as such negotiated the AngloGerman naval agreement of 1935; the German–Japanese anti-Comintern agreement of 1936; the Russo–German Non-aggression Pact of 1939 and the Italo–German–Japanese alliance of 1940. At the war–crime trials at Nurnberg he offered the following in evidence: “I have been a patriot all my life. I have placed myself at the disposal of Adolf Hitler in the desire to help him save our country from ruin in 1933 and to build up a strong and united Germany in Europe. . . . I always was an opponent to the radical party programme. I have always opposed the policy against the Jews, churches, Freemasons, etc., which I considered in principal a fault and which has caused considerable difficulties in foreign politics.” Hanged as a war criminal in 1946.

the greatest shortstop in baseball history, and some claim him to be the greatest player. He was known as “Honus,” “Hans” and “The Flying Dutchman.” When he retired in 1917, he had scored more runs, made more hits and stolen more bases than any other player in the history of his league. A life member of Centennial Lodge No. 544, Carnegie, Pa., he received the degrees on March 17, April 21, May 19, 1919. d. Dec. 6, 1955.

Louis Wagner (1838–1914) Brigadier General (Brevet) in Civil War and Commander-in-Chief of G.A.R. in 1880–81. b. Aug. 4, 1838 in Giessen, Hesse–Darmstadt, Germany. Came to Philadelphia with his family in 1849. He entered the Union Army in 1861 and rose through the ranks to colonel in 1863 and brevet brigadier general in 1865. Was badly wounded at Second Battle of Bull Run and the wound broke out anew at Chancellorsville. He was then placed in charge of Camp William Penn for the organization of colored troops and sent to the front over 14,000 men. Began in insurance business in 1866 and was president of the Third National Bank of Philadelphia from 1891. Held many city offices in Philadelphia. Received degrees in Harmony Lodge No. 52, Philadelphia on Jan. 4, Feb. 1, March 1, 1865 and was master in 1872. d. Jan. 15, 1914.

Richard Wagner (1813–1883) German composer. b. 1813 in Leipzig. Although not a Freemason, he wanted to be. He had many Masonic influences in his life, including his family and friends. His brother-in-law, Prof. Oswald Marbach, was one of the most important personalities in Freemasonry during Wagner’s time, and in view of the Masonic aspects of his Parsifal, it is speculated that he learned much of Masonic ritual and ideas from Marbach. Marbach held the chair of the chapter Ba/duin, Zur Linde of Leipzig for more than 30 years, and was an honorary member of more than 50 lodges. Another great friend was the banker, Feustel in Bayreuth, who from 1863–69 was master of the lodge Zur Sonne in Bayreuth. In 1847 Feustel proposed that the lodge abolish the restrictions on non-Christians becoming members. Seemingly, Wagner informed Feustel of his desire to become a member of the lodge Eleusis zur Verschuregenheit in Bayreuth, but was advised not to submit a formal petition as there were members who reproached Wagner for his personal life. Feustel suggested to Wagner that his admission to the lodge would strengthen the opposition of the Bavarian clericals if it was known he was a member of the Craft.

Webster Wagner (1817–1882) Inventor of the railroad sleeping car. (See also George M. Pullman.) b. Oct. 2, 1817 near Palatine Bridge, N.Y. Received a common school education and became a wagon maker. He subsequently became a freight agent of the New York Central Railroad. In 1858 he had four of his sleeping cars in operation, and their use gradually extended until they were adopted on all the lines of the Vanderbilt system. In 1867 he manufactured the first drawing-room car and founded the Wagner Palace-car Co. of which he was president until his death. Served in both branches of the N.Y. state legislature. Member of Hamilton Lodge No. 79. He was killed in a railroad disaster on the Hudson River Railroad on Jan. 13, 1882.

Philip D. Wagoner President of Elliott–Fisher Co. since 1918. b. July 24, 1876 in Somerville, N.J. Graduate of Stevens Inst. of Technology (N.J.) in 1896. Began with General Electric and in 1910 became president of its subsidiary, the General Vehicle Co. He is honorary chairman of board and director of Underwood Corp. (formerly Underwood–Elliott–Fisher Co.) a consolidation of Elliott–Fisher Co., Underwood Typewriter Co. and Sunstrand Corp. He is a member of York Lodge No. 197, N.Y.C.

Jonathan M. Wainwright (1883–1953) American general who was the hero of Bataan in the Philippine fight and for which he was awarded the Congressional Medal of Honor in 1945. b. Aug. 23, 1883 in Walla Walla, Wash. Graduate of U.S. Military Academy in 1906, and advanced through grades to brigadier general, 1938; lieutenant general (temp.) in 1942 and full general in 1945. He retired from service on Aug. 31, 1947. In WWI he was on the general staff of the 82nd Division at Toul, St. Mihiel and Meuse–Argonne. Subsequently he was on general staff of 3rd Army in Germany. He was assigned to Philippine duty in Oct., 1940 and commanded the Philippine Div. He served throughout the Bataan campaign, and assumed command of all troops when MacArthur, q.v., went to Australia. He was a prisoner of war for three years and three months, being rescued in Manchuria in Aug., 1945. He became commander of the 4th Army in 1946. He was stationed at this time in Fort Sam Houston, Texas, but his domicile was in Kansas. At this time application was made to the grand master of Kansas for a special dispensation to confer the degree in less than required time. The degrees were given in full on the day of May 16, 1946 in Union Lodge No. 7, Junction City, Kansas. He had been previously elected on Dec. 20. The E.A. degree was given in the morning, the F.C. and first section of the M.M. degree in the afternoon, and the second section in the evening. Many of his military comrades were present. The proficiency only was waived, the work being conferred in full form throughout. The following day (May 17) he received the Scottish Rite degrees (SJ) at Salina, Kansas and on the same day took the Shrine degrees in Isis Temple, Salina. Wainwright thus holds what is probably a record; from non-member to Shriner in two days! He later received the KCCH, and in 1948 was awarded the medal of the Grand Lodge of New York for distinguished achievement. He died Sept. 2, 1953 and was buried on Sept. 8 in Arlington Cemetery with Masonic services.

Arthur E. Waite (1857–1942) English Christian mystic and writer on Masonic and occult subjects. b. Oct. 2, 1857 in Brooklyn, N.Y. (site now covered by approach to the Brooklyn Bridge). His mother returned to England following the death of his father in 1858. Reared a Catholic, he later left the church. Was initiated Sept. 19, 1901 and raised Feb. 10, 1902 in St. Marylebone Lodge No. 1305, London. Was exalted May 1, 1902 in Metropolitan Chapter and knighted in the Preceptory of St. George; later became a founder of King Edward VII Preceptory. Among his writings are The Secret Tradition in Freemasonry; Emblematic Freemasonry or a New Encyclopaedia of Freemasonry. A large collection of his writings and letters is in the Iowa Grand Lodge Library at Cedar Rapids. d. May 19, 1942.

David Waldo (1802–1878) Pioneer doctor, soldier and New Mexico trader. b. April 30, 1802 in Clarksburg, W. Va. Graduated in medicine in Lexington, Ky. in 1822 and practiced in Missouri and New Mexico. In 1827 he became interested in the commerce of the prairies and the push to the West, and relinquished his general practice to engage in the overland trade to Santa Fe and Chihuahua. He received his third degree in Missouri Lodge No. 1, St. Louis on May 5, 1829, and then returned to Taos where he was the first graduate medical doctor to practice in New Mexico. In the late thirties, he returned to Missouri, where he remained until he joined Doniphan's expedition as a captain of artillery. His brother was killed at Moro, N. Mex. during the uprising of 1847, known as the Taos Rebellion. After the Mexican War he returned to Independence, Mo. by way of New Orleans. In 1841 we find him one of the charter members of Independence Lodge No. 35 at Independence, Mo. He was an active Freemason and the records of New Mexico make frequent reference to him. In 1861 he deeded a house and lot to Bent Lodge No. 204 of Taos. Unfortunately he was confined to an insane asylum at Fulton, Mo. in his last years and failed to answer a summons of his lodge at Independence to "appear and show cause" for nonpayment of dues. He was suspended, but at his death when Masonic burial was requested in Independence, Mo., the grand master ruled that he was illegally suspended, and was therefore reinstated. d. May, 1878.

George E. Waldo (1851–1943) U.S. Congressman to 59th and 60th Congresses from 5th N.Y. dist. b. Jan. 11, 1851 in Brooklyn. Admitted to the bar in 1876. Moved to Pasadena, Calif. in 1913. Mason and 32° AASR. d. June 11, 1943.

John Warren (1753–1815) Physician in the American Revolution and brother of Joseph Warren, q.v. b. July 27, 1753 in Roxbury, Mass. Graduate of Harvard in 1771, and studied medicine for two years with his brother, Joseph, and then began practice in Salem, Mass., where he attained rapid success. He attended the wounded at the Battle of Bunker Hill (where his brother was killed) and here received a bayonet wound, while attempting to pass a sentry in order to see his brother. He was appointed hospital surgeon, and in 1776 accompanied the army to N.Y. and N.J. He was at Trenton and Princeton, and from 1777 until the close of the war was superintending surgeon of the military hospitals in Boston. For nearly 40 years he occupied the foremost place among the surgeons of New England. In 1783 he was appointed professor of anatomy and surgery in the newly established medical school at Harvard. He was first president of the Massachusetts Medical Society and retained that office from 1804 until his death. He was made a Mason in St. Andrews Lodge, Boston on April 18, 1777, and on June 6, 1780 became a member of Massachusetts Lodge of Boston. On June 24, 1783 he became grand master of the Grand Lodge of Massachusetts. d. April 4, 1815.

Joseph Warren (1741–1775) American Physician and Major General in American Revolution. b. June 11, 1741 in Roxbury, Mass., the brother of Dr. John Warren, q.v. Graduate of Harvard in 1759. After teaching school for a year, he took up the study of medicine and began practice in 1764. From the time of the 1765 Stamp Act he contributed to the press, and when Samuel Adams left Boston in 1774 to attend the Continental Congress in Philadelphia, Warren became the leading figure in Massachusetts political movements. He wrote the Suffolk Resolves of Sept. 9, 1774, and after the provincial Congress met in October, he became chairman of the Committee of Safety. He was elected president of the Provincial Congress on May 31, 1775. It was Warren who sent Paul Revere and William Dawes, qq.v., to Lexington on April 18, 1775 to warn Hancock and Adams of their danger. On June 14, 1775 he was elected major general of the Mass. forces, but three days later he was killed in the Battle of Bunker Hill while fighting in the ranks as a volunteer. His body was buried near the spot where he fell, and remained there until it was found and identified on April 4, 1776. On April 8, the grand lodge convened for the purpose of burying the remains of its late grand master. The remains were reinterred in the tomb of George Richard Minot, a friend of the Warren family, in the Granary Burying Ground, Boston, where they remained until 1825. Then they were removed to the Warren tomb in Saint Paul's Church, Boston. On Aug. 2, 1855, the remains were deposited in an urn and placed in the family vault at Forest Hills Cemetery, Boston. Warren received his degrees in the Lodge of St. Andrew, Boston, in 1761, and was elected master of the lodge, Nov. 30, 1768. On May 30, 1769, George Earl of Dalhousie, grand master of Scotland, granted him a commission as provincial grand master of Masons in Boston, New England, and within 100 miles of the same. A subsequent commission dated March 3, 1772 extended his jurisdiction over all of North America. Warren exercised the authority of his commission on Dec. 27, 1769 by organizing the Provincial Grand Lodge of Massachusetts (Ancients) at the Green Dragon Tavern, Boston, and continued as its grand master until his death at Bunker Hill on June 17, 1775. The above organization is historically known as Massachusetts Grand Lodge. It assumed its independence on March 8, 1777, thus becoming the first independent grand lodge in the United States. On March 5, 1792 it united with St. John's Lodge of Massachusetts.

John Warrock (1774–1858) Printer and publisher of Warrock's Almanac. b. Nov. 4, 1774 in Richmond, Va. For forty years he issued his almanac annually. Henry D. Washburn Led a party into the Yellowstone area in 1870. It included Grand Master Nathaniel P. Langford, q.v., of Montana, and Cornelius Hedges, q.v., deputy grand master and grand secretary of Montana for 36 years. Langford was appointed first superintendent of the park. Washburn was a Mason, but his lodge is not identified.

Booker T. (Taliaferro) Washington (1859–1915) Negro educator and leader, who was a Prince Hall Freemason. b. near Hale's Ford, Va. Graduate of Hampton Institute of Va. in 1875 and honorary degrees from Harvard and Dartmouth.

He founded the Tuskegee Institute of Alabama in 1884 and served as its president. A writer and speaker on racial and educational subjects, he was the author of many books including Sowing and Reaping; Up From Slavery; Future of the American Negro; Character Building; Working With Hands; The Negro in Business; The Story of the Negro; My Larger Education, etc. He was made a Mason “at sight” by the grand master of the Prince Hall Grand Lodge of Massachusetts. This caused some difficulty, as he was then a resident of Alabama and this jurisdictional question may have prevented him from affiliating with a lodge in his jurisdiction. d. Nov. 14, 1915.

George Washington (1732–1799) First President of the United States; supreme commander of Continental forces in American Revolution and “father of his country.” b. Feb. 22, 1732 (by present calendar) at Bridges Creek, Westmoreland Co., Va. Inasmuch as his biography is readily available, this sketch will deal only with the Masonic facets of his life. He was initiated in 1752 in the lodge at Fredericksburg, Va., and the records of that lodge, still in existence, show that on the evening of Nov. 4 “Mr. George Washington was initiated as an Entered Apprentice” and the entrance fee of £2 3s was acknowledged. On March 3, 1753 he received the Fellow Craft degree, and on Aug. 4, same year, was raised to Master Mason. Each of the above days fell on Saturday and he was last in the Fredericksburg lodge on Saturday, Sept. 1, 1753. It is possible that he received some additional degree, or was reobligated during the French War in a military lodge attached to the 46th Regiment. It might have been the Mark Master degree. It is also speculated that he received the Royal Arch degree in Fredericksburg Lodge as it was being worked by that lodge at the time Washington was raised. This claim is aided by the fact that in Aug., 1784 Lafayette presented Washington with a Masonic apron which had been embroidered by Madame Lafayette, and contained emblems of the Royal Arch with the letters H.T.W.S.S.T.K.S. in a circle and a beehive within the circle to indicate that it was the wearer's mark. In 1777 a convention of Virginia lodges recommended Washington to be Grand Master of the Independent grand lodge of that commonwealth. Washington, however, declined. Soon after the start of the Revolution, there was a movement to throw off the authority of the mother country, and several of the provincial grand lodges assumed an independent character. The idea of a grand master for all the colonies also became popular. On Feb. 7, 1780, a convention of delegates from Army lodges met at Morristown, N.J. and suggested to several grand lodges that "one Grand Lodge in America" be established. On Jan. 13, 1780, the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania held a session, and declaring that Freemasonry would benefit by "a Grand Master of Masons throughout the United States," they elected Washington for the position. They then sent minutes of the election to the different grand lodges, but when Mass. failed to come to any determination on the question, the matter was dropped. The next Masonic record of Washington is in 1788 when Lodge No. 39 of Alexandria, Va., which had previously been working under the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania, transferred its allegiance to Virginia. On May 29 of that year the lodge adopted the following resolution: "The Lodge proceeded to the appointment of Master and Deputy Master to be recommended to the Grand Lodge of Virginia when George

Washington, Esq., was unanimously chosen Master; Robert McCrea, Deputy Master; Wm. Hunter, Jr., Senior Warden; John Allison, Junior Warden. The charter to the lodge was issued by Edmund Randolph, then governor of Virginia and grand master of the Grand Lodge of Virginia, and named Washington as master. It also designated the lodge as Alexandria Lodge No. 22. In 1805 the lodge was permitted to change its name to that of Washington Alexandria Lodge in honor of its first master. Washington served in the capacity of master a total of 20 months. Throughout his career, Washington visited a number of lodges and attended many Masonic functions. His correspondence has many references to Freemasonry. In 1797 he wrote the Grand Lodge of Massachusetts, "My attachment to the Society of which we are members will dispose me always to contribute my best endeavors to promote the honor and prosperity of the Craft." In an earlier letter to the same body he expressed his idea that the Craft's "grand object is to promote the happiness of the human race." In answering a letter from the Grand Lodge of South Carolina in 1791, he said: "I recognize with pleasure my relation to the Brethren of your Society," and "I shall be happy, on every occasion, to evince my regard for the Fraternity." He also referred to the fraternity as "an association whose principles lead to purity of morals, and are beneficial of action." Writing to the officers and members of St. David's Lodge at Newport, R.I. in 1791 he stated: "Being persuaded that a just application of the principles on which the Masonic fraternity is founded must be promotive of private virtue and public prosperity, I shall always be happy to advance the interests of the Society, and to be considered by them as a deserving Brother." In November, 1798, only 13 months before his death, he wrote to the Grand Lodge of Maryland; "So far as I am acquainted with the doctrines and principles of Freemasonry, I conceive them to be founded in benevolence, and to be exercised only for the good of mankind. I cannot, therefore, upon this ground, withdraw my approbation from it."

Anthony Wayne (1745–1796) General in American Revolution. b. Jan. 1, 1745 in Easttown, Pa. He was a surveyor and farmer in Pennsylvania. He recruited and led a regiment at the start of the Revolution, becoming a brigadier general in 1777, and in 1792 was appointed by Washington a major general in command of the regular army. His bravery earned him the name of “Mad Anthony.” After the war, his successful negotiations and military victories over the Indians opened up the Northwest U.S. to settlers. He is said to have been a Freemason, but his lodge has not been identified with certainty. He is credited with membership in “Winchester Lodge No. 12,” but no location is given for it. Sache refers to him in his Old Masonic Lodges of Pennsylvania as a Mason, and states that in June, 1778 he “gave a grand entertainment and banquet to the members of the Masonic fraternity.” On July 16, 1857 the Grand Lodge of New York dedicated a monument to his memory at Stony Point, N.Y. d. Dec. 15, 1796.

in Boston, Mass. His parents had only recently emigrated from England. He worked in Keene, N.H. as an apprentice printer, and here he was initiated into Rising Sun Lodge. He then moved to Albany, N.Y., where he opened a bookstore. While here he helped establish a Royal Arch Chapter and a Knight Templar Encampment. In 1797 he published at Albany the first edition of his Freemasons Monitor; or Illustrations of Masonry. He did not claim the authorship until the subsequent edition, but his name and that of his partner, Spencer, appear in the imprint as publishers. About 1801 he moved to Providence, R.I., where he engaged in the manufacture of wallpaper. He affiliated with St. John's Lodge of that city, and after passing through the chairs, was elected grand master of the Grand Lodge of Rhode Island in 1813. On Oct. 24, 1797 a convention of committees from several Royal Arch chapters in the Northern states was held in Boston for the purpose of establishing a grand chapter for those states. Webb was chosen chairman. When the grand chapter was organized in 1798, Webb was elected grand scribe, and reelected in 1799, at which time that body assumed the title of General Grand Chapter. In 1806 he was promoted to general grand king, and in 1816 to deputy general grand high priest, holding that office until his death. In 1816 he visited the Western states and remained there two years, during which time he was actively engaged in organizing chapters, grand chapters and encampments. He established the grand chapters of Ohio and Kentucky by virtue of his powers as deputy general grand high priest. d. July 6, 1819 while visiting in Cleveland, Ohio.

Mason Locke Weems (1760–1825) An itinerant preacher and bookseller, who fabricated the story of George Washington and the cherry tree. Known as “Parson” Weems, he was born in Dumfries, Va. about 1760, and studied theology in London.

He took the orders of the Protestant Episcopal Church, and for several years was rector of Pohick Church, Mount Vernon Parish, Va., of which Washington was an attendant. The necessities of his large family compelled him to resign that charge about 1790 and he became a book agent for Mathew Carey of Philadelphia. He was one of America's first door-to-door salesmen and traveled throughout the South peddling his wares. He was equally ready for a stump, a fair or a pulpit. Among his own writings are The Philanthropist; Life of George Washington; Life of Gen. Francis Marion; Life of Benjamin Franklin and Life of William Penn. He was a member of Lodge No. 50, Dumfries, Va. At one time he dedicated a copy of The Philanthropist, signing himself as "your very sincere friend and Masonic Brother." d. May 23, 1825.

Adam Weishaupt (1748–1811?) Founder of the Order of Illuminati. b. Feb. 6, 1748 in Ingoldstadt, Germany. He was educated by the Jesuits. He was named as professor extraordinary of law at Ingoldstadt U. in 1772, and in 1775 professor of natural and canon law. The latter position had been held previously only by an ecclesiastic. Weishaupt's views were cosmopolitan and liberal. He condemned the bigotry and superstitions of the established church and gained a following of young students who would meet in his private apartment and discuss philosophic subjects. This was the beginning of his Order of the Illuminati, or Enlightened Ones. At first it was totally unconnected with Freemasonry, for Weishaupt was not initiated into the Craft until 1777, when he received the degrees in the Lodge Theodore of Good Counsel at Munich. He then sought to incorporate the Illuminati into Freemasonry. Originally of high aims and purposes, the organization became a corrupt political instrument, and fell into disfavor. In 1784 all secret associations were prohibited by royal decree, and the following year Weishaupt was deprived of his professorship and banished from the country. He went to Gotha and was kindly received by Duke Ernest, who made him a counselor and gave him a pension. His date of death is given variously as 1811 and 1830.

Active in politics, he was postmaster of Hartford from 1836–41 and an organizer of the Republican party in 1856. In this same year he founded the Republican newspaper Hartford (Conn.) Evening Press. A supporter of both Lincoln and Johnson, he was secretary of the Navy in both their cabinets. He was instrumental in developing the Monitor, famous Civil War ironclad ship. Member of St. John's Lodge No. 4 and Pythagoras Chapter No. 17, R.A.M., both of Hartford.

Sir Arthur Wellesley (see Duke of Wellington).

Viscount and Marquis of Wellesley (see under Mornington).

Arthur, Duke of Wellington (1769–1852) British general and statesman known as “The Iron Duke”; defeated Napoleon, q.v., at Waterloo. He entered the army in 1787. He was an Irish member of Parliament from 1790–95. After commanding a division in the war with Tipu in 1799, he returned to England as Irish Secretary for three years and was then given command as lieutenant general in the Peninsular War of 1808. He defeated the forces of King Joseph (Bonaparte) at Talavera; forced the French to retreat under Massena and defeated them at Salamanca. Given supreme command of Spain, he drove the French across the Pyrenees in 1814 and was created 1st Duke of Wellington in that year. With the Prussian Blucher, he crushed Napoleon at Waterloo in 1815. Was active in politics the remainder of life, being prime minister of England in 1828–30 and commander in chief of the armed forces 1827–28, 1842–52. His father, Gafrett, Earl of Mornington, q.v., was grand master of the Grand Lodge of Ireland in 1776, and his brother Richard, 1st Marquess of Wellesley and 2nd Earl of Mornington, q.v., was grand master of Ireland in 1782. The Iron Duke was initiated in the family Lodge No. 494 (I.C.) at Trim on Dec. 7, 1790 as “A. Wesley” (the family used this name until about 1790, when they changed it to Wellesley). His father was master of the lodge at this time and his brother was also present in the lodge. He continued as a subscribing member until 1795. The Duke admitted as much in 1838, when Dublin Lodge No. 2, having acquired the Trim warrant, wished to call itself by his name. It is curious, however, that in 1851, towards the end of his life, when pestered by an importunate correspondent, the Duke denied “any recollection of having been admitted a Freemason.”

Edward W. Wellington (1853–1925) General Grand Master, General Grand Council, R. & S.M., 1915–18. b. Feb. 4, 1853 in Cambridge, Mass. He earned his way through college and Wesley (see also Wellesley).

John Wesley (1703–1791) The founder of Methodism was not a Freemason, although sometimes claims are made of his membership. A critical examination by W. J. Chetwode Crawley concludes that the person of that name initiated in Downpatrick Lodge No. 36, Downpatrick, Ireland, on Oct. 30, 1788 was not the Wesley of Methodist fame. As a matter of fact it seems that he entertained dubious opinions of the fraternity. Had he been a member of the Craft it would undoubtedly have been chronicled in his copious and accurate journals and diaries.

Samuel Wesley (1766–1837) Distinguished English organist, whom Mendelssohn called “the father of English organ-playing.” He was a nephew of John Wesley, q.v., founder of Methodism. b. Feb. 24, 1766. Philip, 1st Duke of Wharton (1698–1731) Was the second person of the nobility to be Grand Master of England and the fourth Roman Catholic to hold that office. He has been called the “evil genius” of the early grand lodge days. When he was 18 the Old Pretender conferred on him the Dukedom of Northumberland, on the strength of which he borrowed and squandered ≈£2,000 from the widow of James II. Upon returning from his travels, he espoused the Hanoverian cause and was rewarded with another dukedom. He took his seat in the House of Lords and was president of the notorious Hell-Fire Club. Anderson's account in his second Book of Constitutions (1738) accuses the duke of having engineered his irregular election as grand master in June, 1722. He was almost certainly the founder of the anti-Masonic body of "Gormogons." In 1726 he left England, never to return, and the next year found him fighting against the British at the siege of Gibraltar. For this he was outlawed by England and shorn of his title and estates in 1729. In the same year he formed a lodge in Madrid which lasted until 1768. He became a Roman Catholic in 1726 and died in a monastery. He was satirized by Pope in his Moral Essays: "Wharton, the scorn and wonder of our days, whose ruling passion was the lust of Praise."

Sept. 10, 1836 in Augusta, Ga., he was graduated from the U.S. Military Academy in 1859. Resigned from the Army on April 22, 1861 and was made colonel of the 19th Alabama Inf. the following Sept. He commanded a brigade at Shiloh and covered the Confederate retreat. In July, 1862 he was transferred to a cavalry command and became famous for his raids. Made brigadier general in Oct., 1862, major general in Jan., 1863, and lieutenant general in Feb., 1865. He contested General Rosecrans' advance; commanded the cavalry at Chickamauga; was at the siege of Knoxville, covering Bragg's retreat from Mission Ridge and Lookout Mountain. He fought almost daily against General Sherman's march to the sea. At the end of the war he was senior cavalry general of the Confederate Armies. After the war he studied law and practiced in Wheeler, Ala., where he was also a planter. His election to the 47th congress was successfully contested, but subsequent to the death of W. M. Lowe, who had contested his seat, he was elected to the same congress and served from March 4, 1885 until April 20, 1900. In the Spanish–American War he was commissioned major general of volunteers in May, 1898, in charge of a cavalry division. He commanded at the Battle of Las Guasimas and in all the conflicts in front of Santiago. He was senior member of the commission that negotiated the surrender of the Spanish Army in Cuba. He then served in the,Ä¢Philippine Insurrection, commanding the 1st Brig., 2nd Div., 8th Army in the Tarlac campaign. He was commissioned brigadier general in the regular Army in 1900. Was raised, Nov. 4, 1873, in Courtland Lodge No. 37, Courtland, Ala., and was a member of Courtland Chapter No. 25, R.A.M. and DeMolay Commandery No. 14, K.T., of Decatur, Ala. d. Jan. 25, 1906.

Abraham Whipple (1733–1819) Commodore in the American Revolution. On June 9, 1772 he led the volunteers that took and buried the British schooner Gaspe in Narragansett Bay, which was the first American uprising against a British armed vessel. b. Sept. 16, 1733 in Providence, R.I. He commanded a vessel in the West Indian trade early in life. During the French War of 1759–60 he commanded the privateer Gamecock capturing 23 French vessels in a single cruise. In June, 1775, Rhode Island fitted out two armed vessels, placing Whipple in command with the title of commodore. He captured the British sloop Rose, and in this encounter fired the first gun of the Revolution on the water. Later captain of the Columbus and then the Providence. The latter ship captured more British prizes than any other American vessel. In July, 1779, while commanding the Providence and two other ships, he attacked a fleet of English merchantmen under convoy and captured eight of them, a prize in excess of one million dollars. In 1780 he went to Charleston, S. Car. in an effort to relieve that city, but was captured by the British and held prisoner until the close of the war. He later became a farmer at Cranston, R.I., but in 1799 connected himself with the Ohio Company and settled at Marietta. He was initiated and passed in St. Johns Lodge No. 1, Providence, R.I. on June 4, 1761. He was a brother of William Whipple, q.v., signer of the Declaration of Independence. d. May 29, 1819.

In 1759 he abandoned the sea and went into business in Portsmouth, N.H. with his brother, Joseph. Was elected a delegate to the Continental Congress from N.H. in 1775 and served until 1778, declining his reelection. Was commissioned brigadier general in 1777 and commanded a brigade of state troops at the battles of Saratoga and Stillwater. After Burgoyne's surrender he signed the articles of capitulation on behalf of General Gates. He participated in Sullivan's expedition to R.I. in 1778 and resigned his commission in 1782. Was state superintendent of finances from 1782–84. His petition was received by St. John's Lodge No. 1, Portsmouth, N.H. on January 2, 1752 at the age of 21. Some sources say the date was June 2, but this is probably due to the abbreviation in the lodge minutes, i.e.: "At a Lodge held at Mr. James Stoutley, this 2d Jan. 1752, being the first night of the Quarter, Mr. William Whipple Proposed & by Dispensation Balloted for & Unanimously Voted to be made a member of this Society." d. Nov. 28, 1785.

legislature; was lieutenant governor of Kentucky and in 1839 became, acting governor. A wealthy man, he was known for his aristocratic bearing and contempt for the poorer classes, winning him the name of “the Duke.” He was the father-in-law of Dr. Joseph S. Halstead, q.v. Member of Bardstown Lodge No. 38 and past master of same. d. Oct. 31, 1869.

Christoph Martin Wieland (1733–1813) German poet, prose writer and translator, often called the “German Voltaire.” Was brought up as a Pietist, and lived chiefly in Weimar from 1772. He was a friend of Goethe, Schiller and Herder, qq.v., who inspired him to write his works of about 45 volumes of classical poetry and prose. They are largely satirical or didactic and included Lady Johanna Gray; Idris and Zenide; Musarion; Oberon. Most famous, however, was his fantastic tale, Dschinnistan, on which Mozart, q.v., based his Magic Flute. He made the first German prose translations of Shakespeare’s plays in 1762–66, as well as translations of Horace, Lucian and Cicero. During his younger years, he was extremely critical of Freemasonry. At the age of 76 he asked to be accepted. Four years before his death he was initiated into the Lodge Araaiia at Weimar. He read several lectures to his lodge, and his opinion of Freemasonry may be partially learned from two of his statements: “The Freemason is a citizen of the whole world; to talk in the spirit of our wise men, a citizen of the town of God, in which the sun and planets form different places—but united in harmony.” Again, he said: “Let us be sure, that the world in His totality, protected by the all-seeing eye, is of such a beauty that future generations will enjoy the fruit of this arbor. We are children of one father; we adore all who believe in humanity and we behold the unity of the spirit, expressed by the mystic chain.”

Became ambassador to Russia, 1942–47, and was high commissioner for Canada at London from 1949–52. Was undersecretary of state for external affairs, 1952–53 and permanent representative to the North Atlantic Council since 1953. He was chairman of the Canadian delegation to the preparatory committee of the U.N. in 1945. Was raised in Canada Lodge No. 3527 of London while serving as high commissioner in London.

John Wilkes (1727–1797) English political reformer known as the "Friend of Liberty." He led a profligate life. Founded The North Briton in 1762 and attacked Lord Bute and charged George III with falsehood. Was prosecuted for libel, but obtained verdict with damages for illegal arrest. Member of Parliament from 1757–64, being expelled the latter year for seditious libel. He then fled to the continent to escape trial, but returned in 1768; was elected to parliament; stood trial and was imprisoned from June, 1768 to April, 1770. He was then reelected to parliament and expelled three times, but finally gained his seat. He became the idol of the mob, rioting for “Wilkes and liberty.” He was lord mayor of London in 1774. He championed the colonial rights in the American Revolution. While in prison, on March 3, 1769, “Ye members of ye Lodge held at ye Jerusalem Tavern, in Clerkenwell, attended at the King’s Bench Prison, and made Mr. Wilkes a Mason.” This is now Jerusalem Lodge No. 197. The Gazeteer and New Advertiser at that time added that the ceremony was performed in the King’s Bench Prison in the presence of the grand officers, whom the minutes show to have included Thomas French, the grand secretary. Mystification arose when the same paper officially denied the dispensation and presence of the grand officers four days later.

James Wilkinson (1757–1825) American Army officer and adventurer. b. in Calvert Co., Md. Completed medical studies and entered Continental Army in 1776 as a captain. Was with Arnold in retreat from Montreal to Albany in 1776 and was at Trenton and Princeton. Was promoted to lieutenant colonel in 1777 and brevetted brigadier general. Was secretary of board of war in 1778, but became involved in the Conway Cabal and forced to resign commission in 1778. He then became clothier general of the army, 1779–81. Then engaged in trade in the Mississippi Valley region and conspired with the Spanish governor of La. to gain trade monopolies for himself. He was also charged with attempting to separate Kentucky from the U.S. and turn it over to Spain. He again entered the service as a lieutenant colonel and fought against the Indians. In 1792 he became brigadier general. Took over Detroit from the British in 1796 and on General Wayne's death in that year he became the ranking officer of the U.S. Army. With Col. Wm. C. C. Claiborne, he represented the U.S. in taking over the Louisiana Purchase in 1803 from the French. Was governor of Louisiana, 1805–06. He was implicated in Aaron Burr's conspiracy and was chief witness at Burr's trial. He was acquitted by a court of inquiry and later (1811) by court-martial. Commissioned major general in 1813 and commanded American forces on Canadian frontier. Again acquitted before a board of inquiry in 1815 and honorably discharged from Army in that year. Went to Mexico in 1821 and died in the home of Joel R. Poinsett, q.v., on Dec. 28, 1825. There is some confusion as to his various Masonic memberships. He was undoubtedly a member of a "Lodge No. 2," but whether this was the Masters Lodge No. 2 at Albany, N.Y. or at Philadelphia, Pa. is unclear. On Dec. 5, 1780 he was admitted a member of Bristol Lodge No. 25, Bristol, Pa. and on May 5, 1795 admitted a member of Nova Caesarea Lodge No. 10, Cincinnati. He was an occasional visitor to lodges in the Ohio and Mississippi Valleys, including Harmony No. 7 at Natchez.

Was initiated at age of 20 and became master of lodge two years later. In 1753 he founded the lodge Perfect Friendship. In 1760 he was a leader in founding the Grand Lodge of Lyons and in 1763 founded a Rosicrucian chapter of Knights of the Black Eagle. He believed that somewhere in the various Masonic and quasi-Masonic bodies there was concealed a sacred deposit of divine truth capable of being used for the redemption of mankind. Was associated with Pasqually in the “Freemasonry of Knights Masons Elected Cohens of the Universe” and on May 13, 1768 was admitted a member of the Reaux–Croix, the highest degree of the Cohens. He then became aligned with Von Hund, q.v., and the Order of Strict Observance. In 1778 he took a leading part in the famous Convent des Gaules, which freed the French from German control in the Strict Observance Rite. This later became the Knights Beneficent of the Holy City. The French Revolution caused him to flee France to escape the guillotine. When an attempt was made in 1808 to revive the Knights Beneficent, he was not notified until they came to him in search of the old rituals. d. May 29, 1824.

William I (1797–1888) King of Prussia, 1861–88; and Emperor of Germany, 1871–88. Full name was Wilhelm Friedrich Ludwig, second son of Frederick William III, q.v., and father of Frederick III (both dying in the same year). Fought against Napoleon in 1814–15. Became Prince of Prussia in 1840 when his brother Frederick William IV became emperor. Being unpopular as such because of his absolutist ideas and suppression of insurrections, he fled to England in 1848. On becoming king of Prussia in 1861 he proclaimed that he “ruled by the favor of God and of no one else,” and he maintained a continuous struggle with liberals. He was aided by Bismarck, and in the war with Austria in 1866 he personally commanded at Sadowa and led the German armies in the Franco–Prussian War of 1870–71. Again he personally commanded at Gravelotte and Sedan, and was proclaimed emperor of Germany at Versailles on Jan. 18, 1871. He strengthened Bismarck and his generals in exercising Prussian control of Germany. He was initiated in a special lodge of the Grosse Landesloge at Berlin on May 22, 1840, at which time the three grand masters of the Berlin Grand Lodges participated. He was an honorary member of the Grand Lodge of Scotland and protector of Freemasonry in Germany. The proceedings of the Grand _Lodge of New York in 1888 stated: "It would be superfluous now to mention of his wonderful career. Despite the cares of state, he had upon frequent occasions manifested his attachment to our Fraternity, of which for many years he had been a member. He held the office, unknown among us, of Protector of the eight German Grand Lodges comprising the Grand Lodge League within his dominion."

William II (1792–1849) King of the Netherlands, 1840–49. Full name was Willem Frederik George Lodewijk. A son of William I, he fought in Spain under Wellington and commanded the Dutch forces at Waterloo in 1815. In 1832 he commanded the Dutch army that was defeated by the French. He was made king on abdication of his father in 1840. He aided in financial improvements of his country, and in 1848 secured a new constitution with many liberal features. He was made a member of the Lodge of Hope of Brussels in 1817, became honorary master of the lodge and assisted in its workings.

He was raised in Waverly Lodge No. 597, Edinburgh, Scotland on June 1, 1904. He died in. March, 1922, and the Grand Lodge of Scotland requested St. Cecile Lodge No. 568 (the actors' lodge) to conduct his services. This they did on March 6 in the grand lodge room of the Masonic Temple in N.Y.C.

Charles K. Williams (1782–1853) Governor of Vermont. b. Jan. 24, 1782 at Cambridge, Mass. He served as judge of the Supreme Court of Vt., from 1822–23, and after four years as collector of customs, was again elected to the supreme court where he served 17 years, the last 13 being as chief justice. He was exalted in Green Mountain Chapter No. 1, R.A.M. in 1810, and was grand high priest of the Grand Chapter of Vermont in 1816–17. d. March 9, 1853.

David R. Williams (1776–1830) Governor of South Carolina, 1814–16; U.S. Congressman, 1805–13; Brigadier General of Regular Army in War of 1812. b. March 10, 1776 in Robbins Neck, S. Car. Graduate of Brown in 1797, studied law and was

Richard Montgomery at St. John's and Quebec, continuing his service until 1779, when he resigned. His feet had been badly frozen and this partially disabled him for life. With John Paulding, q.v., and Isaac Van Wart, he was one of the captors of Major John Andre on Sept. 23, 1780. After the war, he bought a farm near the Catskill mountains that had been the property of Daniel Shays, q.v., leader of Shay's rebellion. He was given a silver medal by order of congress. He was raised in Lotus Lodge No. 31, N.Y.C. in 1827. Charles A. Lakin in his History of Military Lodge –No. 93, Manlius, N.Y. states that he was first junior warden of this military lodge and presented the lodge with a sword he had taken on the Battlefield of Yorktown. d. Aug. 2, 1831.

Eleazar Williams (1789?–1858) Episcopal missionary among American Indians who claimed to be the Lost Dauphin of France. His claim is definitely in contradiction with historical records, for he was the son of Thomas (Tehoragwanegen) and Mary Ann Rice (Konwatewenteta) Williams and was probably born at Sault St. Louis, Quebec. His father was a war chief of the Caughnawaga–Mohawk Tribe of Quebec with a trace of white blood from a great-grandmother. Furthermore his petition to Menomonie Lodge No. 374 of Green Bay, Wis., signed by him, states in part: "He was born at Sault St. Louis, is 32 years of age, by profession, clergyman." This, however, would make his birthdate 1792. He was reared as a Roman Catholic, attending school at Long Meadow, Mass. under Nathaniel Ely. Became a missionary in 1812 among the Canadian Indians at Sault St. Louis. Served in War of 1812 under General Dearborn, q.v., and was wounded in Battle of Plattsburg on Sept. 14, 1814. As a missionary to the Oneida Indians he was charged with malfeasance of funds, but the matter was never adjusted. In 1820 he became interested in a project to remove the New York Indians to a western homestead near Lake Michigan. He moved to Green Bay in 1823 and after some questionable activities was relieved of his missionary post. At the request of the Indians, the U.S. government, governor of New York, missionary societies and others were notified by letter that the Oneidas had forever repudiated Williams. He then dropped out of sight until 1853, when he reappeared in the new role—that of the Dauphin of France, The Lost Prince, Louis XVII! It is said that in later years he lived on the charity of his Masonic brethren of New York. He was buried with Masonic honors in the old cemetery North of the village of Hogansburg, N.Y., with a square and compasses on the stone. d. Aug. 8, 1858.

After his attorney-generalship was completed in 1829 he moved to Baltimore, where in 1832 he accepted the nomination by the anti-Masonic Party as its candidate for the president. He received the seven electoral votes of Vermont and a popular vote of 33,108. Wirt even defended Freemasonry before the nominating convention: “I was myself initiated into the mysteries of Freemasonry. I never took the Master’s degree, but it proceeded from no suspicion on my part that there was anything criminal in the institution, or anything that placed its members in the slightest degree in collision with their allegiance to their country and its laws. I have thought and repeatedly said that I considered Masonry as having nothing to do with politics, and nothing has surprised me more than to see it blown into consequence. . . .” The 1801 proceedings of the Grand Lodge of Virginia lists Wirt as a Fellowcraft of Jerusalem Lodge No. 54 at Richmond. The 1802 proceedings (page 27) shows that the Honorable W. Wirt has withdrawn from Jerusalem Lodge No. 54. Although Wirt claims he never received the third degree, the proceedings of 1803 shows a “William Wirt” as a Master Mason of Stevensburg Lodge No. 40 and the 1804 proceedings (page 35) again lists a “William Wirt” as a Master Mason in that lodge. Samuel Woodworth (1785–1842) Poet, best known for The Old Oaken Bucket. b. Jan. 13, 1785 in Scituate, Mass. Served newspaper apprenticeship, and moved to New Haven, Conn., where he published a weekly paper called Belles-Lettres Repository. It failed after two months. He moved to New York in 1809, and during War of 1812 issued a weekly paper called The War, and a monthly Swedenborgian magazine entitled, Halcyon Lund-nary and Theological Repository. Wrote a two-volume history of the War of 1812, entitled Champions of Freedom (1816). In 1823 he began the publication of the

New York Mirror, with a partner, but withdrew within a year. He wrote an operetta that was quite successful, entitled Forest Rose. Later in life he was paralyzed and his resources were meager. Member of Morton Commandery No. 4, K.T. of N.Y.C. d. Dec. 9, 1842.

David Wooster (1710?–1777) Brigadier General in the American Revolution and “Father of Freemasonry in Connecticut.” Both the dates and place of birth are in question. Some say it was March 2, 1710, others, 1711; some say Danbury and others, Stratford, Conn. Graduate of Yale U. in 1738, he became a merchant in New Haven. In the “War of Jenkin’s Ear,” 1741–43, he became the captain of Connecticut’s first naval vessel, the Defense, and in 1745 commanded a company in the first siege of Louisbourg, so distinguishing himself that he was chosen to escort the prisoners back to France. From there he went to London, where he was rewarded with a captain’s commission in the regular army and a guarantee of half pay for life. Returning to New Haven, he married the 15-year-old daughter of the president of Yale. As a colonel in the Conn. service he campaigned for six years in the French and Indian War. At the outset of the American Revolution, he gave up his British commission (and the half-pay) to become a major general of Conn. troops. He commanded in the vicinity of New York and on Long Island in 1775; next he marched towards Canada under Schuyler. Here he succeeded to the command as well as the responsibility of military governor of Canada, when Montgomery fell at Quebec. He was made a scapegoat for reverses in Canada, was cleared by an investigating committee but retired from the regular service. He then became the senior major general of Conn. Militia, and in April, 1777 lost his life defending Danbury, Conn. Sources differ as to his original lodge. Some say he was first made a member in St. James Lodge, London, England, about 1745 on his visit there. Others say it was in a military lodge at Louisbourg, along with Lord Blayney (later grand master of England). Nevertheless, he secured the charter for the first lodge in Conn.—Hiram No. 1 at New Haven, dated Nov. 12, 1750, and was its first master. d. May 2, 1777. His son, Thomas, q.v., was an aide to General Washington.

Thomas Wooster Aide to General Washington in the American Revolution. Son of General David Wooster, q.v. Father and son were both members of the same lodge—Hiram No. 1, of New Haven, Conn. Thomas was raised in 1777 and served as master in 1778.

John L. Worden (1818–1879) Rear Admiral, U.S. Navy, and commander of the Monitor in its famous battle with the Merrimac in the Civil War. b. March 12, 1818 in Westchester Co., N.Y. He entered the Navy as a midshipman in 1835. He served on various vessels and at the Naval Observatory until the Civil War. Was prisoner of war for seven months, and after exchange was ordered to superintend the completion of the Monitor and to take command. His famous battle with the Confederate Merrimac occurred on March 9, 1862. At 11:30 a.m. a shell exploded on the pilot-house of the Monitor while Worden was looking through the slit. This rendered him blind and helpless. He later recovered from the injury to his eyes. Was commissioned a commander in July, 1862, commodore in May, 1868, and rear admiral in Nov., 1872. He was commander in chief of the European Squadron from 1875–77; superintendent of the U.S. Naval Academy, 1870–74. Was retired at his own request by Congress in a special act on Dec. 23, 1886. Member of Lexington Lodge No. 310, Brooklyn, N.Y., receiving degrees on May 25, June 15, 29, 1857 and stricken from roll March 12, 1866. d. Oct. 18, 1897.

Hubert Work (1860–1942) U.S. Secretary of Interior, 1923–28; Postmaster General, 1922–23. b. July 3, 1860 in Marion Center, Pa. Received medical degree from U. of Pennsylvania in 1885. He began medical practice in Greeley, Colo. in that year and in 1896 moved to Pueblo, Colo., where he founded the Woodcroft Hospital for mental and nervous diseases. Before his term as postmaster general, he served as assistant postmaster general, 1922–23. He was president of the American Medical Association; chairman of the Republican National Committee, 1928–29. Member of Pueblo Lodge No. 17, Pueblo, Colo. d. Dec. 14, 1942.

William Workman (1800–1880) California pioneer, born in England about 1800. He was a member of the second immigrant company to arrive in California, spending some time in Taos, N.M. before coining westward. He was a leader of the Workman–Rowland Party and married a native woman; he and Rowland were given a 45,000 acre grant near Los Angeles in 1842; Workman expanded his holdings; his daughter married Francis Temple and they accumulated much property, including what is known as the Temple Block in Los Angeles; the failure of banks in which he was interested resulted in Workman's suicide in 1880. As early as 1850 he was a member of Los Angeles Lodge No. 42, withdrawing in 1862 and affiliating with Lexington Lodge No. 104; withdrew from the latter in 1874. There is some evidence that he was made a Freemason in England.

Francis E. Worley Chief Justice, U.S. Court of Customs and Patent Appeals since 1950; U.S. Congressman to 77th–81st Congresses from Texas, 1941–51. b. Oct. 10, 1908 in Lone Wolf, Okla. Admitted to the Texas bar in 1936 and served in state legislature, 1935–40. Mason and 32° AASR (SJ). Member of Shamrock Lodge No. 929, Shamrock, Texas, receiving degrees on Jan. 14, Feb. 13, March 14, 1930. Served as tyler in 1931.

William J. Worth (1794–1849) Brevet Major General in War of 1812. b. March 1, 1794 in Hudson, N.Y. Was first employed in a store at Hudson and then moved to Albany, where he continued in the merchantile business until he was 18. Was commissioned in March, 1813 as a 1st lieutenant of the 23rd Inf.; served as an aide to Gen. Winfield Scott. He distinguished himself at the Battle of Niagara and was made a major. At close of war he was superintendent of the U.S. Military Academy. In 1838 became colonel of 8th Inf. Served in Florida War, and was second in command to Gen. Zachary Taylor at opening of War with Mexico. He was first to plant with his own hand the flag of the U.S. on the Rio Grande. Distinguished himself in the Mexican War, and was in all battles from Vera Cruz to Mexico City. He was the first to enter Mexico City and cut down the Mexican flag from the National Palace with his own hands. He was known as the “most handsome man in the Army.” Breveted major general for his service at Monterrey and given a sword, not only by the U.S. congress, but by the states of N.Y. and La., as well. Although he was buried Masonically and although Worth Lodge No. 210 of N.Y. is named for him, his lodge is not known. d. May 17, 1849. The Grand Lodge of N.Y. dedicated a memorial to him on Nov. 25, 1857 in Madison Square Park.

Thomas Worthington (1773–1827) U.S. Senator from Ohio, 1803–07 and 1810–14; Governor of Ohio, 1814–18. b. July 16, 1773 in Jefferson Co., Va. Moved to Ross Co., Ohio in 1798, where he was a member of the first and second territorial legislatures, 1799–1801; delegate to state constitutional convention of 1803. Member of Nova Caesarea Harmony Lodge No. 10 (now No. 2) and was initiated on Nov. 6, 1799. d. June 20, 1827.

Count Axel Ericson Wrede-Sparre (1708–1772) Progenitor of Freemasonry in Sweden. Raised in Paris, France in 1733, he established the first lodge in Stockholm as early as 1735.

Sir Christopher Wren (1632–1723) Early England’s most noted architect. The designer of St. Paul’s Cathedral in London, he is said to have been the last grand master of the operative masons. Anderson in his Constitutions (1738) says that in 1685 “the lodges met and elected Sir Christopher Wren Grand Master.” He also invented the hypodermic needle in conjunction with Boyle. After the fire of August, 1666 in London, he was made surveyor-general and there was hardly an important building in which he did not have a hand. Preston states that Wren attended the Lodge of St. Paul (now Antiquity No. 2) regularly for 18 years during the building of St. Paul's Cathedral, and presented the lodge three candlesticks and a mallet with which the king leveled the foundation stone. These relics are still proudly treasured by this lodge. An old minute book of the lodge dated "Queen's Arms, June 3, 1723," which is a month or two after Sir Christopher's death, states: "The three Mahogany Candlesticks presented to this Lodge by its worthy old Master, Sir Christopher Wren, ordered to be carefully deposited in a Wooden Case, lin'd with Cloth to be immediately purchased for the purpose."

Dudley Wright (1868-?) English journalist who wrote a number of Masonic books, including Women and Freemasonry; Masonic Legends and Traditions and Roman Catholicism and Freemasonry. Studied at Kings College and University College, London.

Madame de Xaintrailles Wife of a French general; was one of the Republican heroines of the French Revolution and won rank at the point of the sword. In Clavel's Histoire Pittoresque de la Franc-Maconnerie it is written that Madame de Xaintrailles, wearing the uniform of a major of cavalry, presented an aide-de-camp's commission to the lodge of Les Freres Aristes when it was about to hold a fete of adoption, and that it was resolved that the first degree (not of Adoptive Masonry but of real Masonry) should be conferred on a lady who had displayed the courage and virtues of a man. Subsequently she is said to have assisted in the work of various degrees.

Francisco Xavier Mier E. Campello Bishop of Almeria and Inquisitor-General of Spain. He was an ardent persecutor of Freemasons. In 1815, when Ferdinand VII reestablished the Inquisition in Spain and suppressed the Masonic lodges, Xavier denounced the lodges as "societies which lead to sedition, to independence, and to all errors and crimes." He then instituted a series of persecutions of the most atrocious character. Many of the most distinguished persons of Spain were arrested and imprisoned in the dungeons of the Inquisition on the charge of being "suspected of Freemasonry."

Edward B. Yancy (1888–1948) Vice President and member of executive committee of E. I. Du Pont de Nemours & Co. from 1944. b. Jan. 26, 1888 in Harrisonburg, Va. Graduate of U. of Virginia in 1908. With Du Pont from 1908. He conducted research on T.N.T. and other explosives and became general manager of the explosives department in 1935. Was manager of explosive plants in Colo., Mo., and Ala. Mason and Shriner. d. Oct. 24, 1948.

John Yarker (1833–1913) English Masonic writer. For some reason he was not accepted into Masonic circles in England. It is said that his connection with the Ancient and Primitive Rite brought down upon him the condemnation of officialdom. He had been a member of the Ancient & Accepted Rite, but was expelled from it in 1870. He wrote a number of Masonic volumes, the most impressive being his Arcane Schools in 1909. Some have called his writings “interesting, but ill-digested and unreliable.”

Christopher Yates (1737–1785) Colonel in American Revolution. He was a land surveyor. He became quartermaster general under General Schuyler. His son, Joseph C. Yates, q.v., became governor of New York. Was initiated in St. Patrick's Lodge No. 4, Johnstown, N.Y. on Sept. 9, 1769 and became a charter member and first master of St. George's Lodge No. 6, Schenectady, N.Y. on Sept. 14, 1774, serving until 1776 and again from 1778 until his death in 1785.

Giles Fonda Yates (1796–1859) Grand Commander of the Northern Supreme Council, AASR in 1851. b. in Schenectady, N.Y. He was graduated from Union Coll. A lawyer, he devoted much of his time to the study of archaeology, philosophy and the occult sciences. Initiated in Saint George's Lodge No. 6, Schenectady in 1817 and in 1821 affiliated with Morton Lodge No. 87 in same city. Served as master in 1844. Member of York Rite bodies.

Joseph C. Yates (1768–1837) Governor of New York, 1823–25; Judge of Supreme Court of New York, 1808–22. b. Nov. 9, 1768 in Schenectady, N.Y., the son of Christopher Yates, q.v. He practiced law at Schenectady and was one of the founders of Union Coll. in 1795. A county in New York is named in his honor. He was master of St. George's Lodge No. 6, Schenectady, N.Y., 1791–96 and 1798. d. March 19, 1837.

Richard Yates, Jr. (1860–1936) U.S. Congressman from Illinois to 66th–72nd Congresses, 1919–33; Governor of Illinois, 1901–04. b. Dec. 12, 1860 at Jacksonville, Ill. the son of Richard Yates, Sr., q.v., who had been governor, congressman and senator from Ill. Graduate of Illinois Coll. at Jacksonville in 1880 and U. of Michigan in 1884. Was city editor of Daily Courier, 1878–79 and Daily Journal, 1881–83, both of Jacksonville. Began law practice in that city in 1884. Became member of Harmony Lodge No. 3, Jacksonville on June 27, 1882; member of Jacksonville Chapter No. 3, R.A.M. and past commander of Hospitaler Commandery No. 31, K.T. of Jacksonville. Among his books are Bengal Lancer, 1930; Dogs of War, 1934; Lancer at Large, 1936; The Confessions of a Thug, 1938 and European Jungle, 1939. In his Golden Horn he tells of an episode: “A grey-headed Turkish gendarme spurred his frightened horse up to me and held out his right hand. I grasped it in surprise and relief; and was still more amazed when I found that the grip he gave me was an ancient and honorable one, proving that even here in the desert, men are brothers. I climbed off my perch and put myself under his protection, thinking of a night in India when I had become Master of my Lodge. . . .”

Archibald Yell (1797–1847) Governor of Arkansas, 1840–44; U.S. Congressman to 24th–25th Congresses from Ark., 1836–39, and 29th Congress, 1845–46. b. in N. Car. He moved to Tenn. in his youth and settled in Bedford Co. He took part in the Creek Indian campaign and participated in the War of 1812, serving under General Jackson at the Battle of New Orleans. He then studied law and began practice at Fayetteville, Term. In 1832 President Jackson appointed him judge of the Territory of Arkansas (he had previously declined the governorship of Territory of Florida). He took up residence at Fayetteville, Ark. and served as judge until 1835. When Arkansas was admitted to the Union, he was one of the first congressmen from that state. He was probably initiated in Warren Lodge No. 19, Fayetteville, Tenn. He was first master of Shelbyville Lodge No. 49, Shelbyville, Tenn. in 1824 and was elected grand master of the Grand Lodge of Tennessee from the floor, in 1831. Duke of York (see George VI).

Dominique You (1775?–1830) Pirate and associate of Jean and Pierre Lafitte. b. in Haiti about 1775, and little is known of his early life. He is supposed to have followed the sea from early years; subsequently he served in the artillery corps during the wars of the French Republic, and in 1802 accompanied General Leclerc to Santo Domingo. Associating himself with the pirate brothers, Jean and Pierre Lafitte, he soon became their principal captain and was nicknamed “Captain Dominique.” He won a reputation for boldness and daring. When Venezuela declared her independence, Dominique procured letters of marque from the patriots, and did much damage to Spanish commerce in the Gulf of Mexico. In the following years he took part in the unlawful operations of the Lafittes in the bayous, and in July, 1814 a grand jury indicted him for piracy, but he could not be apprehended. When the English invaded Louisiana, he offered his services to the Americans and was appointed commander of an artillery company, which he formed from the best gunners of the pirate ships, and which performed such good service in the Battle of New Orleans that General Andrew Jackson, q.v., wished he had “fifty such guns on this line and 500 such devils at their butts.” Dominique became a good friend of Jackson, who mentioned him in an order dated Jan. 21, 1815. Following his pardon by President Monroe, he settled quietly in New Orleans, where he enjoyed great popularity as a politician. He was a member of Lodge La Concorde of New Orleans, according to a certificate dated June, 1811. His funeral was a notable affair, and persons of all racial, political, and religious affiliations attended. A lot in St. Louis Cemetery No. 2 (Catholic) was purchased by the Freemasons, who also ordered a tombstone with a Masonic emblem inscribed on it. d. in Nov., 1830.

Brigham Young (1801–1877) American Mormon leader who directed the settlement in Nauvoo, Ill. in 1838; succeeded Joseph Smith, q.v., as head of the Mormon Church in 1847 and superintended the mass migration of the Mormons to the Great Salt Lake Valley in Utah. b. June 1, 1801 in Whitingham, Vt. Was converted to Mormonism in 1831 by Samuel H. Smith, the prophet's brother. He was the first governor of Territory of Utah (1849–57). Although his Masonic membership has not been proved, there are several reasons why it is thought that he belonged to the Craft: apparently, all the leaders, as well as large numbers of the rank and file of the Mormon Church in the Nauvoo period, were members of Nauvoo Lodges, for when the cornerstone of the Masonic Temple at Nauvoo (which had been deposited there on June 24, 1843) was opened on June 24, 1854 by officials of the Mormon Church from Salt Lake City, a list of 50 Mormon–Masons who had signed a document as being present on the historic occasion in 1843, included the name of Brigham Young; in a booklet entitled The City of the Saints in Picture and Story, printed by the Deseret News in 1906, there is a picture of Young as governor of Utah, and shown in this picture in the center of his shirt front is the conventional Masonic emblem—the square and compasses; furthermore, in the History of Utah, written by Apostle Orson F. Whitney, it is stated, "A Masonic Temple was likewise projected at Nauvoo, and Joseph and Hyrum Smith, Brigham Young, and other leading Mormons became Freemasons." Some have claimed that Young was a member of Milnor Lodge No. 303, Victor, N.Y., but this lodge, which was warranted in 1818, sent membership returns regularly to the grand lodge until 1830, and Young's name is not among them. d. Aug. 29, 1877.

Claud F. Young Grand Secretary General, Ancient, Accepted Scottish Rite, Southern Jurisdiction from 1952. b. Nov. 19, 1887 in Bonnie, Texas. Reared on a Texas farm until his family moved into Bowie, Tex. He was employed as telegraph operator, cotton clerk, and cashier of a railroad before entering the U. of Texas to study medicine, receiving his M.D. degree in 1912. Served internship in K.C., Mo. Practiced medicine in Bowie, Tex. for three years and then entered into partnership at Fort Scott, Kans., forming the Newman-Young Clinic, of which he was chief of the surgical section, until elected grand secretary general in 1952, when he gave up his practice. He became a Mason in Bowie, Texas in 1910 while a medical student, and also joined the chapter and council in that city. At this time he also received the Scottish Rite degrees (SJ) in Galveston. Upon moving to Fort Scott, Kans., he transferred all his memberships to that city and became a member of the Commandery, Shrine, Red Cross of Constantine, White Shrine of Jerusalem, the Jesters, National Sojourners and Heroes of '76. Subsequently he served as grand master of the Grand Lodge of Kansas, and potentate of his Shrine temple. He received the 32° in 1911; honored with the KCCH in 1919;

33° in 1933; appointed AASR deputy in Kansas in 1938 and crowned active 33° member in 1939. Was appointed successively grand sword bearer, grand standard bearer, second grand equerry and grand master of ceremonies.

Denton True “Cy” Young (1867–1955) The “Grand Old Man of Baseball” and the first pitcher honored with membership in the Baseball Hall of Fame, Cooperstown, N.Y., 1937. b. March 29, 1867 in Gilmore, Ohio. He was the only pitcher in the first 100 years of baseball to win 500 games. Among his 511 victories were three no-hit-shut-outs, and on May 5, 1904, he pitched a perfect game with no batsman reaching first base. His pitching career was with the Cleveland National League team, 1890–98; St. Louis National team, 1899– 1900; Boston, American League, 1901–08; Cleveland, American League, 1909–11 and Boston, National League, 1911. In all his career he never received more than $2,500 a year. Raised in Mystic Tie Lodge No. 194, Uhrichsville, Ohio, Feb. 29, 1904; exalted in Cyrus Chapter No. 114, R.A.M., Nov. 12, 1904; greeted in Gebal Council No. 56, Dec. 27, 1904 and knighted in St. Bernard Commandery No. 71, K.T. on Feb. 1, 1905 (all of Uhrichsville). he moved to Berlin, where he was appointed general staff surgeon and chief of the medical corps of the Army. Here he joined the Lodge of the Three Globes and became an ardent disciple of the Rite of Strict Observance, in which he took the title of Eques a lapide nigro. As treasurer of the order, he refused to make an accounting, and was expelled. He then turned against the Rite of Strict Observance and denounced its theory of the Templar origin of Freemasonry. He turned to the Swedish Rite, and in 1766 established the Lodge Minerval at Potsdam, and in 1767 the Lodge of the Three Golden Keys at Berlin. By 1770 he had established 12 lodges of the system, and then formulated the "Grand Lodge of all the Freemasons of Germany." In 1774 he secured the protectorship of the King of Prussia for his grand lodge, which greatly extended its influence and growth, so that in 1778 it had 34 lodges from Austria to Russia. He was elected grand master in 1774, and held that office until his death. Sweden later withdrew its recognition and charged that he had organized his lodges under a spurious and unauthorized warrant. He was undismayed, and continued to preside over the grand lodge with unabated zeal and vigor until his death on June 6, 1782.

William Bainbridge (1774–1833) Commodore, U.S. Navy. b. May 7, 1774 in Princeton, N.J. He went to sea at the age of 16 and commanded a ship at 19. In the reorganization of the Navy in 1798, he was appointed a lieutenant. His vessel and crew, captured in the West Indies by a French cruiser in Sept. of that year, were released in Dec., and on his return home he was promoted to the command of a brig. In 1800 he was commissioned a captain, and in the ship Washington, he carried tribute from the U.S. to the Dey of Algiers. The latter treated him with insolence, and after a trip to Constantinople, Bainbridge returned and frightened the Dey into releasing all the Christian prisoners then in his possession. In 1801 he was sent again to the Mediterranean with the frigate Essex. Upon declaration of war against the U.S. by Tripoli in 1803, Bainbridge was put in command of the Philadelphia. In Oct. of that year his ship struck a rock near Tripoli and was captured. Later, Bainbridge, who had remained a prisoner for 19 months, was received with great respect on his return to the U.S. Becoming commodore, he assumed command, in Sept. 1812, of a squadron consisting of the flag ship Constitution, the Essex and the Hornet. In Dec. of that year he captured the British frigate Java off the coast of Brazil, and for this received the thanks of Congress and a gold medal. In 1815 he was the commander of a squadron of 20 ships. With it, he set out for Algiers, but peace was concluded before he reached the Mediterranean. He settled disputes with the Barbary States; again commanded in the Mediterranean from 1919–1921, and after that time served on shore. He was initiated in Lodge No. 51, Philadelphia, Pa. on June 14, 1810 “by dispensation.” d. July 28, 1833.

* Robert S. Barrett d. Feb. 24, 1959.

 John Barry There is some question as to whether the "John Barry" of Lodge No. 2, Philadelphia, is the Naval officer, Commodore Barry. William J. Paterson, librarian of the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania, states that a check of the signature of "John Barry" in the by-laws book of Lodge No. 2 does not compare with the signature of Commodore Barry in Appletons' Cyclopaedia. The only letter in Barry's signature in the Lodge No. 2 book that compares with Appletons' signature is the letter "a." However, the Pennsylvania Historical Society has a Barry letter signed in 1793 and it is identical with the Appletons' signature. The Society also has some earlier signatures of Barry that resemble the signature in the lodge book.

Duchess of Beaufort Wife of Henry, 5th Duke of Beaufort, who was grand master of the Grand Lodge of England from 1767–71. When her husband was master of Friendship Lodge No. 6 of London in 1767, the duchess was “unanimously elected” to the unusual office of Lady Patroness of the Lodge of Friendship. The lodge presented her with a pair of embroidered gloves, at a charge on the treasury of five guineas. The his-torian of Friendship Lodge intimates that this is the sole known instance of a lady serving as patroness of a lodge.

Eugene de Beauharnais (1781–1824) Viceroy of Italy and imperial prince of France; Duke of Leuchtenberg and Prince of Eichstatt. He served with Napoleon in Egypt in 1798–99 and was made viceroy of Italy in 1805. He was formally adopted by Napoleon and made heir apparent to the crown of Italy in 1806. On Dec. 17, 1811 he was elected scribe of the chapter. On Nov. 15, 1814 a committee was appointed to examine into the difficulty between Comp. B. Chandler and Comp. William Beaumont. On Feb. 22, 1815 this complaint by Beaumont against Chandler was withdrawn. Chandler was high priest at this time. This is interesting because Benjamin Chandler is the doctor under whom Beaumont studied medicine.

Timothy Bedel (1740–1787) Colonel in American Revolution. b. in Salem, N.H. about 1740. He served as a lieutenant in the French War and in July, 1775 was appointed captain of rangers. Promoted to colonel of the 1st N.H. regiment in Jan.,

1776, he was with Montgomery in the taking of St. John's on the Sorel and was in command of the forces at the Battle of the Cedars, near Montreal, when attacked by Brant's, q.v., Indians. The Continental forces surrendered without resistance by order of Capt. Butterfield, the subordinate officer in command during the absence of Bedel, who was ill at Lachine. Gen. Arnold, q.v., threw the blame on Bedel, who was deprived of his command, but subsequently reinstated. He was later major general of N.H. militia. It was at the Cedars where the life of McKinstry, q.v., was said to have been spared by Brant when he found McKinstry to be a Mason. Bedel was a member of Union Lodge No. 1, N.Y.

S. F. Bennett A physician of Richmond, Ill., who wrote the words for In the Sweet By and By. The music was written by Prof. J. P. Webster, a music teacher. Bennett told of the unusual circumstances under which it was composed: “Mr. Webster came into my office one day in a depressed and melancholy mood and I asked him what was the matter. He replied ‘No matter, it will be all right by and by.’ The idea of the hymn came like a flash of sunlight, and I replied ‘The sweet by and by! Why that would make a good hymn.’ ‘Maybe it would,’

said he with indifference. Turning to the desk I penned the lines as fast as I could write and handed the hymn to Webster. As he viewed it, his eyes kindled, and his whole demeanor changed. He began to write the notes. Taking his violin, he played the melody. In a few minutes he had the notes for four parts jotted down. It was not half an hour from the inception of my part to the close of his." The piece was first published in the Signet Ring in 1868, but has since been reproduced in numerous collections of vocal music, translated into foreign languages and sung throughout the world. Dr. Bennett was a member of Richmond Lodge No.113, Richmond, Ill. He died in 1894 and there is no more record of him in Illinois.

The poet Whittier immortalized his heroic deed in verse, of which the following are the last two stanzas: "Sail on, Three Bells, forever—In grateful memory sail! Ring on, Three Bells of rescue—Above the wave and gale! Type of the Love eternal—Repeat the Master's cry—As tossing through our darkness—The lights of God draw nigh!" The following is taken from the minutes of Jerusalem Chapter No. 8, N.Y.C., on March 22, 1854: "The degrees and membership of this chapter, having been conferred on Comp. Robert Crighton of the Three Bells in initiation as a token of his great service in the cause of humanity, and Comp. Alex. Frear having paid the fees demanded by the By-laws, it was on motion of Comp. Samuel C. Wsartz, resolved that the fees ($20) be refunded Comp. Alex. Frear, also the thanks of the chapter tendered to him for introducing Comp. Crighton to this chapter."

March 29, 1819 on a farm near Greenville, Greene Co., N.Y. Eight years later the family moved to Castleton, Vt., where he lived until he was 19, when he went to Michigan, worked for a year on an uncle's farm, and then worked for two years as a hotel clerk in the nearby town of Tecumseh. Returning to the East, he was a dry-goods clerk, first in New Haven, Conn. and later in N.Y.C. About 1845 he moved to Springfield, Mass., where he was an express agent for the Boston & Albany Railroad, and then returned to New Haven, where he became a conductor on the new New York & New Haven. Ill health required him to retire. He owned stock in the Pennsylvania Rock Oil Co. and the company hired him to visit its property on Oil Creek near Titusville, Pa. He secured a lease on the company's land and started drilling, hitting oil at 69 feet. He perfected the use of pipe as a casing, but failed to patent it. The money he had saved (about $16,000) was soon lost in oil speculation. He retired to Vermont in broken health and later lived, destitute, in Long Branch, N.J. The citizens of Titusville contributed to his support and the Pa. state legislature gave him a $1,500 annual grant. His original lodge is not known, but on Oct. 6, 1859, Oil Creek Lodge No. 303 of Titusville, elected him to affiliation. This is now Titusville Lodge No. 754. d. 1880, in Bethlehem, Pa.

Pierre Samuel DuPont de Nemours (1739–1817) French economist whose two sons founded the two branches of the DuPont family in America (see Victor Marie DuPont in Vol. I). b. Dec. 14, 1739 in Paris. When 23 he published two pamphlets on finances, which attracted the attention of the celebrated Quesnay. He then expounded the doctrines of Quesnay's school, "the physiocrats." Went to Poland in 1774 at the request of King Stanislaus-Augustus to organize a general system of national education. When Turgot became comptroller-general of French finances, DuPont was named inspector-general of commerce. When Turgot fell from favor, DuPont also was let out of the government. He was recalled by Vergennes to assist in negotiating with England the treaty to accord independence to the U.S. In 1789 he was a member of the States-General, but his reactionary views led to his imprisonment in 1792. Previous to this he had been hidden by the astronomer Lalande, q.v., in an observatory. Only the death of Robespierre in 1794 saved him from the guillotine. He renewed his attacks on the Jacobins and when they again gained power, DuPont was imprisoned again. In 1799 he emigrated to the U.S. with his family, and at Jefferson's request, started on a plan for national education in this country. He returned to France in 1802 and was instrumental in promoting the treaty of 1803, by which Louisiana was sold to the U.S. He was opposed to Napoleon, q.v., and refused to serve in his government. When Napoleon escaped from Elba in 1815, DuPont again rejoined his sons in America and died near Wilmington, Del. on Aug. 6, 1817. It recently has been brought to light through the Longwood Library, Kennett Square, Pa. that DuPont's ledger accounts show that he regularly made payments to Masonic organizations in France.

* Nathanael Greene His Savannah monument's cornerstone was laid with Masonic ceremony, making the most of the presence of Lafayette in that city. However it was dedicated to the "Saviour of the South" and not to a "brother." Obviously he did not wear any Masonic medal presented to him by Lafayette "throughout the Revolution" as Lafayette was not in this country until the middle of 1777. Historian James R. Case asks "And where were Lafayette and Greene associated —and when?" Greene and Washington were not the only general officers to serve "throughout the Revolution"; Putnam, Gates and Heath were others.

Thomas Grosvenor (1744–1825) Revolutionary patriot. b. in Pomfret, Conn. Graduate of Yale in 1765. Was a lieutenant under Putnam in 1775 and later a colonel. He was wounded at Bunker Hill and John Trumbull's painting, Death of General Warren at Bunker Hill, shows Grosvenor being helped off the field by his servant, Peter Salem. He was a lawyer, judge and state legislator. Made a Mason in American Union Lodge, Redding, Conn. and served as secretary and senior deacon.

In 1861 he assisted the state of N.Y. to equip 28 regiments for the field and with that completed, equipped one for himself, which he led as colonel. He was prominent at the taking of Port Royal; constructed the works on Tybee Island; was present at the capture of Fort Pulaski, Ga.; mentioned for gallantry at Pocotaligo and Olustee, Fla.; was present at capture of Morris Island; and cooperated with Sherman against Savannah and Charleston. For two years he was provost marshal general of the Dept. of the South. Was brevetted brigadier general of volunteers in Feb., 1865. Member of Kane Lodge No. 454, New York City.

T. Graham Hall Grand Sword Bearer, Supreme Council, 33° AASR

John H. Halliburton (SJ) and Sovereign Grand Inspector General in Tennessee. Received his 32° in 1908; KCCH in 1911; 33° in 1917; appointed deputy in Term. in 1946 and crowned active member in 1949. He was appointed to his present office in 1957. He is engaged in the general insurance business in Nashville.

John H. Halliburton Vice President of Eastern Airlines, Inc. in charge of flight operations since 1957. b. May 21, 1906 in Brownsville, Tenn. Graduate of U. of Tennessee in 1929. Began with Ford Motor Co. as an engineer in the flight test department of the airplane division in 1929. From 1930–31 he was a pilot for the Curtiss Flying Service. Has been with Eastern since 1931 as line captain, director of military training and operations manager. Received degrees in College Park Lodge No. 545, College Park, Ga. Presently a member of Coral Gables Lodge No. 260, Coral Gables, Fla. and master of same in 1942.

Joseph E. Hamblin (1828–1870) Union Major General (brevet) in Civil War. b. in Yarmouth, Mass. He was a member of the 7th N.Y. regiment many years prior to the Civil War.

At the outbreak of hostilities, he became adjutant of the 5th N.Y. regiment, and in Nov., 1861 transferred to the 65th N.Y. regiment. Participated in Grant's campaign of 1864 and then to the Shenandoah Valley to resist pressure on Washington and Maryland. Was severely wounded at Cedar Creek, and for this action was made brigadier general (brevet) and placed in command of a brigade. In the spring of 1865 he was promoted to full rank and participated in all subsequent engagements of the Army of the Potomac to the surrender at Appomattox. For bravery at Sailor's Creek (last engagement between North and South) he was brevetted major general and mustered out in Jan., 1866. Member of Kane Lodge No. 454, New York City. d. July 3, 1870.

John Francis Hamtramck (1756–1803) Colonel of American Revolution; military commander of Detroit. b. Aug. 16, 1756 in Quebec, Canada, the son of French refugees. He was baptised Jean Francois. Parents later settled just north of Lake Champlain in N.Y. In Sept. 1775 he joined General Montgomery's army marching on Montreal, and was appointed continental commissary. He was commissioned a lieutenant early in 1776, and on Nov. 21 captain of the 5th N.Y. continentals. Became a major Jan. 1, 1781; lieutenant colonel and commander of the first sub-legion under General Anthony Wayne on Feb. 18, 1793. When Detroit was occupied by the Americans under Article 2 of Jay's Treaty, Colonel Hamtramck was ordered to descend the Maumee River, and on July 13, assumed command of Detroit. On July 24, 1775 Dr. Peter Middleton, provincial deputy grand master of New York, issued a warrant to form St. John's Regimental Lodge No. 1.

From the diary of Ensign John Barr of the N.Y. Line on Feb. 3, 1780 we learn: "Our lodge (St. John's) formed at Captain Hamtramck's hut." This was while in camp near Morristown, N.J. St. John's Lodge is now settled at Clark's Town in N.Y. Later we find Hamtramck as a member of Union Lodge No. 1 (now Mt. Vernon No. 3 of Albany), having signed the register of that lodge as "No. 63," with no date shown. Hamtramck, Mich., a suburb of Detroit, was named in his honor, and it is interesting to note that as the largest Polish city in America, even today it does not possess a Masonic lodge because of its heavy Catholic population. d. April 11, 1803 and is buried at Mt. Elliott Cemetery in Detroit.

* Edward Hand Served as master of his lodge.

University in 1904. Was Medical Corps major in WWI. He joined all the Masonic bodies early in life, but after his term as governor expired he bought a hospital, and when the Shrine started to build its hospitals for crippled children, Dr. Hatfield thought it would hurt his business, so he dropped all Masonic affiliations.

Mark O. Hatfield Governor of Oregon from 1959. b. July 12, 1922 in Dallas, Oreg. Graduate of Willamette U. in 1943 and Stanford in 1948. Was resident assistant at Stanford U., 1947–49; instructor at Willamette U., 1949, and dean of students and associate professor of political science at the latter, 1950–56. Mason and Shriner. Member of the Scottish Rite in Salem, Oreg. He placed the name of Richard Nixon in nomination for the presidency at the Republican convention of 1960.

* Charles M. Hayes d. Oct. 16. 1957.

* Isaac I. Hayes This interesting information has been found on page 263 of Memoirs of Lodge No. 51, F. & A.M. of Philadelphia, Pa. “At our meeting on Nov. 28, 1861, Bro. Isaac I. Hayes, a physician, who was initiated on Feb. 24, 1859 (by dispensation, in Lodge No. 51, A.Y.M.) was present, having then recently returned from an Arctic expedition. The W.M. called upon Bro. Hayes, who thanked the brethren for their assistance rendered the undertaking at a critical moment. . . . He stated the fact of his having displayed his Masonic flag on land at a higher Northern latitude than had yet been greeted by the Compass and the Square, namely 81° 35’, etc.”

Rudolph Hess Nazi third deputy to Hitler, second only to Goering in line of succession to supreme power in German dictatorship. An anti–Mason. b. in 1894 in Alexandria, Egypt. Followed Hitler from 1921, becoming secretary and bodyguard to Hitler in 1925. He took down Mein Kampf from Hitler's dictation. He was designated by Hitler as head of the political section of the National Socialist party in 1932 and admitted into the newly formed cabinet council in 1934. He created a world sensation by a solo flight in 1941 to Scotland where he was held as a prisoner of war. In 1946 at the Nurnberg trials, he was convicted as a war criminal and sentenced to life imprisonment. Among the documents used by the prosecution in this trial was an article in the Voelkischer Beobachter, Aug. 28, 1939, reporting a speech by Hess at Graz on Aug. 26, which included the statement "Jews and Freemasons want a war against this hated Germany, against the Germany in which they have lost their power."

* Joseph Hewes Buried with Masonic honors.

* Miguel Hidalgo (see also Miguel Hidalgo y Costilla). Catholic priest and liberator of Mexico. Although it is claimed that he was a member of Arquitectura Moral Lodge, receiving his Entered Apprentice degree in 1808, there is no documentary evidence to support the belief. This lodge met at 5 Calle de las Ratat (today 7th and Bolivar) in Mexico City. It was a Scottish Rite lodge established in 1806. It is claimed that immediately after Hidalgo received the degree, all the papers and books of the lodge were destroyed.

* Matthew W. Hill Coroneted 33° on Dec. 8, 1945. Active in York Rite, Red Cross of Constantine.

Charles C. Hilton (1843–1905) Early day Chicago hotel

In 1792 he became charter master of Ontario Lodge No. 23, Canandaigua, N.Y., the oldest lodge in Ontario Co.

* Sam Houston There has been much misinformation on the religious status of this great Texas Freemason. To set the record straight, we quote from a letter written by his grandson, Temple H. Morrow, past high priest of Z. E. Coombes Chapter No. 421, R.A.M. of Dallas and 33° AASR (SJ). . . . “I am calling your attention to the last sentence in the biographical sketch concerning Sam Houston . . . this sentence reads: ‘Houston died a Roman Catholic.’ I have never been guilty of parading my relationship to the illustrious dead, but in order to identify myself I will state that my mother was the second child and oldest daughter of General and Mrs. Houston and I was named for the youngest member of the family. The facts concerning his church relationship are as follows. When Antonio Lopez de Santa Anna became president of Mexico, he immediately discarded the constitution of his country and assumed the role of a dictator. His unreasonable decrees and edicts worked untold hardship on the people of Texas, one of which was that no one would be allowed to become a citizen and land-owner unless he was a member of the Roman Catholic Church. General Houston was then living with his old friends, the Cherokees, in what is now Oklahoma. He decided to come to Texas and assist the patriots throw off the yoke of despotism, tyranny and oppression which Santa Anna had placed upon them. Arriving at Nacogdoches, he met an old friend, Adolphus Sterne, who told him of the edict which required every emigrant to be a member of the Catholic Church. Not to be thwarted in his intention to become a citizen of Texas, he told Mr. Sterne to get a priest and he would go through a short form ceremony necessary to become a member. This was done at the home of

Mr. Sterne and only took a few minutes. If General Houston ever entered a Catholic Church, I have never heard of it. Mrs. Houston was a devout member of the Baptist Church, and I have many letters she wrote him when he was serving in the U.S. senate, urging him to become a Christian. In the year 1854, while at his home in Independence, Texas, he attended a service in the Baptist Church, and at the invitation of the minister he came forward, knelt at the altar and arose to make his profession of faith. He was baptized by Rev. Rufus C. Burleson in Rocky Creek. He became an active member of that church, thereafter lived an exemplary Christian life and died in that faith.”

* William A. Hudson Elected Grand High Priest of the Grand Chapter, R.A.M. of Michigan in Oct., 1959.

Charles Inglis (1734–1816) First British Angelican Bishop in overseas empire. b. in 1734 in County Donegal, Ireland. Coming to America, he taught school in Lancaster, Pa. from 1754–58. He was ordained in England in 1758 and appointed missionary at Dover, Del. serving there from 1759–65. He became assistant minister and later rector of Trinity Church, N.Y.C., 1776–83. A devoted Royalist, he replied to Paine's Common Sense by pamphlet. Although Washington requested him to omit the prayer for the king and royal family, he refused to do so and after the Declaration of Independence, he closed his church and retired in Aug., 1776 to Flushing, L.I., which was then in the possession of the British. He followed the British Army to N.Y. and was chosen rector of Trinity Church in 1777. In 1781–82 he was chaplain of the 1st battalion of N.J. volunteers and at the evacuation in 1783 went to Halifax, N.S. He was consecrated the first bishop of Nova Scotia in England in 1787, with jurisdiction over the other North American provinces, and as such was the first colonial bishop of the Church of England. In 1767 King's College (now Columbia) conferred upon him the degree of M.A. and in 1770 he became one of the governors of the college. He addressed the Grand Lodge of New York on June 24, 1783 and on other occasions as well, appearing before the Grand Lodge in Nova Scotia. d. Feb. 24, 1816.

Leonard M. Jacobsen Radio sports announcer. b. Oct. 15, 1900 in Brooklyn, N.Y. He was an amateur and professional wrestler until 1947, engaging in 302 matches. Some matches were in the Hollywood Legion Stadium against such greats as Lord Lans Downe, Pat Magill, Duke Pettibrove, Billy Gribbs, etc. He is probably the best known sports announcer on the West coast. Mason, Knight Templar and Shriner.

Berryman Jennings (1807–1888) First school teacher in Iowa. b. in Kentucky. He moved to Ill. and in 1830 to Iowa, where he became the first school teacher in the first school-house north of the Missouri and between the Mississippi River and the Pacific Ocean. The dam at Keokuk, Ia. now covers the site of the original school. He became the first grand treasurer of the Grand Lodge of Calif. (1850) and first grand master of the Grand Lodge of Oregon. Was raised in Des Moines Lodge No. 1, Burlington, Ia. in 1845 and affiliated with Multnomah Lodge No. 84 (now 1), Oregon City, Oreg. He lived a short time in Calif. and became senior warden of New Jersey Lodge U.D. at Sacramento, in Dec., 1849. In April, 1850 he was a member of the convention that organized the Grand Lodge of California. He helped establish Willamette Lodge No. 2 of Oreg. and was a member of the convention called to form the Grand Lodge of Oregon. California's New Jersey Lodge was named Berryman and later Jennings No. 4 (now extinct).

David Jewett (1772–1842) American who was Admiral of the Fleet in Brazil. b. in 1772 in Montville, Conn. Studied law, but shipped out on a vessel bound for Spain and thereafter followed the sea. He spent two decades in the American naval or merchant service and at one time commanded the American 20-gun Trumbull. In 1822 he entered the employ of the United Provinces along the Rio Plata (now Argentine Republic) and was given command of a naval flotilla. His expedition to the Falkland Islands and beyond is still cited in support of Argentina's claims to Antarctica territory. In 1832 he transferred to the naval service of Brazil, which had recently become an independent country. He became general of the naval armada, or admiral of the fleet, and here built up the finest navy in South American waters. He remained there until his death at Rio de Janeiro in 1942. Brazil looked upon him as the Americans looked upon Lafayette. Jewett was instrumental in introducing the Ancient and Accepted Rite into Brazil about 1832. There were indications of Freemasonry of a sort before 1800, and as early as 1804 a short-lived Grand Orient of French origin was formed. It was revived in 1822 under Dom Pedro, but fell apart again. Jewett had been created a deputy grand inspector general in 1826 in N.Y. by the DeWitt Clinton-Cerneau Supreme Council, a dubious organization. In Brazil he was lieutenant grand commander, yielding the highest office to a native born Brazilian accredited from the Supreme Council of Belgium. Jewett made many trips to the U.S. and while visiting relatives in Conn., he was knighted in Washington Commandery, K.T. of New London on Oct. 18, 1826 at 6 a.m. On Nov. 3, 1826 he received the 33° in N.Y. He appears to have received his craft degrees in Wooster Lodge of Colchester, Conn. and Uriel Lodge No. 24 of Tolland, Conn., being raised Aug. 8, 1793 in the latter.

Lyndon B. Johnson U.S. Senator from Texas since 1949. b. Aug. 27, 1908 near Stonewall, Texas. He taught in the Houston public schools, 1930-32, and was then secretary to Congressman Richard M. He secured Federal funds for three major housing projects; started a church for the poor in a vacant store building and crusaded for a hospital for the poor. He persuaded Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt to make a special trip to Phoenix on behalf of the project, and in 1943 a 232-bed St. Monica's Hospital was built at the cost of more than $500,000. He served as superintendent of the hospital; was chairman of the Phoenix Housing Authority and secretary of the state Board of Health. The national Catholic press lauded him for his work among the poor and the minority groups of Negro and Mexican citizens. He eventually was called on the carpet by church authorities for spending too much time in secular activities and not enough in the spiritual welfare of his parish. He was ordered to resign and leave Phoenix. He refused and resigned as a member of the priesthood. Then followed a period of testing by fire—threats, anonymous letters and telephone calls. He survived and is now superintendent of a large hospital in Phoenix. He received his degrees in Sahuaro Lodge No. 45, Phoenix, April 1, April 24 and May 22, 1959.
